U. S. VETO IN COURT HINGES ON QUESTION OF MAJORITY RULE

All Rights of Nations Holding League Seats Offered by Experts.

FIFTH RESERVATION IS STILL AN ISSUE

Geneva, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—All rights enjoyed by nations holding seats in the council of the League of Nations in connection with requests for advisory opinions from the world court of justice will be extended to the United States if that country decides to adhere to the court.

Such was the decision tonight as the committee of fourteen of the world court delegate conference reached an agreement to accept all the American reservations as interpretative of the protocol.

This agreement will be submitted in the middle of next week to the plenary conference and if the committee's decision is ratified the United States will be informed that the nations signatory to the world court do not know whether requests for advisory opinions require an unanimous or a majority vote of the league council.

Individual Replies Favored.

The text of the fifth American reservation seems to indicate that the United States had proceeded on the theory that unanimity is required. The plenary conference will point out to the United States that in any event, whether unanimity or a majority vote is found to be the procedure, the United States will have the same rights as members of the league council.

This means that the conference would find itself unable to give practical satisfaction to the United States if it found that advisory opinions can be requested by a majority vote of the council because in that case an opinion could be asked of the court regardless of an American veto.

The committee of fourteen is agreed that nations should reply individually to the United States and also decided that to give constitutional effect to the acceptance of the American reservations, such acceptance should be embodied in a protocol.

Expert U. S. to Be Satisfied.

The present plan is that each State forward to Washington a draft of such a protocol identical in terms, and if this draft satisfies the United States a conference can be held later in which the protocol will be formally adopted.

It is apparent that if the draft of the protocol does not satisfy the United States, American adherence to the world court will be imperiled, but the delegates and the jurists here seem to think that the United States will be satisfied with the status of equality with the members of the league council.

The sum and substance of the decision of the committee of fourteen is that the signatories are willing to grant the United States all privileges held by members of the league council, but do not feel authorized to do more than that.

Comment Withheld Here.

Dispatches from Geneva saying that a subcommittee of the world court delegate conference has decided the fifth American reservation should be accepted in the sense that the United States be given all rights possessed by members of the council of the League of Nations attracted attention here yesterday, but comment generally is being withheld until there is fuller understanding of the reply which the conference will decide should be made to this government. Unofficial reports are that the reply will discuss the reservations at considerable length and will seek to put interpetations on phases of them.

The feeling here is that unless the reply on the world court reservations is such as not to open an exchange of discussions between Washington and other governments as to what the reservations mean, it will have an effect which will be unsatisfactory from the point of view of those who want the United States in the court. In this connection it is noted that according to cables David Hunter Miller, legal adviser to the American peace delegation, unofficially suggested to the committee that the American reserva-

President Arrives in City And Is Cheered at Station

Special, Running Leisurely at Mr. Coolidge's Request, Comes In at 10:57 p. m.—Met by Secretary Sanders. Executive Goes Directly to White House.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, attended by a corps of newspaper men and secret service men, arrived in Washington last night, and went directly to the White House, their vacation of three months in the Adirondacks brought to a close.

The President's special arrived at Union station at 10:57 o'clock, the appointed time. The train could have made the run from Jersey City, the last lap of the journey in faster time, but the President chose to make the trip more leisurely, it was reported.

President and Mrs. Coolidge were met at the station by Everett Sanders, secretary to the President. Mr. Sanders reached the station about 10 minutes before the arrival of the train, and went directly into the train shed.

A crowd began gathering at the gate through which the President and Mrs. Coolidge were to pass to the waiting automobiles about 30 minutes before the arrival of the train. Approximately 200 persons had gathered when the train arrived. As the President and Mrs. Coolidge passed through the concourse, the crowd of persons applauded them.

President Coolidge lifted his hat and smiled in response to the applause, and Mrs. Coolidge turned and smiled.

Mrs. Coolidge was dressed in a simple light brown coat and brown hat, just such an ensemble as might be chosen in a return trip from a vacation. The President wore a dark business suit. The fact that Mrs. Coolidge wore a coat reflected the cooler weather. However, the President wore no topcoat.

President Coolidge was slightly tanned, and looked robust and in the prime of health. The effects of his vacation in the mountains, and in fishing trips on the lakes, was clearly shown when he lifted his hat, the dim station light revealing in a better degree his coat of tan.

HALL CASE WITNESSES WARNED TO TELL TRUTH

Prosecutor Threatens That He Will Indict Gorsline and Mrs. Clark.

DELAYS TO "GIVE TIME"

Special to The Washington Post.

Somerville, N. J., Sept. 18.—Ralph V. Gorsline, Episcopal Church vestryman, and Mrs. Minna Clark, were warned again tonight by Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor in the Hall-Mills murder case, to "tell the truth" or face perjury indictments.

Miss Marion Stokes, pretty New Brunswick girl, quizzed at Somerville today by Inspector John J. Underwood, contradicted a statement of Mrs. Clark bearing on the love letters that passed between the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Simpson and Underwood hope to prove that Gorsline and Mrs. Clark spied for months before the murders upon their erring rector and the pretty choir singer and wife of the church sexton.

The April term grand jury of Somerset county, Simpson announced, will be held over to indict

21 AMERICANS STARVING IN WUCHANG, BESIEGED

BLOCKADE IS COMPLETE

Shanghai, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Starvation threatens 21 Americans and 5 Europeans hemmed in with the Chinese populace of Wuchang by the besieging armies of the Red Cantonese government.

Two weeks' bombardment and assault having failed to wrest the city from its northern army defenders, the Cantonese have completely blockaded it and settled down to starve it into submission.

Unless relief comes within one week, it is believed Wuchang must fall. There are two faint chances of relief. The first, and most possible, is that Marshal Sun Chuan Fang, ruler of eastern China, may be able to push troops past opposing Cantonese forces 150 miles down the Yangtze river from Wuchang. He has entered into an alliance with Wu Pei Fu, whose troops are the defenders of Wuchang.

The second remote chance is that Wu Pei Fu himself may bring aid. Forced out of Hankow, across the Yangtze, from Wuchang, Wu Pei Fu is receiving reinforcements at his headquarters 70 miles north, but he is faced by southern armies and may not be able to break through in time to save Wuchang, if at all.

Wu's reinforcements are said to be coming from his allies, Chang Tso-lin, dictator of Manchuria, and Chang Tsung-Chang, governor of Shantung province.

Wuchang is one of the largest cities of China. It has a population of 500,000 to 600,000 and is the capital of Hupeh province. It is located several hundred miles inland on the great Yangtse river. It is opposite another large city, Hankow, which was recently captured by the southerners. Possession of these two cities would be of immense value to an army because of their control of the Yangtse, and their importance as trade and industrial centers. Wuchang is a walled city.

U. S. Woman Kills 12 Bears in Arctic

Bergen, Norway, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Having killed 24 polar bears and captured five live cubs on a hunting expedition in Franz Josef land, Mrs. Louis A. Boyd, of San Francisco, and three companions have sailed for home by way of England.

Mrs. Boyd shot twelve of the bears herself. She chartered a vessel to take her party to the polar hunting fields where very unfavorable ice weather was encountered.

CALLES TO PROPOSE TRANSPORTING ARMY OVER AMERICAN SOIL

Will Request Permission to Send Mexican Troops Through Nogales.

CAN NOT REACH YAQUI OUTBREAK IN SONORA

Mexico City, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Federal forces have defeated and dispersed rebellious Yaquis in an engagement near Campamento del Oro in the Yaqui valley, Sonora, says a report from Gen. Francisco Manzo, the federal commander, given out tonight by President Calles' office. Both sides suffered heavily. Gen. Manzo's report asserted:

"Numerous Yaqui dead and wounded were left on the field of the encounter. The federal troops also suffered several casualties among their chiefs, officers and privates."

The report does not state the number of Yaquis or federals engaged.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Coolidge will be asked to permit federal Mexican troops to pass through United States territory at Nogales if the revolt of the Yaquis in Sonora continues to assume its present proportions. The Mexican government has convinced the American embassy at Mexico City of its good faith in attempting to punish the bandit murderers of Jacob Rosenthal, New York capitalist, and President Calles is now understood to be far less concerned over this regretable incident than over possible complications of the warfare which the Senora Yaquis are making against his administration.

It develops that the Yaquis, after defeating federal forces in control of Gen. Manzo, are reported to have held up Gen. Obregon and annihilated the general's bodyguard. There is some doubt as to whether they have made Obregon prisoner but all reports agree that the revolt has seriously affected Calles' authority in the province. And there is every indication that the revolt is spreading and that Yaquis in the federal forces are deserting in order to help the cause of their brethren.

Yaqui's Not Uncivilized.

Calles has available forces at Mexico City which he hopes to send to Senora but it is practically impossible to get these troops there without using the only railway communication, which passes through United States territory. The Sierras extension of the Rocky mountains cut Sonora off from Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Two firemen were killed, 4 injured, perhaps fatally, and a score of others were hurt when fighting a fire at the Friehofer bakeries, northeast Philadelphia tonight.

Those killed were Capt. Joseph Jones, and Fireman John Sykes, both of company No. 50. Charles Lindsay, Edmund O'Brain, James Miller, and James Keelan, all firemen, were seiously injured. The casualties occured when a wall of the building collapsed following the explosion of a boiler.

The victims were buried under tons of debris.

About Half of Voters Uphold Rivera Regime

Madrid, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Official figures were given out today on the results of the recent plebiscite to determine the popularity of the Primo de Rivera regime. The total population of the country is given as 21,289,842, of which 13,195,888 persons are over 18, the qualified voting age in the plebiscite. The number of votes cast was 6,989,043.

The above figures indicate that about half the eligible voters expressed approval of the Primo de Rivera government. The prime condition of the plebiscite was that all votes cast favored the government; disapproval was to be shown by remaining away from the polls.

CIGARETTE IV WINS PRESIDENT'S TROPHY IN SPEEDBOAT RACE

Horace, Entry of Dodge, Takes Second Place on Points.

MRS. CONNERS FIRST IN WOMEN'S CONTEST

75,000 Spectators Thrilled When George Wood Speeds at 61 Miles an Hour.

Moving through the water with the grace and speed of a storm-swept white cap, the Cigarette IV, owned and driven by L. Gordon Hamersley, of the Columbia Yacht club, yesterday won the President's cup, the coveted trophy of the regatta sponsored by the Corinthian Yacht club. The silver-coated boat of duraluminium was never endangered in any of the three heats of 15 miles each, and the first of which was run Friday.

The time for the two heats yesterday was 16 minutes 18.4 seconds, and 17 minutes 2.6 seconds.

Horace, the $60,000 walnut-hued boat of Horace Dodge, jr., of Detroit, and driven by Commodore F. C. Erickson, of Canada, won second place on points, with a second, third and fourth. Greenwich Polly, owned and driven by George H. Townsend, of the Indian Harbor Yacht club, was third, with 957 points. Miss Syndicate, another of the Dodge fleet, blue with a white stripe and driven by Dodge himself, after finishing second in the first two heats, developed propeller trouble in the second lap of the third heat and had to drop out.

Woman Captures Cup.

The Secretary of Navy's cup was won by Miss Okeechobee, owned by W. J. Conners, the Buffalo capitalist, and driven by his young brunette wife. The time for the 24-mile course was 27 minutes 22.8 seconds. Commodore Ericksen drove the Horace for second place and Greenwich Polly took third.

Aside from these two events the greatest competition came at the end of the program in the six-mile race between Mrs. Conners and Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell, the first time the two outstanding women pilots have ever met in a contest alone. Mrs. Conners won by 200 yards. Mrs. Cromwell had driven her brother's Miss Syndicate in the race.

The approximately 75,000 persons who watched the races from ashore and afloat probably received their greatest thrill in the high speed race called the international unlimited hydroplane race, but which lost its international aspect by the failure of the French boat Excelsior France, owned by T. A. Clarke, to appear.

Von Elm Conquers Jones To Win Amateur Golf Title

Los Angeles Star Stuns Links World by Defeat of Champion, 2 and 1, in Final Round of Tourney.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J., Sept. 18.—Bobby Jones is no longer the king of American amateur golf. He was dethroned today by George von Elm, of Los Angeles, 2 and 1, the hand-shaking scene being enacted on the thirty-fifth green at the end of one of the greatest battles ever seen upon a golf course.

On this crucial green, when Jones was 2 down, Von Elm's ball lay about 12 feet from the pin for a birdie 4. He putted and missed. Jones approached from 150 yards down the fairway, had left his ball only about 6 feet from the cup, and if he holed the putt for a 4 he could, at least, make a dying struggle on the last hole.

Around the green, as he stood with his putter in his hand, was a throng estimated at 15,000 people, all of them breathing heavily with sympathy for Jones, and all of them wishing to see the ball drop in the cup. If wishing could have sunk the putt it would have hit the tin and disappeared. But it swerved slightly to the side as it approached the hole and remained on the green. That was the end.

The defeat of Jones by a golfer whom he eliminated at Merion two years ago by the wide margin of 9 and 8, and at Oakmont last year in an almost equally decisive fashion came at the close of a wonderful exhibition of golf. It proved the truth of the old adage that a medalist in the qualification round can not hope to win, and it also showed that although Bobby Jones is strong, tradition is still stronger. For 30 years no holder of the championship for two years has succeeded in gaining the title for the third successive year. Jones, therefore, battled against odds when he went forth to meet Von Elm this morning.

Jones might have whistled history and tradition down the winds if he had played better golf. It seems so strange to talk of better golf when he played the entire 35 holes of the round in one stroke over par, but the fact is that Von

F. S. WALKER ELECTED TO ADVISORY COUNCIL

Successor to Dougherty Asserts He Will Specialize on Schools.

PLAN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Fred S. Walker, of the Park View Citizens association, was elected a member of the citizens advisory council last night. He succeeds Proctor L. Dougherty, who was obliged to resign from the council when named District commissioner.

The Federation of Citizens Associations, which created the council to advise the District commissioners and which elects its members, had to accept the resignation of Commissioner Dougherty first. Then it proceeded to elect his successor.

The federation voted to conduct a membership drive for all citizens associations from November 13 to November 20, and gave its sanction to the collection of a $400 fund to pay experts for making a valuation of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. The federation is fighting the efforts of the company to obtain a straight 10-cent fare.

Walker was elected on the second ballot, receiving 30 of the 49 votes cast. On the first ballot, he re-

BIGGEST LIQUOR DRIVE WILL BEGIN THIS WEEK

Gen. Andrews to Plan Crusade in Conference With 22 Dry Administrators.

WILL TAKE UP ZONE PLAN

The biggest drive yet to dry up the liquor wet spots in the United States, will be initiated this week when Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, prohibition enforcement head, confers with his 22 enforcement administrators now tackling the job in every nook and cranny in the country.

Out of the scheduled week's conference is expected to come the strategy for the intensive drive against the bootlegger, the smuggler and the diverter of industrial alcohol to illicit channels for wholesale purveyors. One of the chief topics to be discussed, is the advisability of dividing the country into zones under administrative heads superior to the present administrators, who would be in a position to cooperate more closely than the present system permits.

Gen. Andrews is understood to entertain a preference for the zon-

CHAMORRO INSISTS CONSERVATIVES RULE

Nicaraguan President to Quit if Assured Party Will Retain Power.

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 19 (By A. P.).—Gen. Chamorro, the de facto president, will resign if the proposed peace conference aboard the U. S. S. Tulsa at Corinto agrees to continue the conservatives in power, he told the newspaper men today. Otherwise, he will stay in office until the revolution is over.

"I have authorized the American charge d'affaires to invite delegates of the parties (liberal and conservative) to a conference," he said. "If they arrive at a satisfactory solution continuing the conservative administration, I will resign.

"If the conference is unsuccessful, I will continue in power until the termination of the revolution, then I will resign."

Right to Erect Signs At North Pole Is Sold

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Exclusive contract to erect signs at the north pole has been given to E. R. Davis, a Tacoma man representing a national advertising agency, by Lieut. Comdr. R. E. Byrd, naval aviator who conquered the pole.

The contract reads that the annual consideration shall be $1,000, payable immediately after the first signs are erected.

Legion Conclave to Face Move to Cancel Paris Trip

Opposition to Visit to France Will Develop at Philadelphia Meeting—Executive Committee May Be Given Specific Veto Powers.

Cancellation of the projected American Legion's pilgrimage to France, to commemorate the tenth anniversary of America's entrance into the world war, is to be seriously considered at the legion's annual meeting in Philadelphia next month. Arrangements probably will be made to clothe the national executive committee of the legion with specific power to veto the whole program any time prior to the projected departure of some 30,000 legionnaires, if that committee believes that circumstances warrant such action. Thus, the question of whether or not the trip will be made will be held in abeyance until next summer or spring.

Although a committee of the legion has been working on plans for the proposed Paris trip for two years or more, it still remains for the Philadelphia convention to vote on it. Four months ago it seemed that the convention would approve the Paris pilgrimage as a matter of course. Then came reports of attacks on American tourists in the French capital.

In the past week, two departments in the American Legion—Illinois and Iowa—have frowned on the proposed overseas trip. The legionnaires of Illinois, meeting in convention at Springfield, openly instructed their delegates to the Philadelphia convention to oppose the Paris proposal. The Iowa department adopted a resolution that was interpreted as disapproving the trip.

Notwithstanding the action of these departments and rumblings from others, legion officials in this city are confident that the Philadelphia convention will approve the idea of a "Second A. E. F."

National headquarters of the legion at Indianapolis, in an effort to head off threatened opposition to the proposed trip, has sent out several communications to the various departments. One of these was a cablegram sent to this country in the name of 2,000,000 French war veterans, promising the American veterans that they will be received with open arms if they go to Paris and deprecating the reported ill feeling toward Americans. Another was from Aristide Briand, former

ALL SHIPS IN HARBOR SUNK, MOBILE HEARS

Troops, Medical Supplies and Food Urgently Needed, Messages State.

TAMPA AND PALM BEACH SUFFER HEAVY DAMAGE

Structures Also Unroofed at Sarasota; Railroad Traffic Blocked for Week.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Seventy-five known dead, property loss of $100,000,000 in the city and every boat in the harbor sunk was the toll of the hurricane which struck Miami today according to fragmentary messages picked up by the Tropical Radio Telegraph Co. station here tonight.

The station is working with the American steamship Siboney, which has established communication with a makeshift transmitting plant at Hialeah.

Every vestige of the city dock system was swept away and 2,000 buildings ruined, said the messages, which added that troops, food and medical supplies are needed urgently.

City Reported in Ruins.

"Miami is in ruins after worst hurricane in history of country; 70 known dead. Property damage $100,000,000. More than 2,000 buildings destroyed, including bank building and Miami Tribune.

"City docks completely destroyed and all boats in harbor sunk, including steamship Nohab, formerly owned by former kaiser of Germany.

"Food, medical supplies and troops needed."

Miami Beach Damages.

Key West, Fla., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The devastating tropical storm which swept the south Florida coast this morning, has transformed Miami Beach and Miami into a desolated place, with streets inundated, buildings wrecked, light and power gone and untold property damage.

Word received here tonight from the devastated area said the entire city of Miami Beach is flooded with 3 feet of water. Many buildings were blown down by the 90-mile gale, which paralyzed all the light and power systems. Miami proper is believed to have suffered considerable damage also. The causeway connecting the two cities was covered by the inrushing waters during the storm.

Railroads were hard hit. A washout of the tracks at Jewfish, at the extreme southern end of the mainland, was reported and it was believed this will cause a long delay in the operation of trains.

Crew of Ship Rescued.

The radio station at Jupiter received a message relayed to the coast guard from the steamer Westerwald, relating the rescue of the crew of the schooner San Pierre Miquelon, which was said to be afire and sinking slowly. The position was given as latitude 25 north, longitude 73 degrees 37 minutes west. There was a 100-mile wind, the radio message stated.

The radio station at Hileah was silent.

At Key West the wind reached a velocity of 55 miles an hour, but no damage was done.

Damage Also at Tampa.

Tampa, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Several pedestrians were reported injured by flying glass and other debris when winds of gale force swept over Tampa early tonight, unroofing buildings and causing considerable damage. Street, telephone, telegraph and electric light services were crippled.

The wind forced out the tide in Tampa bay, leaving many boats high and dry along the shore. Traffic was suspended across the Manatee river bridge, which stopped communication between Tampa, Sarasota and Bradentown.

The Peninsular Telephone Co. reported that the storm hit Fort My-

...N BOARD STUDY ...AY ALTER VIEWS ...N SITE OF MARKET

...eports Forecast an Economic Survey of Factors Still Unconsidered.

COST CONSIDERATION LAGS, SAYS OFFICIAL

Criticizes Proposed Locations and Emphasis on Retail Trade Connection.

An economic study of the relocation of the farmers' market, embracing features other than merely what would constitute a desirable new site, may be undertaken by the committee of the National Capital park and planning commission, according to reports current in the District building yesterday.

As the time approaches for final consideration of the question by the commission, phases that have received little discussion have pressed for attention, and it is said District officials have suggested to Maj. Carey H. Brown the advisability of a complete survey, including costs, who will bear the financial burden, congestion of traffic and other factors.

"Too little consideration has been accorded the cost of acquiring land," a District head said. "It is all right to devote first attention to where an ideal location can be found. But there are other things to be thought of. If $2,000,000 must be spent acquiring land for a farmers' market, that will mean 20 cents more on the tax rate. The commissioners will have to consider that.

Criticized Mid-City Site.

"Consider, for example, the suggestion that the farmers be sent to the mid-city location. It is going to be hard to find enough space to accommodate them and their customers without buying land already occupied by buildings From a city planning standpoint is the razing of city buildings for a farmers' market permissible? May that not be a retrograde movement in municipal development?

"A square just west of Convention hall has been named as available without destroying buildings. But if enough space is to be taken there to make a desirable layout, it will have to close New York avenue for a block. Is that desirable?

"If the new quarters should be cramped so as to avoid that, it still would be necessary for numbers of cars to be parked in Fifth, Sixth and L streets and in New York avenue, all of which now bear heavy through traffic, including street cars. Has the director of traffic been asked for a report on the feasibility of that?

Commission Men Wait.

"Five years ago a group of farmers was driven from the vicinity of Convention hall to the farmers' market because it became undesirable to have them where they were. Now it is proposd to move them and many more back there.

"It is possible the connection of the farmers with retail trading and with Center market has been overemphasized. Their principal connection is with the commission houses and wholesale produce dealers, next with hotel, restaurant and boarding house buyers. By the time the householders descend on the market there is little left in the farmers' stalls to sell. And then, the principal retail sales are in large quantities to those who drive up in vehicles to take away their purchases.

"The commission men have to move out of where they now are. They are waiting to see where the farmers' market will be before they relocate. They will want to go where the farmers go. The farmers will want to go where they go. The commission men and wholesalers would like, I believe, to be near railroad facilities so they can have carload lot deliveries. They haven't that advantage now, near the farmerss' market, and they would not have it near the Convention hall proposed site."

Leader of Citizens' Group Prepares Mid-City Brief

A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid-City Citizens association, has prepared a brief setting forth advantages of the mid-city location for the farmers' market, for submission to the market subcommittee of the National Capital park and planning commission, the commission and the District commissioners.

He emphasizes that the mid-city site is nearest the center of population, easy of access and that it has the support of every citizens' association that has discussed a new site for the market. Its convenience for the farmers and truckmen also is emphasized. More than 500 truckmen have signed a petition favoring the mid-city site.

PENNY-MATCHING COSTS CAPITAL VISITOR $140

HOLDUP NETS TWO $60

One man was "flim-flammed," another was the victim of pickpockets, and several robberies were reported yesterday at police headquarters, where news of another holdup near Alexandria, Va., was also received. The police dragnet caught a second suspect in the four holdup cases in nearby Virginia early Friday.

Employing the "penny matching" game, two tricksters obtained $140 from Thomas Durkin, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Durkin told police that he met two men near the Union station and that in a stroll of five blocks the two had Durkin's money.

John L. Doniphan, of Alexandria, while attending an auction sale at 920 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was relieved of a billfold, containing $27. H. C. Aaton, of Potomac, Va., was held up and robbed of $60 by two colored men in Emerson's lane, Potomac. Alexandria police were notified.

John L. Bailey, 27 years old, 827 Emerson street northwest, was arrested by headquarters detectives and is being held as a suspect in the four holdups which occurred Friday between Triangle, Va., and Highway bridge. After an investigation police said John E. Histon, 24 years old, 801 K street northeast, arrested Friday in the same case, would be released.

Magee Will Address Ad Club on Sept. 28

Carl C. Magee, Albuquerque editor, will address the members of the Washington Advertising club on "Freedom of the Press," at their first meeting of the season at the City club, September 28. Magee addressed a meeting of the organization here last year.

Another feature of the meeting will be a concert by Meyer Davis' Swanee Syncopaters. The 12-piece orchestra has arranged a special program of music for the occasion. The meeting will be held in the ballroom of the City club, President Norman Kal presiding.

CIGARETTE IV WINS PRESIDENT'S TROPHY

It left Gar Wood and his brother to give the crowd a speed thrill. Moving up and down the river at a speed of 61 miles an hour, George Wood, in making the turn at the Highway bridge, swept wide and into the throng of yachts that were lined up. Coursing a frenzied streak through the startled craft, he brought his vessel to a stop about 100 yards from the pier of the Corinthian Yacht club, came back onto the course, and after Yankee Doodle dropped out, caught up with his brother to make it a neck and neck finish.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO START STUDIES WITHOUT RESPITE

INSTRUCTION WILL BEGIN ONE HOUR AFTER OPENING

High Schools Alone Will Have Extra Day for Registration and Assignments.

The army of children who will report for school at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning will find the classrooms more completely in readiness for their coming than ever before in the history of the local school system.

For the smaller youngsters there will be no delay. They will not have an extra day for registration as the high school students will. Study will be in full progress, according to Miss R. L. Hardy, assistant superintendent in charge of primary instruction, one hour after the children report.

This is because the teachers met this year on Friday instead of Saturday, and this gave them more time in which to prepare for the opening of school. During the last two days the teachers have been busy arranging the rooms.

The fact that the teachers assembled earlier this year has made possible more complete preparation everywhere. It was with this view that the board of education set the day for the meeting of the teachers on Friday. And to be sure the order would be observed, it ... stipulated that teachers who ... appear would lose the... the time absent, ... the regular ... lose the... ...mo...

all high school students will report at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning for work.

All pupils in the graded schools last year, except those promoted to high schools, will report to their last year rooms, from which those promoted will then be sent to higher classes.

Yom Kippur Services End Hebrew New Year

Yom Kippur, the day marking the close of the Hebrew New Year season, ended at sundown last night. A single blast to a trumpet sounded in all of the Washington synagogues at sundown, concluded the religious services that have been held daily since Rosh Hashannah, the New Year, ten days ago. Services marking the close of the holiday season began in the synagogues at 6 o'clock Friday night and were continued again yesterday.

Rabbi J. T. Loeb explained that Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, was the most significant day in the Hebrew year, it being set aside for solemn contemplation of the divine plan. Orthodox members of the faith on that day pray for divine guidance and reflect on how best to win the approbation of God and their fellow men. The day is observed with fasting, which was broken at sundown last night.

DUKE OF ORLEANS REFUSES HIS WIFE SHARE OF ESTATE

COUSIN GIVEN JEWELS OF MARIE ANTOINETTE

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—A clause cutting his wife off from all right in his estate is included in the will of the Duke of Orleans, pretender to the French throne, which was filed here for probate today. The royal exile is said to have left some £150,000 in property in England, where he spent much of his time.

After making many bequests, the duke's will provides that the residue of his estate—amount unspecified—go to Queen Marie Amelie of Portugal. Among the bequests is a life annuity of £6,000 to Mrs. Violet Jarrott, formerly Lady Rosslyn, and all his personal jewels likewise go to that lady.

The duke gave no indication in his will why he cut off his wife. The document merely says: "I direct that the Archduchess Maria Dorothea shall get nothing from my estate. I deprive her of all rights whatsoever, even of her legal usufruct."

Sea Burial Provided.

In his will the duke wrote: "I wish to be buried at Dreux, and I trust that the French government will make no objection to that wish in remembrance of what my family did for France."

To the city of Paris the duke left the sword of honor which had been presented to his father by that city. To the Paris museum he left his natural history collections and his armory and an annual income of 25,000 francs.

Paintings to Spanish King.

Bequests to royal personages included paintings to the King of Spain. To his cousin Jean, Duc de Guise, was left, among other things, the sapphires that formerly belonged to Marie Antoinette. To his butler, Harry Samsone, the duke left 40,000 francs, and he directed that his family papers be edited by Maurice Emery, of London, and Mrs. Jarrott.

The matrimonial troubles of the Duke of Orleans had been public for many years.

The archduchess has resided in Austria in recent years, following the separation in 1911, which was allegedly due to escapades by the duke.

FIGHT BY COOLIDGE IS HELD AS NEEDED TO CONTROL SENATE

Final Stage of Campaign Said to Demand Militant Administration.

GAINS BY DEMOCRATS ARE DECLARED CERTAIN

Working Majority by G. O. P. in Doubt; Progressive Chances Growing.

By NORMAN W. BAXTER.

The preliminary stages of this off-year election, concluded the last week in all States except New York, have brought out but one fact in bold relief, the fight that the administration must wage to retain what may pass for a working majority in the coming Senate.

Other issues, loudly heralded by their partisans, have not been cleared up by the action of the voters in primaries or conventions.

There have been successes registered in several instances by candidates with pronounced wet tendencies, and there have been reaffirmations of dry faith in other cases.

Candidates who made support of the world court an issue have won and those who opposed it in the Senate and on the stump have been successful in almost equal proportions.

Now that the party lines have been drawn the problem that faces the political leaders of both parties is the change to be made in the partisan complexion of the Senate.

34 Seats Contested.

Of the 34 seats which will be contested this year, 27 were occupied in the last Congress by Republicans and 7 by Democrats.

The Democrats can not lose many. The seven contests in the minority party are in the solid South, where the voters take their choice of Democrats with the same regularity that they do their meals.

The Republicans have 27 seats to retain and do not, in their own most optimistic moments, contend that they will be successful from beginning to end.

The maximum hope of the Republican leaders is that they will hold the Democratic inroads down to a gain of five seats, a circumstance which would give the Democrats 44 seats in the next Senate and the Republicans 51.

Such an outcome would be hailed as Republican victory and control, but only by grace of the absorption within the party of the progressive bloc, which would hold a much more powerful and advantageous position even than it does in the Congress now in being.

Claims of Rival Parties.

As matters stand today the rival parties can claim without fear of contradiction the following States:

The States in which claims conflict, and in which rival politicians contend there is doubt as to the outcome are Oregon, New York, Illinois, Colorado, Indiana (two seats), Maryland, Nevada, Arizona, Oklahoma, Kentucky, Missouri, Massachusetts and Ohio. Total, 14.

The Democrats, in moments of exuberance, have visions of taking sixteen seats from their Republican rivals. A party leader in checking over the list of contests said that the Democrats were sure of defeating Ernst, of Kentucky; Weller, of Maryland; Cameron, of Arizona; Oddie, of Nevada; Harreld, of Oklahoma; Williams, of Missouri, and Wadsworth, of New York.

He felt that there was a strong chance of defeating Butler, of Massachusetts; Smith, of Illinois; Waterman, of Colorado; Willis, of Ohio, and Watson and Robinson, of Indiana.

Hopeful for Democrats.

States where the Democrats were classed as having "hopes" in this diagnosis were Pennsylvania, Utah and California.

The Republican viewpoint, in contradiction to this, is that only in Maryland, Oklahoma, Arizona and Nevada are the Democratic chances at all bright and that Kentucky, Massachusetts, Missouri and Ohio afford a possibility for one more Democratic seat.

Political scouts and observers, who have been in touch with the situation in the various States, are inclined to take a mean between the two views as the correct one in November. According to their reports Maryland, Oklahoma, Arizona and Nevada will go Democratic, and the doubtful States must include Oregon, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Missouri, Ohio, New York, Illinois and Indiana, which throws a total of nine seats into the lap of the electorate to do with as it sees fit.

The possibility exists, therefore, even the Republicans acknowledge in their franker moments, that the present majority instead of ruling by sufferance of the progressive bloc may face either a deadlock in Democratic strength or be subjected to the will of a majority hostile to the administration.

Factors in Contest.

The factors that bring the nine seats enumerated above into the doubtful class may change, but first-hand reports indicate that at present the circumstances that muddy the political waters in these States are:

Oregon—The announcement of Senator Robert N. Stanfield that he intended to make an independent race against Frederick Steiwer, victor in the Republican primary, which will assist the effort of Bert E. Haney, former member of the Shipping Board, who is the Democratic nominee.

Kentucky—The fact that Kentucky never either Democratic or Republican by a large majority, has responded with considerable enthusiasm to the campaign of Representative Alben W. Barkley against Senator Richard P. Ernst as evidenced by the latter's appeal to the national administration for aid.

Massachusetts—The strength of the Catholic vote which has been alienated by the stand of the administration in Mexico's religious strife and is lining up so solidly behind former Senator Walsh, a Catholic. Walsh's wet stand has also given Senator William M. Butler trouble.

Wet Fight in Missouri.

Missouri—Another wet and dry fight with Representative Harry B. Hawes, the champion of modification, as opposed to the dry views of Senator George H. Williams.

Ohio—Also a State where prohibition is an issue. Atlee Pomerene, former senator, a wet, and Senator Frank B. Willis, a dry, are the candidates.

New York—Instead of wet and dry question it is a question which candidate is the wettest. The great personal popularity of Gov. Smith, who is expected to aid in carrying the Democratic ticket with him, and opposition from within the Republican party to Senator Wadsworth's demand for repeal of the eighteenth amendment give the Democrats reason to feel that Robert F. Wagner, supreme court justice, has a chance.

Illinois—The battle of prohibition again. George E. Brennan has the Democratic machine strength behind him and pronounced wet views. Frank L. Smith is not a dry, but more heavily involved in the slush fund revelations.

Indiana—A race for both Senate seats involved and befogged with local issues and klan support and extreme reluctance on the part of the Republicans to connect the campaign with the national administration. Evan Woollen is opposed to Senator Arthur Robinson for the short term and Albert Stump is fighting Senator James E. Watson for the long term.

POLITICAL CONCOMITANTS

Although the relative wetness of Gov. Al Smith and Senator James W. Wadsworth in the New York party struggle may appear to be only an academic question, the hair line difference which may be drawn between the Democratic and Republican standard bearers—although engaged in a struggle for different offices—looms larger in the minds of leaders here now than at any time since the political pot began boiling in New York State.

The apparently inspired announcement from Albany, where Gov. Smith yesterday yielded to his party advisers and again accepted the gubernatorial nomination, was that the Democratic platform plank on prohibition would be the same on which the governor ran two years ago, a call for the modification of the Volstead act.

Senator Wadsworth has tempered but not receded from his original position that the eighteenth amendment should be repealed.

The difference may be greater in words than it is in principle, but political strategists in Washington profess to see a difference, nevertheless.

The first reaction was manifested in Democratic quarters. The New York World—which long since changed the spelling of Democracy to S-m-i-t-h—with the apparent foreknowledge of what the Democratic chieftains in Albany planned to do, editorially urged Gov. Smith to make no effort to disguise or tone down his wetness.

Look to 1928 Campaign.

"Instead of dodging the issue he ought to seize it," was the keynote of the editorial warning.

The supposition advanced in Albany and echoed here was that Gov. Smith and his advisers were looking to 1928 on the prohibition question. The supporters of the New York governor are not pictured as having the desire to change the Smith viewpoint or appeal on prohibition, but are thought to be convinced that it may be better for the future not to do anything in this off year to strengthen the antagonism which the Smith candidacy already has aroused in dry sections in the South.

Despite the fact that Gov. Smith will not be Senator Wadsworth's opponent in the election, the positions of the two men on State and national issues will be sharply contrasted in the mind of the voters, members of both parties acknowledge, so that apparent anomaly of weighing a gubernatorial candidate in the scales against a senatorial aspirant is not as strange as it might seem.

Robert F. Wagner, supreme court justice, has been slated by the Democrats to oppose Wadsworth. The prediction in Democratic quarters in the Capital is that he will not be restricted as Smith may be in his views and utterances on prohibition, that he will match Wadsworth wetness from the stump, and that the latter may find it expedient to yield to up-State dry sentiment as actual hostilities begin.

Coolidge Backs Wadsworth.

Established facts, however, cast Smith and Wadsworth in the generals' roles for the coming battle between the two parties.

The Coolidge administration, speaking through Vice President Dawes and Ambassador Sheffield, has gone further for Wadsworth than any senatorial candidate.

New York Democrats, looking to the next presidential campaign, will center on Smith and the State ticket with such support as they can give Wagner without jeopardizing the major issue.

Rising above party in New York, politicians here feel confident, is the wet and dry issue. This one factor alone will be one which an overwhelming majority of voters in the State will weigh. The upper tier of counties is dry. It will father the candidacy against Wadsworth of Franklin W. Cristman, but New York city and the centers of population throughout the State are considered "dripping" wet.

Degree of Wetness Issue.

Republican leaders, even those who publicly disassociate themselves from controversial aspects of the prohibition fight, believe that here lies Wadsworth's strength, when added to administration support and the aid that the New York senator will get from the business interests, who are believed to be thoroughly satisfied with the service that he has given the State in the upper house.

Wetness is a major element in the political plans of both parties in New York but in the situation which confronts the voters there the degree of wetness may mark the turning point, and Senator Wadsworth enters the final stages of the campaign the most pronounced antiprohibitionist of them all.

Man Is Kentucky Problem.

Women in politics has been a problem with which political leaders have long wrestled, but "the man in politics" is the major problem in Kentucky with which both State and national Republicans are concerned.

The fate of Senator Richard P. Ernst, of Kentucky, Republican stalwart, depends upon the majority which he can bring out of the Eleventh and Tenth congressional districts, mountain and G. O. P. strongholds.

Mrs. John W. Langley is the Republican from the Tenth district to reclaim the seat her husband lost when he was sent to the Atlanta penitentiary for violation of the Federal prohibition laws.

The victory of Mrs. Langley in the primary is evidence of the fact John Langley's friends in the mountain district are many, and the advisors of Senator Ernst want the former representative's friends to be the senator's.

Langley's friends are willing to be, but, if they are to turn out the vote, they want a favor in return—the freedom of John Langley.

The difference in the district vote, if the Langley faction does nothing but confirm its primary choice, and if it really goes down the line for Ernst may be sufficiently great to mark the difference between victory and defeat.

That is the word, at least, which the Ernst machine has sent to Washington, together with the plan that the administration do what it can to liberate Langley.

National leaders do not relish the "buck" that has been passed to them, for there are possibilities of danger in freeing Langley. They want to retain the seat held by Senator Ernst. At the same time they are said to fear the effect executive clemency in so outstanding a prohibition case might have on the "dry" vote throughout the country and the campaign thunder that the Democrats could create from such action.

House Chieftains Fall.

Regardless of the other changes which may be made by the political tides between now and the Seventieth Congress, two of the minor chieftains in the House of Representatives already have fallen and their successors must be named.

Gone is Representative "Willi" Upshaw, of Georgia, most militant of all "drys" and vacant is place in the spotlight occupied Representative John Philip H of Maryland, most liquid of "wets."

Several capable understu suggest themselves for the l mantle. Representative Flo H. La Guardia, of New York passed through his novitiate b research work into the intoxic powers of malt extract and beer. Representative George en Tinkham, of Massachusett point to his demands for i ment of the Anti-Saloon leag asked for credentials, and Jam Gallivan, also of Massachu needs no other recommen than his record of bitter in against prohibition on the fl the House.

The place of Upshaw w harder to fill, not because of of "dry" representatives, b cause none can play the part "plumed knight of proh with quite the fervor which terized the rendition whi "Sunshine Evangelist" ga part.

Louis C. Cramton, of M is expected to be cast for t but Capitol observers whether he will read his did his predecessor.

HOOVER WILL DELIVER ADDRESSES FOR G. O. P.

Senate Campaign Committee Will Select the Places at Chicago.

AIR PROGRESS PLEASES

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, will make several addresses in the middle West this fall in behalf of Republican success at the November elections.

Stopping in Chicago today on his way to Washington from a combined business and vacation trip in the far West, Secretary Hoover said he had offered his services to the party, and officials of the Republican senate campaign committee said Hoover would be asked to discuss several issues before audiences in States to be selected.

Coming from Los Angeles, Mr. Hoover brought a brilliant picture of aircraft development in the far West, and declared that within six months several commercial air lines linking Denver or Cheyenne with Los Angeles and the Pacific northwest should be in full operation.

"We are making up a definite national policy on water," he commented. "Here in the middle West we are interested in transportation by water, from the great lakes to the sea, from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, and on the upper Mississippi and the Missouri. In the West the water problems are problems of flood control, irrigation, reclamation and use of water for power. They are being considered all together."

Fonda, Hoffmans and other points added their tribute in similar fashion and then the train stopped here for ten minutes to find hundreds eager to get a glimpse of the President. Republican leaders from the city of Albany, 15 miles away, and Schenectady and Albany counties were out with delegations to add their word of welcome.

County and city officials also were present to extend official greetings. Mrs. Coolidge received warmly two little girls from Albany, who, under the guidance of C. Edward Jones, superintendent of schools of that city, presented her the prize bouquets they won this week at the Albany flower show. The train left here to take the President down the Hudson river valley, with similar demonstrations in prospect as the afternoon wore away and the special approached New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The route took the President through a region rich in industrial and agricultural resources and one that because of the economic and scenic features he was eager to see. Constituting, as it does, one of the main traveled routes to the West and the route the proposed all-American canal to the Great Lakes would follow, it was inspected by him with closest attention. Ideal weather favored the trip throughout.

With the President and Mrs. Coolidge on the trip were Bruce Barton, the writer, of New York city, and Mrs. Barton, who were house guests on the final day at White Pine camp.

Dispute Is Expected On Submarine Wreck

A dispute is expected over the report of the Department of Commerce steamboat inspection service at Boston on the S-51 submarine disaster and the Navy Department may take issue. The naval board investigating the ramming of the submarine by the City of Rome steamship off Block Island, Long Island sound, last fall, placed the responsibility on the steamship, while the commerce report is said to divide the responsibility.

The report of the naval court has not been made public pending preparation of a case by the Department of Justice. Thirty-three lives were lost in the disaster.

Jinrickshas Banned For U. S. Diplomats

In a decision, rich with sarcasm, Comptroller General McCarl has put a stop to an old practice of American diplomats in the Orient—that of maintaining jinrickshas at their consular offices. The continuous retention of these man-drawn vehicles, he told the Secretary of State, can only be regarded as a personal convenience for the diplomats.

"Its mere novelty of structure and mode of propulsion," said McCarl, "no more justify its regular maintenance at public expense than would the keeping of a special gondola in Venice."

CREAGER INDORSES COOLIDGE FOR 1928

Texas G. O. P. Also Expects to Elect a Senator, Says Committeeman.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—President Coolidge will be supported for renomination in 1928 by the Republican party in Texas, R. B. Creager, Republican national committeeman from that State, declared today.

"Also in 1928, we expect to elect a Republican senator from Texas," Creager said. "The day of the single party system in Texas has gone."

Creager said he was "absolutely silent" on the subject of the Ku Klux Klan organization supporting for reelection Harry M. Wurzbach, of Guine, only Republican representative in Congress from Texas, who has been fighting the Klan in the party.

EVANGELIST'S NAME LINKED WITH RADIO MAN'S BY LAWYE

Ormiston's Counsel, in Ple for Immunity, Makes Direct Charges.

PUBLIC IS ENTITLED TO FACTS, HE HOLD

Mrs. McPherson to Be Pu Under Arrest Monday if Health Permits.

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 18 (B A. P.).—Direct charges linking th names of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, and her former radio operator, Kenneth G. Ormiston, were made here today by S. Hahn, attorney, in demanding immunity for Ormiston if he comes forward with the facts in connection with the evangelist's recent mysterious disappearance.

Hahn declared that actions between herself (Mrs. McPherson) and Ormiston take it out of the class of private delinquency.

The attorney gave out a statement apparently containing an admission that Ormiston was ready to testify that the evangelist occupied the cottage at Carmel-by-the-Sea which Ormiston rented a few days before her disappearance and which has figured so much in the case.

The public, Hahn asserted, was entitled to know the truth concerning the activities of the evangelist and the radio operator while the two were away from Los Angeles for more than a month early this summer. "It is my opinion that immunity should be granted to Ormiston and I will surrender him," the attorney said.

Says Public Should Know.

"My opinion is that the public is entitled to be acquainted with the facts concerning Mrs. MacPherson and Mr. Ormiston's activities during the period of their absence and from the time they left Carmel-by-the-Sea, until the time Mrs. MacPherson reappeared at Douglas, Ariz.

"By virtue of the fact that Mrs. MacPherson poses as a religious leader in the community, as a pretended guardian of chastity and a campaigner against sin, the actions between herself and Ormiston take it out of the class of private delinquency."

Hahn's statement was made after it was reported at the district attorney's office that Ormiston had "ducked from sight." In filing criminal charges against Ormiston yesterday, along with similar charges against Mrs. MacPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and others, District Attorney Asa Keyes declared no promises of immunity would be made to the radio operator.

Charges By the State.

The district attorney's office alleges Mrs. McPherson was the mysterious begoggled woman whom Ormiston brought to the Carmel cottage at 3 o'clock in the morning, thirteen hours after the evangelist disappeared from the beach near here, May 18. The woman is known to have spent ten days in the cottage and it was alleged attempts by Mrs. McPherson to produce a "Miss X" as the occupant of the cottage, that resulted in charges against her of manufacturing false evidence.

The evangelist denies she was at Carmel. Hahn did not reveal what Ormiston may claim to know about Mrs. McPherson's activities over the entire period of her disappearance, ending with her arrival at Douglas, Ariz., with a story of having been kidnaped.

At San Francisco today Ormiston's mother publicly called upon her son to surrender and tell the truth concerning the case.

Mrs. McPherson will be arrested Monday on charges of criminal conspiracy and preparing false evidence, if she continues to improve physically.

The warrant is to be served as soon as the evangelist is pronounced well enough to make the trip to the municipal court. Her mother and doctor said today the evangelist probably will conduct services tomorrow night in the Angelus temple.

Declaring that his client, Mrs. Lorraine Sielaff-Wiseman, self-confessed imposter in the McPherson case, was entitled to the same consideration as Mrs. McPherson herself, Attorney Hahn won a victory in court when he succeeded in getting the time of Mrs. Sielaff-Wiseman's preliminary hearing changed from today to September 27. That is the date set for the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

Mrs. McPherson last night issued a statement declaring she "had been pursued like an animal," and that she was a victim of persecution. Appealing to the public to take an impartial attitude, she compared the three investigations of the ease to a hunt "with the hounds and their dripping jaws now closing on their prey."

Persecution Denied.

Today official cognizance of the statements of Mrs. McPherson was taken by District Attorney Asa Keyes. He issued the following statement:

"Mrs. McPherson is not and never has been made a victim of persecution insofar as the law enforcement agencies of this city and county are concerned. Every act of my office concerning her kidnaping story was weighed carefully and thoughtfully. We went over every shred of evidence before issuing complaints against Mrs. McPherson and her mother in order that we would not be guilty of hasty and ill-considered conclusions.

"Mrs. McPherson returned home after a month's absence with a story that she was kidnaped and held a prisoner in a shack by a Steve and Rose we now know to be purely mythical. She never brought forward an iota of evidence to back her astounding charges but went instead to the county grand jury and attempted to make that body a plaything by asking indictments for kidnapers that did not exist.

"This office has its duty to perform and must do it regardless of who is hurt. I am sorry for Mrs. McPherson, but that can not influence my sworn duty."

"Bread-Water" Judge To Try the Same Diet

Hartington, Nebr., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—County Judge W. F. Bryant, 75-year-old foe of liquor-law violators in Cedar county, will begin a self-imposed five-day diet on bread and water next Monday morning to "determine once and for all if such a diet is cruel and inhuman," he said today.

Judge Bryant, on the bench for fourteen years, says he has been imposing bread and water sentences on bootleggers all that time.

Judge Bryant advocates the whipping post to "annihilate bootleggers." County Physician H. W. Benson today announced that a physical examination of Thomas Nelson, 50-year-old Craig farmer, liquor-law violator, had revealed that he would not be harmed by twenty-day stretches in Burt county jail on a diet of bread and water.

WORLD-WIDE SESSION FOR NEXT YEAR ASKED

Geneva, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Declaring that this is the psychological moment for hastening the disarmament conference of the league of nations, Paul Boncour of France introduced a resolution before the assembly's disarmament commission this evening urging that all preparatory studies be ended if possible this year or early next year to allow of a general world wide conference before the next meeting of the assembly of the league of nations.

M. Boncour urged that such a conference should declare an armament holiday for a certain period of years, the scale of disarmament to be based on the preent state of preparedness in the various nations. After the expiration of such a truce, he said, the subject of disarmament could be re-examined.

Great Progress Made.

The French spokesman admitted that great progress had been made during the year toward giving nations a sense of security through the adoption of the Locarno pact and various regional treaties of amity and arbitration, but he insisted there is much to be done to make all nations assured of their security before a really drastic general disarmament plan could be adopted.

Replying to the Norwegian plea for outlawing specific implements of warfare such as submarines and tanks, M. Boncour said:

"Why is a submarine obnoxious and a battleship not? The battleship has no peacetime use."

The French spokesman saw no feasible check on chemical warfare because useful peacetime factories could be changed overnight to produce lethal gases for wars.

"The disarmament conference would be useful if it convenes in time, but useless if it meets too late," declared Louis de Brouckers, of Belgium, supporting the French argument.

Preparatory Work Ending.

The assembly's disarmament committee today was told by Jonkheer Loudon of the preparatory disarmament commission that the commission would meet again in December or February to put the final touches on preparations for a general conference.

The military, naval and aerial experts, including representatives of the United States who are collaborating with the preparatory commission, are due to resume work September 27, when the assembly concludes its sessions.

The council's second subcommittee to which all matters are referred dealing with the plans for a disarmament conference, decided on the suggestion of the French members to question the secretary-general of the League of Nations regarding the possible speed with which the council could be summoned in case of war or a threat of war.

There is in mind closer communication of member states with the league secretariat and methods will be canvassed whereby the council may most speedily bring into play the, economic and financial penalties destined to be inflicted upon aggressor states.

Polish Flier Lost in Manchuria.

Tokyo, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The Polish aviator, Orlinsky, flying from Tokyo to Warsaw, is reported missing in Manchuria. He took to the air at Pingyank, Korea, on September 15 and was last seen near the Yalu river, Manchuria. The Polish legation has requested aid from the Japanese military aviators.

Maneuvers Show Army Must Rely on Infantry

Aldershot, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Predictions that the next war will be almost entirely in the air were not borne out by the recent British army maneuvers in Hampshire.

The effectiveness of infantry above all other arms was proved to the satisfaction of most military experts.

Rain and fogs upset the plans of the air force in the recent maneuvers, as they often do in real warfare, and the infantry had to carry on while the fliers waited for conditions which would enable they to destroy the enemy.

Many problems arose which showed the necessity for more effective means of using infantry. Experts are suggesting small tanks, which can be operated by two men, to lead larger tanks into action.

COURT VETO HINGES ON MAJORITY RULE

tions be accepted without condition for five years. After that if they were found impracticable, negotiations could be opened.

For Discussion by Senate.

The administration, it is understood here, will not be inclined to give an interpretation as to whether the Senate reservations mean this or that. It recognizes reservations were put on by the Senate and for the executive or Secretary of State to advise foreign governments they meant this or that or were subject to this understanding or that, would probably stir up trouble among senators opposed to entering the court. It has been the hope of court supporters here that the reservations would be accepted unconditionally in order that no controversy would be aroused at this end over interpretations and understandings. Undoubtedly, there is a feeling here that anything short of unconditional acceptance of the reservations encourage those senators who desire to reopen the world court fight the coming winter. In fact, as it now appears, the reply will not provide for unconditional acceptance, and it is expected the Senate will take it up and discuss it regardless of whether the President lays it before that body for consideration or otherwise.

4 Shot by Farmers After Melon Thieves

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—A 7-month-old baby died in a hospital today, her mother's arm is torn by a load of buckshot and two men are suffering slighter wounds as the result of a gun attack last night by two farmers, who mistook an automobile party for watermelon thieves.

The party stopped on a road beside the farm of Oscar and Morgan Swann when trouble with headlights developed. The farmers opened fire with shotguns.

The Swan brothers were arrested on a charge of malicious shooting.

Canadian Prophets Picking New Cabinet

Ottawa, Ontario, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The liberal cabinet, to be announced next week, is expected to include Lucien Cannon as postmaster general.

James Malcolm probably will take the portfolio of commerce and J. C. Elliott the department of labor. There will likely be more than two ministers from Ontario. Robert Forke may take over the department of agriculture. Effort is being made to secure Col. J. L. Ralston, who was defeated in Halifax, for some cabinet post, probably defense.

GERMANS SEEK TO END POLITICAL CONTROL

Would Substitute Friendly Partnership for Status Now Existing.

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The French people and press begin to see prospects of an "entente cordiale" between France and Germany as a result of the conversations between Foreign Minister Stresemann and M. Briand during the latter's visit to Geneva.

The French minister of foreign affairs, who returned from Switzerland this morning, refuses to go into details concerning the negotiations on the ground that this would be likely to give rise to harmful press polemics on Franco-German relations during the tentative negotiations. He declares positively, however, that an entente is possible.

French Press Divided.

The newspapers are acutely interested and much divided as to the possible outcome. The moderate Le Temps declares.it is by all means desirable to find a basis on which the two countries can live side by side in absolute tranquillity, but it advises prudence in the negotiations until it is proved that this is what is really wanted on the other side of the Rhine.

The conservative, Catholic and royalist organs are skeptical as to the benefits France can derive from an entente with Germany and express the opinion that the French cabinet is being duped by the German government, which seeks only to use the Locarno pact to destroy the Versailles treaty and obtain the evacuation of the Rhineland and the Sarre valley.

Full Freedom Asked.

Geneva, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—That the Franco-German accord planned by Foreign Ministers Briand and Streseman will be fundamentally of an economic nature was confirmed today to the Associated Press by a German spokesman.

Both France and Germany, he said, desire to transform the existing system of pledges growing out of the treaty of Versailles into a friendly partnership whereby they would combine their interests. The spokesman added that continued occupation of German soil by French troops could only prove a continued source of friction, and that the Germans have the same consuming desire to get the French troops out of Germany as the French had to get the Germans out of their territory after the war of 1870. The Germans are convinced that a lasting Franco-German accord can only be based on complete mutual confidence which means wiping out all political hold on Germany, whether in the form of military occupation or the right of supervision over German armaments.

Will Not Touch Debt.

M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann have, therefore, as the German spokesman put it today, "conceived their big idea of substituting solidarity of interests for a situation which is based on distrust and apprehension."

He declared emphatically that the new agreement, which may be global, or take the form of a series of accords, will concern only Franco-German relations and will not touch upon such questions as interallied debts. Presumably, however, a new conception will be given the Dawes plan, which is regarded as carrying out the reparation feature of the Versailles treaty.

Another political development which is hailed as an indication that Europe is moving rapidly toward generalization of the Locarno idea was the solemn signing today of a treaty of amity and arbitration by M. Zaleski and Dr. Ninchitch on behalf of Poland and Jugoslavia.

SCIENCE OF DYING IS URGED AS STUDY BY CAPITAL DOCTOR

Knowledge Wanted to Dissipate Fears of Death and Make It Easier.

INFORMATION IS MEAGER OF FINAL HOURS OF LIFE

Physicians Asked to Make and Report Their Observations in Different Cases.

While the majority of sciences concern matters of living, Dr. Arthur MacDonald, of the Congressional apartments, 100 East Capitol street, is conducting researches with a view to knowing more of dying, in order that a science may be constructed from the knowledge which will make dying easier and which will rob death of fear by the substitution of knowledge.

Dr. MacDonald has just had published in the Lancet, the leading British medical journal, an article in which he makes a plea for systematic study along this line for the purpose not only of dissipating the terrors of death, but of learning its peculiarities in different cases and of lessening its agonies with a scientific preparation for the dying time, and treatment of the patient during this time.

No Systematic Inquiry.

Commenting on Dr. MacDonald's article, the Lancet says in part:

"It is doubtful if there ever has been any systematic investigation into the events surrounding the act of dying. Much medical literature is devoted to processes of dissolution and means of postponing it. Yet from the scientific point of view there is little information available about the final hours of life.

"The cogency of some of Dr. MacDonald's arguments must be admitted. It is by no means impossible that the study he suggests might lead to a further wider knowledge which would ease the final hours of those who retain consciousness to the last."

The desired knowledge, Dr. MacDonald said last night, must be accumulated from actual observations made in cases of death. He would like to have from physicians the results of their observations, he said, and is willing to give the physician due credit when he has gathered enough data to justify publication.

Fear Seen Dissipated.

If death were understood, Dr. MacDonald believes, the fear of it would cease. The superstitious horrors surrounding death, he declares, are the natural result of nothing being known about an event of so great moment in human life. He cites the testimony of a drowning man—who was brought back to life—that he "felt as if he were passing into a sleep brought on by fatigue" as an indication that there is no justification for the torments of the mind. The torments of pain, he said, can be prepared for.

The worst death is the fear of it, the ancients said. Still another ancient wittily said that the dying man's picture of the burial ceremony is by far the greatest agony. The dying time can be made "easy, gentle and placid" if proper provisions are made and precautions observed, Dr. MacDonald declares.

Dr. MacDonald declares he would like to learn the percentage of those conscious and unconscious in different diseases, in what per cent of cases there is severe pain, slight pain or no pain, and the nature of the pain, to determine the differing characteristics in different ages and, in fact, to gather all possible knowledge concerning the act of dying under all circumstances. At present, he said, almost nothing is known; only theories are current.

BISHOP OF LONDON, ON AMERICAN TOUR, WILL VISIT CAPITAL

Rt. Rev. A. F. W. Ingram Most Picturesque Prelate of British Church.

STAYED IN WHITE HOUSE AS ROOSEVELT'S GUEST

Will Attend Great Service at the National Cathedral in October.

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington Ingram, lord bishop of London, the most picturesque prelate of the Church of England, will visit Washington in his tour of Canada and the United States and will be at a great service in the National cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul here the latter part of October.

At the service of the lord bishop of London will place a brick taken from the historic church on Jamestown island into the cathedral fabric in witness to the continuity of the church in the United States from pioneer times to the present, and because the Jamestown church was chartered as a cathedral church and therefore was the first American cathedral of the Anglican communion.

Bishop Ingram came to America in 1907, when he was the guest of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States at the triennial convention in Richmond, Va. He preached on the tercentenary of the establishment of the Church of England in America at an open air service held on Jamestown island and in Washington at the foundation stone service of the National cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, September 29, 1907. With President Roosevelt, he was one of the speakers of the occasion.

Was Roosevelt's Guest.

During part of his stay in Washington the lord bishop was a guest of President Roosevelt at the White House. President Roosevelt was charmed with the churchman and often paid him tribute.

Bishop Ingram, on his last visit, presented to the Washington cathedral the Canterbury pulpit, made of stone from Canterbury cathedral.

There is no man more beloved in the Church of England than the bishop of London. A few of the titles given him are "The Breezy Bishop," "The Bishop of the Slums," "The Men's Bishop," "The Poor Man's Bishop" and "The Omnibus Bishop."

includes the king and the royal family.

It not only is in Whitechapel and the London slums that the bishop is beloved. He retains his popularity in Belgravia and Mayfair, and one of England's great men once said Bishop Ingram was the only man he ever knew who could talk about the grace of God in mixed company without making his auditors feel ill at ease.

Popular in England.

The Lord Bishop of London got the notification of his appointment to the office while on his way to a workingmen's meeting in the East End, it is said, and read it on top of a bus. His first exclamation is said to have been:

"Will I have to live in Fulham palace? I wonder can't I rent out the palace and stay on in Amen court."

The bishop is now 68 years old and is nearly 6 feet tall. He keeps himself in condition by daily cycling, football and tennis. At Oxford, where he completed his course after Eton, he rowed on the college eight. His nickname there was "Chuckles," won by reason of his good humor.

He wears the dress of English bishops, knee breeches and gaiters being features of the clerical garb. Doctrinal questions are the least of his worries, he says.

VOLCANIC STEAM USED FOR GENERATING POWER

Prince Ginori Conti Explains Italian System to Union of Chemists Meeting.

BORIC ACID IS RECOVERED

Utilization of volcanic steam for generating power in Tuscany, Italy, was described by Prince Ginori Conti, senator and president of the Italian Society of General Industrial Chemistry, speaking Monday at the opening session of the convention of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry in the National Academy of Science building.

Prince Conti gave the gathering of eminent chemists from fourteen foreign nations the results of his geophysical study of the Soffioni district in Tuscany where the steam emitted from the bowels of the earth is used commercially. The volcanic phenomenon known by the name of "Soffioni" belongs to the same family as the geysers of North America, the only difference being that Soffioni emits only steam, while the geysers emit steam and water alternately. The temperature of the steam emitted by the Soffioni reaches 200 degrees centigrade and a pressure of from 4 to 14 atmospheres, the latter being 196 pounds per square inch. The steam comes from a subterranean reservoir estimated by Prince Conti to be from 1,500 to 2,000 meters beneath the surface of the earth.

With a well drilled to a depth of 750 feet, Prince Conti said he was able to feed his turbines with natural steam without using any intermediate apparatus or condenser.

Boric acid is a by-product extracted from the live steam. The Tuscan boric industry started from these wells dates back as far as 1818. Helium is another by-product obtained from these steam wells, but the amount of that gas is diminishing, Prince Conti said. Other gases that accompany the steam emission from the earth are nitrogen, argon, hydrogen, oxygen, sulphuretted hydrogen and carbon dioxide.

Guinea Pig Shortage Offers Farmers Way to Wealth

Pets Scarce as Hen's Teeth, So Dealer, Frowning on Importation, Suggests Tillers Raise Them to Offset Laboratory Inroads.

The guinea pig situation among dealers in pets has grown acute, owing to a shortage in these pets which now has continued for more than a year, Edward S. Schmid, who keeps a pet emporium at 712 Twelfth street northwest, declared yesterday.

It almost is impossible, Mr. Schmid declared, to obtain guinea pigs, much less to supply the demand, which seems to be increasing in proportion to the scarcity of the animals. Mr. Schmid declared he is contemplating importing pigs from Germany and England in order to accommodate his customers.

This would incur an expense, however, far greater than the cost of raising them locally. Therefore, Mr. Schmid said, there is no reason for this unnecessary expense.

He recommends instead, that the farmers in Maryland and Virginia take advantage of the shortage and the demand. The farmer's wife, he says, can make pin money, and even Christmas money, by raising the pigs. Every farmer easily will have a wastage of hay, carrots, cabbage, and the like, sufficient to turn into a great number of guinea pigs, and likewise into dollars.

Guinea pigs are very prolific, so much so, in fact, that a pair may increase to 30 in a year's time. The female pig will bear five litters in a year, ranging in numbers from three to seven. Since the pigs may be sold from 50 cents to a dollar each, a profit is assured. How[illegible] Mr. Schmid recommends [illegible] ture mostly to farm[illegible] have a wastage of [illegible] there is no reason why a [illegible] could not be successful provided he has [illegible]

Naturally, the mystery is, where [illegible] comes from originally. There is just [illegible] course that great numbers of [illegible] animals are used in laboratories [illegible] for experiments. Is it possible [illegible] has increased to such an extent as to influence on their availability for sale?

Apparently there is no other reason. Mr. Schmid points out that during the war almost was impossible to obtain them. Millions were used for experimental and other purposes in wartime. The shortage now is becoming as great as it was then.

Mr. Schmid for many years has obtained his guinea pigs from Pennsylvania. There they have been raised extensively. But the supply is stopped now. No reason can be assigned. The question is, where are the Pennsylvania guinea pigs going—to laboratories?

In further substantiation of his conjecture, Mr. Schmid cites the similar scarcity of white mice, a scarcity which has contiued for the same length of time, and which has grown to equal proportions. The supply was from the same source —Pennsylvania. Since the mice also are used for experimental purposes, it looks like a conviction of the laboratories on circumstantial evidence.

British Civil Service Commissioner Here

Great interest in the work of national headquarters of the United States civil service commission was expressed by Sir Stanley Leathes, civil service commissioner of Great Britain, who visited headquarters here yesterday.

He was accompanied by William Foran, secretary of the civil service commission of Canada, and Robert Catherwood, vice president of the National Civil Service Reform league. Their visit here followed the annual convention of representatives of municipal, State and Federal civil service commissions at Philadelphia last week.

CHAPEL FOR ARLINGTON IS URGED BY COL. AXTON

RIVALS FORT MYER ALSO

Need for a proper mortuary chapel at Arlington National cemetery is voiced by Col. John T. Axton, chief of army chaplains. Rather than have funerals of famous generals conducted in a part of the administration building, Col. Axton suggests that a mortuary chapel might be built at one of the approaches of the Arlington Memorial bridge.

As an alternative proposal, Col. Axton suggests a mortuary chapel at Fort Myer, Va., which would serve the dual purpose of a mortuary chapel and a chapel for the growing garrison there.

Col. Axton says that church attendance in the army is increasing and thinks that it is proportionately larger than in cities of populations of 20,000 and over, being probably about the same as smaller communities where the rate of attendance is higher. Twenty-five additional chaplains are needed to care for the increased [illegible]ance.

History is repeating itself in the army's religious revival, according to Col. Axton. Following the civil war, after a period of depression in religious life, an era of army chapel building began.

WORK AS WARD HEELERS ADVOCATED FOR WOMEN

Occupation Would Bring Politics Into Public Respect, Mrs. Sherman Says.

SCORES "SOB BROTHERS"

Women as ward heelers would possibly lift the occupation into public respect and at least would not add anything to the degradation of the position, Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, declared yesterday upon her return to Washington from a summer trip to her home in Colorado.

Mrs. Sherman said that the conservative home women of the clubwoman type who are beginning seriously to think of politics realize the need of team work from their club activities. Their team work will be something new in the political world, however, she declares. "As organized club women they have had long experience in working for civic interests. The basis of their success rests in their ability to create public opinion. They have been able to meet irrational propaganda with verified statements of fact and, contrary to the well-established belief, have been ruled by logic and not by sentiment," Mrs. Sherman said.

"The 'sob stuff' of today is being put over by the men. The political candidate who pleads eloquently for a modification of the Volstead act, so that our dear children will not be killed off by the quality of the stuff manufactured today, makes no impression on the average club woman who understands the mental, moral and economic waste of intemperance. The only reaction to his eloquence is contempt for his rather cheap manner expressing his own desires.

"When women do become ward heelers, I think that I can promise a very interesting time in the wards in which they operate. Tenacity and tirelessness being two chief feminine qualities, added to long experience in organizations, should have some effect upon a neighborhood."

Gen. Estrada's Army Pleads Not Guilty

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The 131 members of Gen. Enrique Estrada's "army," arrested here recently on charges of violating the neutrality laws by starting a revolutionary movement against Mexico, pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday at the marine barracks where they are being held. They will be transferred to Los Angeles pending fixing of a trial date. Gen. Estrada and others released on bail will be arraigned later.

Kidnaping to Acquire Bride Is Defended

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Lochinvar still gets by with it. Dominick Pandolfo admitted he, assisted by three friends, had kidnaped Mary Vavuso as she walked in one of Brooklyn's busiest streets, but the indictment out against him was dropped automatically when Mary announced her subsequent marriage to him. Kidnaping is the native method of acquiring brides in his foreign home, said the groom.

Pope Is Abolishing Obsolete Positions

Rome, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The Pope is reforming the organization of the Vatican on its material side by suppressing posts which have become obsolete or unnecessary and increasing the pay of other employes. Today the office of the prefect of the holy apostolic palaces was abolished. This in the past was one of the highest positions in the Vatican court, but recently had been combined with the office of the papal major domo.

Doctor Kidnaped, He Informs Police

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Dr. Albert D. Zwick, for whom police had searched since his sudden disappearance Thursday night, was back home today. He said he had been kidnaped and robbed by three men.

The physician said he was drugged after the trio leaped on his automobile as he was driving homeward, and that he regained consciousness hours later in another neighborhood.

Crew of Ship Ellenia Landed in Cornwall

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The crew of the Italian steamer Ellenia were all safely landed today at Cornwall ports. Their vessel was sunk on Thursday off the Scilly islands after the captain had refused help which the liner Olympic had offered. There was some doubt at first if the crew escaped safely, but the uncertainty was ended this afternoon when a report to Lloyds explained that they had been picked up by French fishing craft and landed at Newlyn and Penzance this afternoon.

Treasury Watchman Falls Dead on Duty

Clarence Widirt, 62 years old, a night watchman at the Treasury annex, Fourteenth street and Ohio avenue northwest, fell dead early yesterday while patroling his post. Fellow workmen found him and summoned aid from Emergency hospital.

Upon arrival at the hospital, one of the staff physicians pronounced him dead. His body was taken to the District morgue, where Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt certified death from natural causes, due to heart disease. Widirt lived at 1862 Mintwood place northwest, and had been employed as watchman of government buildings for more than five years.

PAULINE APEL, SERVANT OF LISZT, DYING AT 88

Caretaker of Pianist's Home Was for 30 Years His Aid and Secretary.

KNOWN TO U. S. PILGRIMS

Weimar, Thuringia, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Pauline Apel, one of the few living associates of Franz Liszt, is dying. Eighty-eight years old, she now has, physicians say, only a few months to live.

Thousands of German as well as American pilgrims to Weimar know her, the caretaker of the pianist's old home, preserved just as he left it before he died at Bayreuth in 1886. For 30 years Pauline Apel was Liszt's servant and secretary. She knew him as did few others, and among these few is his daughter, Cosima Wagner, also 88, whose life is ebbing at Bayreuth.

Pauline's daughter, Frau Geodora Beck, 63 years old, now conducts visitors through the Liszt house, which is filled with gifts which his simple tastes found too costly to use. There are a hundred pipes he never lighted, though he was an inveterate cigar smoker. There are dozens of batons of rare woods which he spurned for a sliver of pine that he used for 50 years. And there are scores of walking sticks which he disdained to touch even when, a few months before his death, his feet were so swollen he could hardly walk. One stick, ribbed with a four-carat diamond, was stolen a few years ago and never recovered.

Robbing of Cardinal Brings 3-Year Term

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Lester Price, 21, New York, was sentenced to from three to six years in the county prison after he had pleaded guilty to stealing jewelry and bonds valued at $23,000 from the home of Cardinal Daugherty on September 1.

Michael Novak, of Claridge, Pa., charged with receiving part of the stolen bonds, was acquitted. Novak gave information leading to the arrest of Price and recovery of nearly all of the stolen property.

Senator McKinley's Condition Improved

Martinsville, Ind., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—His condition somewhat improved in the last two weeks, Senator William B. McKinley, of Illinois, who has been seriously ill at the Home Lawn sanitarium here, manifests a lively interest in the present struggle between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds. He has no fever, said his attending physician, Dr. R. H. Egbert, in a bulletin today. He has been taking nourishment of a semisolid nature.

"His condition, even with this improvement," said Dr. Egbert, "is still of a very critical nature, though not so immediately alarming as two weeks ago."

SPANISH NOTE CANCELS DEMANDS FOR TANGIER

Madrid, However, Proposes to Include Italy in International Regime.

BRITISH PREFER DELAY

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The Spanish government in a note presented simultaneously in London and Paris relinquishes its demand for the inclusion of Tangier in the Spanish zone of Morocco.

The note proposes conversations with Great Britain and France to discuss the admission of Italy by revision of the statute (the pact of Algeciras) under which Tangier is internationally governed.

The British government is inclined to take a more or less detached attitude on Spain's proposal, being satisfied for the present with the status quo, and especially anxious to avoid opening the Tangier question with the British imperial conference in sight.

The view here is that there is no need for hurry, and it is preferred that informal conversations first be held between France and Spain, as the powers most closely concerned.

Rome, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Considerable interest is again shown in the Tangier question and it is thought probable that an international conference must be held for a definite settlement. The Tribuna says France wishes to limit the discussion to as few participants as possible, while England favors a larger number, and the paper adds "Italy would not take part in an international conference over Tangier unless she was sure she would be allowed equal rights with all other participants."

Chiropractor Is Held After Two Boys Die

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Joseph J. Rein, chiropractor who has been under fire of officials after the deaths of two boys he is alleged to have operated on, was ordered arrested today on charges of issuing narcotic prescriptions without a permit.

The Ashland hospital, where he was chief of staff, filed suit for $10,000 damages yesterday, claiming that he represented himself as a licensed physician and by obtaining a position with the hospital injured its reputation. Rein was licensed only as a bloodless and drugless healer. Rein was also head physician at the Elmwood Park hospital at River Grove.

FRENCH AIR CHIEF URGES CAPT. FONCK TO START AT ONCE

"Even if You Have to Swim," Adds Maj. Weiss in His Radio Message.

LONG DELAYS IRKING TO PEOPLE OF FRANCE

Transatlantic Flight Again Is Put Off Until Tuesday, or Even Later.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Paris, Sept. 18.—Capt. Rene Fonck's innumerable delays are getting on the nerves of the French aces, his companions during the war, and arousing a surprisingly skeptical attitude among the French public, with whom he is not as popular as other birdmen holding lesser records.

Speaking the mind of most of the active fliers in France, who look at Capt. Fonck to uphold the country's honor, Maj. Weiss, commander of four escadrilles of observation planes stationed at Lebourgot airdrome, where Capt. Fonck is due to land, sent the aspirant for the honors of the first New York-Paris flight a little word of advice via wireless today, as follows:

"Fonck, Roosevelt field, New York—My advice to you is to start now, even if you have to swim."

At Lebourgot, where Maj. Weiss suddenly dropped out of sight, the correspondent was told that his message to Capt. Fonck could be considered in no way a command but "solely advice from one comrade to another."

Just a Playful Tip.

"Maj. Weiss and Capt. Fonck are old buddies," said the civil commander at Lebourgot, busy with the great searchlights to flood the field when the Sikorsky plane arrives—if it does. "Maj. Weiss is a great joker and he is just combining a little playfulness with a tip to Capt. Fonck about what the French public is thinking about."

Capt. Fonck's friends in civil life think Maj. Weiss' "joke" pretty keen-edged, especially in view of the remarks in a number of newspapers. L'Ouevre frankly asks why the flight has been so long postponed and wonders if Capt. Fonck ever intended to take off. The Petit Gleu thinks the gallant ace ought to renounce the flight, saying the affair is taking on the elements of a farce.

"French aviation has nothing to gain from this flight. If Capt. Fonck fails it will be a French defeat. If he succeeds, the nationality and personality of the pilot will slip into the background and it will be a victory of a plane constructed and financed by people of Babel. Senor Franco crossed the Atlantic and it will be mortifying if our best ace can not because, perhaps, he has not had the best preparations possible."

Flight Again Delayed.

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Definite postponement until Tuesday of the hop off of the Sikorsky biplane S-35 on its projected nonstop flight from New York to Paris was announced this afternoon.

Capt. Rene Fonck, commander, and Lieut. Lawrence William Curtin, U. S. N., the navigator, said there was a likelihood the start could not be made until even later than Tuesday on account of weather conditions.

A report from the bureau of aeronautics in Washington this afternoon said conditions on the whole were unfavorable and it would require two or three days for the storm area to clear, with conditions beyond that period remaining uncertain, due to the advance of a new tropical hurricane.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—With an average passenger income equivalent to about half the wages of one section hand, the railroad between Hampton and Washington, N. CALLES TO ASK PERMISSION TO MOVE ARMY OVER BORDER

Mexico City. The only way to get federal troops from the Mexican capital to Sonora, in case they are not sent over the railway via Nogales, would be to send them to the southern port of Manzanillo and thence by the water route. But the Mexican government has no transports capable of carryng cavalry or artillery.

The Yaqui indians, so called, are not the type that wear feathers in their hair or are backward in civilization. They are said to be the sturdiest of the Mexican race and have had the reputation of being the best soldiers. They follow agricultural pursuits as a rule, it is explained, and are educated above the average, puritanical and religious. Diaz, the former Mexican dictator, had trouble with them but De la Huerta and Obregon both treated them well and induced them to become Sonora state troops and later to join the federal forces. They fought during the revolutions which followed the Diaz regime and when Obregon became president he formed the so-called Praetorian guard of Yaquis at Mexico City.

Indians Form Calles Guard.

This crack guard at the Mexican capital is now composed of three regiments and is relied upon by Calles as the mainstay of his defense against any sudden uprising in Mexico City. The open revolt of the Sonora Yaquis has naturally caused apprehension because of the danger of the Pretorian guard's deserting the federal government's banner out of sympathy with the members of their own race now singled out by Calles as the nation's enemies. Some of the diplomats say that if the guard should turn against Calles, he would be forced to relinquish the presidency immediately.

It is estimated that there are from 5,000 to 10,000 Yaquis in revolt in Sonora. The direct cause of the revolt is said to be the fact that an ambitious land-dividing scheme of Obregon's was to be operated in part in Sonora province. The Yaquis, it is said, do not want their lands taken away or divided, they do not want bolshevik theories applied to them and they resent interference with their religion. The Yaquis who held up Obregon's bodyguard at Bican and who are opposing Gen. Francisco Manzo's state forces carry banners with the "Virgin of Guadalupe" and "religious liberty and education" inscribed on them, according to telegrams reaching here.

Veteran Fighters Lead Revolt.

Those Yaquis who formed part of Manzo's force have already deserted, reports state. It is estimated that about 800 veteran Yaqui fighters are actively leading the Sonora outbreak. First reports were that Obregon was captured by the Yaquis at Bican, which is in the southwestern part of the province. This has not been confirmed, but no official word has come from Obregon to Mexico City since the Bican affair last week. Telegrams from Sonora to Mexico City are sent via Nogales and no telegram from Obregon has passed through that point, it is reported.

An unwelcome complication arising out of the Sonora revolt is the fact that if Calles should send a strong expeditionary force to Sonora it would cost the Mexican government many millions of dollars—some estimates are $1,000,000 a day—and such expenditures would tend to stop payments which Calles is pledged to make and has made to the New York bankers who are handling Mexico's foreign indebtedness.

Rosenthal Slayers Hanged Along Road

Mexico City, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). As a warning against banditry dead prisoners have been strung to trees along the road to Cuernavaca near the spot where Jacob Rosenthal, American tourist, was kidnaped and murdered. This gruesome sight is designed as an object lesson to the natives of that mountainous region that the national government will suppress banditry with ruthlessness.

Six men known to have been of the bandit gang guilty of the outrage, have been executed, and seven have been killed resisting the soldiers who are searching the country. Many believe there has been a larger number of "unofficial" executions because there is little doubt that troops and the federal police are filling to the letter positive orders to exterminate bandits from the regions so near the national capital.

Rosenthal's body will be taken to New York by Joseph Ruff, his son-in-law, and Lucian Ruff, a cousin, as soon as necessary arrangements can be made. F. L. Clark, an American undertaker here, denied the report that the present laws prevented religious ceremonies being held here for Rosenthal.

"No religious ceremonies were planned here by the relatives," he said. "The ceremonies will be in New York. Such ceremonies are usually held at the cemetery and if the burial were here, ceremonies would have been held as usual."

Secretary Lane of the United States embassy, who narrowly escaped the bandits who captured Rosenthal, has received cablegrams of congratulations from friends in the diplomatic services from nearly all the capitals of the world.

Charge Schoenfeld, at Mexico City, reported to the State Department yesterday that 500 Mexican federal troops were engaged in pursuing the bandits who were involved in the Rosenthal murder.

Troops already had killed a number of them, he said, including Bonifacio Hinojosa, mayor of Huitzilac, a small town near the scene of the kidnaping, and another reported to be Miguel Garcia, chief of police at Huitzilac.

Charge Schoenfeld's report said that Mexican soldiers who first encountered the bandits were led in person by Gen. Lopez and the "five or six soldiers" he led. An account of the encounter was given by Schoenfeld, as follows:

"They saw a group of men on a nearby hill about 9:30 on the night of September 15. Challenged by a sentry, the bandit party replied with rifle shots. The bandits fled, but were pursued by the Lopez party who killed all three of the bandits accompanying Mr. Rosenthal. Mr. Rosenthal apparently had been stabbed twice and shot through the head. He walked about 10 meters before falling dead."

The report said that three of the bandits captured by troops had been identified by Mr. Rosenthal's son-in-law, who picked them out of a large group of men. These had been executed at the time Mr. Schoenfeld's dispatch was sent, and the federal authorities were holding three other bandit suspects pending investigations.

State Department officials expressed the opinion that the Mexican authorities had made a "commendable" effort to punish those responsible for Rosenthal's death.

ECONOMIST SAYS MEXICO IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Catholic Boycott Increases Depression, Dr. Wolff Finds After Survey.

MAY CHECK GERMAN AID

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Economic conditions in Mexico, aggravated by the Catholic boycott, are critical. Dr. Walter Wolff, Greman political economist, declared here today. Dr. Wolff announced that a survey of conditions in the southern republic had just been completed, the results of which will be reported to the faculty of the University of Heidelberg. The findings may have an influence on the investment of German capital in Mexico, he said.

Figures revealing that only 2 per cent of the land of Mexico is under cultivation and that American capital far exceeds that of any other nation in oil investments were quoted by Dr. Wolff.

He estimated that the United States had $850,000,000 invested in the Mexican oil industry; England, $200,000,000; Holland, $40,000,000, and Mexico, $11,000,000.

Discussing economic conditions, he said:

"The only cure now is the stabilization of business conditions, a balancing of gold and silver by the issuing of gold certificates and the encouragement of business. The agrarian policy is not working out as was expected; ignorant Indians are not capable of cultivating their few acres without tools. The petroleum laws are antiforeign in nature."

PROSECUTOR WARNS TWO HALL WITNESSES

Gorsline and Mrs. Clark for perjury, if they do not "come clean."

Meanwhile, indignation ran high in Somerville and other parts of Somerset county over Simpson's demand that a "foreign" jury, to be chosen from some other county in the State, try the murder indictments against Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, her two brothers and a cousin, accused of murdering the clergyman and his sweetheart.

"I want to give Gorsline every opportunity to tell the truth," Simpson said. "The April grand jury is to be held over and Prosecutor Bergen of Somerset county, is in charge of it. Gorsline will be indicted if he does not tell the truth. We have conflicting statements from him sufficient evidence for a perjury indictment. Mrs. Clark is practically in the same boat."

The investigators are convinced that Gorsline, despite his denials, was an actual witness to the murder of Hall and Mrs. Mills several years ago. They are equally confident that Mrs. Clark came into possession of love letters from Mrs. Mills to Hall which she turned over to the clergyman's wife, thereby establishing a motive for Mrs. Hall's trailing the pair to their trysting place on the Phillips farm, where they were slain.

Mrs. Clark's 7½-hour grilling last night failed to shake her insistence that she knew nothing important, but Underwood intends to question her again.

Addison Clark, Minna's brother, was questioned at New Brunswick by Capt. Walsh and Sergt. Hall. He told the officers nothing more than that he remembered his sister had been visited by Felix di Julio, New York Hall detective. Mrs. Elizabeth Schank, mother of Mrs. Mills, also was also questioned at New Brunswick. She confirmed Mrs. Clark's story that Minna Mills had been seen with Hall-Mills letters shortly before the murders, but denied the report that the present laws prevented religious ceremonies being held here for Rosenthal.

"No religious ceremonies were planned here by the relatives," he said. "The ceremonies will be in New York. Such ceremonies are usually held at the cemetery and if the burial were here, ceremonies would have been held as usual."

IOWA FLOOD COSTS LIVES OF 9; DAMAGE PUT AT $2,000,000

Rain and Hail Send Sioux River Up 18 Feet in 11 Hours' Time

RAILWAYS ARE HEAVY SUFFERERS FROM STORM

Hawarden Business Buildings Collapse; Two Homes Carried Away.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Storm clouds which have ridden September's skies, pelting the central West with flood and disaster, from Ohio to Nebraska, left a gaping wound today in northwestern Iowa. A torrential blast of rain, hail, wind and lightning swept a wide area last night and today, taking at least two lives, inundating 30,000 acres of crop laden farm lands, uprooting line of traffic and communication and visiting its havoc on four counties north of Sioux City near the Iowa-Nebraska line.

Property damage was estimated above $2,000,000, with Hawarden, Lemars, Hull, Akron, Sheldon and Cherokee counting the loss. Rain of almost unprecedented severity sent the Sioux river up 18 feet in 11 hours and flooded the valley of the Floyd river.

Although nine persons were reported to have been drowned in the flooded areas, the names of only four had been learned late tonight. They are: Nina Brunsteing, schoolgirl, Hull; Mr. Pertstich and 4-year-old son, Hospers; Dirk Devries, farm hand, Ireton; C. M. Fleschmann, retired business man, Hawarden.

In many rural communities water was reported flowing through the upper stories of farm homes.

Trainmen at Sheldon last night worked half an hour in a terrific rain storm to save Engineer Ole Teigum from drowning after a freight train on the Illinois Central was derailed on tracks undermined by the torrent. Ashes of Pioneer Cyclist, Dead 15 Years, Found

Boston, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—After lying forgotten for fifteen years in the undertaking parlors of a Dorchester funeral director, the ashes of Frank W. Weston, known as "the father of bicycling in America," are to be buried with appropriate ceremony. Old friends, members of the Boston Bicycle club, which Weston, an Englishman, founded half a century ago, will conduct the services.

Burial will take place next Friday at dusk, beneath a tree that club members planted on the Fairbanks estate in Dedham ten years ago.

Discovery of Weston's ashes was made yesterday by Fred Stark, of Dorchester, who had been one of Weston's closest friends. Weston came to the United States, probably in the seventies. He was the moving spirit in founding the Boston Bicycle club, and through his activities clubs sprang up throughout the country.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. received reports of the storm at Miami Beach through a single cable, and Avon Park obtained meager advices from West Palm Beach over a railway telephone line. This failed late today, and West Palm Beach was cut off except for train service.

Passengers who reached Avon Park late today from West Palm Beach on the first train to emerge from the hurricane district described the storm as the worst in the history of the Palm Beaches. The train left West Palm Beach early today and passengers could give little detail of the damage there but united in saying it had been a "terrible" blow.

FLOATING UNIVERSITY BEGINS WORLD TOUR

500 Students, 50 Professors Aboard; Discipline to Be Maintained.

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). A floating university, the steamship Ryndam, sailed today from Hoboken on a trip around the world. There are 500 students and 59 professors on the "campus."

Rich and poor students will share alike in everything, they will not be allowed to tip the waiters nor will the wealthy ones be permitted to make side trips. Discipline will be maintained as on any campus.

Classes must be attended and examinations will be held. Each of the 50 girls among the students was required to become a "member" of the families of professors.

No profit will be sought by the backers of the experiment. Expenses of passport vises, laundry for students and picture shows aboard the ship will come from the students' "matriculation" fees.

STORM WARNING FORCES RS-1 TO HURRY HOME

Army Dirigible Commander Cuts Short His Visit to Detroit.

MOORS AT FORD AIRPORT

Detroit, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The army dirigible RS-1 paid a brief visit to Detroit and Selfridge field today and started back to its base at Scott field, Ill., when radio advices told of an aproaching storm. The return trip began at 2:20 o'clock this afternoon, slightly more than an hour after the big ship arrived at Selfridge field from Detroit.

The advices told of a possible storm between St. Louis and Chicago and Col. John A. Paegelow, comanding the ship, decided to take off immediately for Scott field instead of remaining here over night and later visiting Chicago.

Nosing her way through fog most of the way from Scott field, the RS-1 arrived at the Ford airport here about daybreak this morning. It floated over the airport nearly two hours before being moored to the mast there. It was the first airship to tie up to the mast, erected originally for the ill-fated Shenandoah, which never reached Detroit.

Casting off from the airport at shortly after noon, the big airship cruised over downtown Detroit and on up the Detroit river to Selfridge field. There a conference between her comanding officer and Selfridge officers took place, and it was decided to star for Scott field.

Fuel sufficient for a cruise of 1,025 miles was taken on, the ship released and the return journey begun.

Children Abroad Found To Have Best Manners

New York, Sept. 18. (By A. P.).—European children have better manners than those in America, but American children have more initiative and adaptability in the opinion of Mrs. Sidonie Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, Inc.

Mrs. Gruenberg, recently returned from a study of conditions relating to the child in European countries, expressed the belief that manners might be somewhat attained only at the price of harm to the child.

"We wanted merely to have children well behaved," she said, "and did not count the cost, the task would be easy enough. To train them to be well mannered without being overrepressed or servient is a different problem."

ing system and if the more successful policies of enforcement prosecuted by some of the 22 administrators permit it, such a system in all likelihood will evolve from the conference.

The whole system of enforcement will have to coincide with the "common sense" policies laid down by Andrews and followed by most of his administrators. "Strong arm" methods no longer are to be employed. The conference is expected to work out a closely defined policy of harmony and cooperation among all the administrators.

There is considerable conjecture among the incoming administrators as to just what the conference will develop. There is gossip that it represents the last try of Gen. Andrews to make the United States really arid. They are discussing the renewed probabilities of Gen. MINERS TO REJECT BALDWIN PROPOSAL

Return to Work Is Refused Without a Nation-Wide Agreement.

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—There seems slight prospects of peace resulting from Premier Baldwin's offer to the miners last night. It said that if they went back to work they might have their demands—a nation-wide agreement—accepted in effect if not in word. The premier told the miners that the government would back them in obtaining what they were seeking if they would only admit economic facts and return to the mines.

A. J. Cook, secretary for the miners' federation, after the government announcement, said that peace was no nearer than it was twenty weeks ago. The Laborite Herald says today that the government's plan connotes abject surrender by the miners to the mine owners; that it runs counter to Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill's pledged word, and that it excludes the possibility of national negotiations or a national agreement, being based on district settlements to which the miners are inflexibly opposed. Views expressed in other labor quarters are considered equally discouraging.

1927 Palestine Work Will Cost $10,000,000

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Ten million dollars is to be expended in Palestine during the coming year for the agricultural and industrial development of the country as the Jewish homeland and $7,500,000 of this sum is to come from the Jews of the United States, according to the annual Palestine budget of the world Zionist organization made public today by Louis Lipsky, president of the Zionist Organization of America. The budget represents the largest sum ever appropriated for Palestine upbuilding work by the Zionists.

Diver Walks Across Mile of River Bottom

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Inaugurating a new form of competitive water "sports," Klass Everts, deep-sea diver, today walked across the bottom of the Elizabeth river between Portsmouth and Norfolk, covering the distance of a fraction over a mile in 50 minutes. The "hike" was a preliminary to Everts' attempt to walk across the bottom of Hampton Roads, a distance of 7 miles, next month.

Although clad in a 200-pound diving suit, Everts made what was considered good time. He encountered considerable mud and difficulty in climbing the steep sides of the channel cuts, some of them 45 feet deep. Everts has challenged any diver to outwalk him across Hampton Roads.

PRINCE'S PINK SHIRT SETS FRENCH STYLE

Bright Garment, Worn When Golfing, Is Taken Up by Women Also.

Le Touquet, France, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The Prince of Wales launched a new fashion when he stayed here during part of his summer vacation. The prince was seen one day to leave the Golf hotel wearing a pink shirt which had the sleeves cut off at the elbows. The prince played a round of golf in this cool garb, and the news spread like wild fire.

The next day the shops in Paris Plage were raided for pink shirts, which appeared on the golf links with the sleeves cut short, but the supply of pink shirts was not equal to the demand, and the next day telephonic and telegraphic messages were sent to London ordering pink shirts by the hundredweight, to be sent to Touquet by airplane. They have since been all the rage and the idea has been taken up even by the women players.

Hill Granted Recount Of Anne Arundel Vote

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 18.—Representative John Philip Hill, apparently defeated for the nomination for United States senator by Ovington E. Weller, incumbent, today was granted a recount of ballots in Anne Arundel county by the board of supervisors of elections, which will conduct the count next Tuesday.

Hill's petition contains no allegation of fraud, but asks simply for a recanvass. Bond of $500 was furnished. The law stipulates that unless a difference as great as 2 per cent of the total vote is shown, the expenses of the recount must be borne by the petitioner, otherwise the cost is paid by the county. The vote as returned gives Weller 1,119; Hill, 792.

AQUATIC SPECTACLE OPENS MANOR CLUB SEASON FOR FALL

30 PERSONS TAKE PART IN ELABORATE SHOW

A brilliant water pageant in which the dominating figure was Father Neptune surrounded by the shades of famous swimmers, last night terminated the field day exercises which marked the official opening of the fall season at the Manor club, Norbeck, Md. Approximately 30 persons took part in the spectacle, one of the most elaborate ever staged at the club.

The 100-foot long swimming pool of the club furnished a setting for the occasion, the masqueraders appearing from the surface of the water as they were summoned by the genial sea god, personified by Commodore H. E. Longfellow, of the American Red Cross. Flowing sea-green robes, traditional beard and trident added to the impressiveness of Father Neptune, whose dignity was surmounted by a gilt crown of generous dimensions.

Seated on his throne, Neptune caused to issue from the tank noted aquatic experts from the Stone Age to that of Gertrude Ederle of English channel fame. A screen hid one end of the pool and it was from beneath this barrier the various characters dived to emerge dripping at the behest of His Oceanic Majesty.

Davy Jones There.

Caesar and [illegible] were there, doubtless in memory of that phrase of Shakespeare. "Me, Cassius, ere I sink." This time, however, there was a clear unruffled pool rather than a muddy Tiber.

More than 300 persons witnessed the pageant.

The committee in charge of the entertainment was composed of Commodore Longfellow, Miss Florence Skadding, of the Capital Athletic club, and Guy Winkjer, of the Washington Canoe club.

Many in Major Roles.

Those taking major roles were as follows:

Bogus Message Lured Missing Man Away

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 18.—Relatives and friends are alarmed over the disappearance of Robert W. Smith, employed at a local bakery, who left here on his motorcycle two weeks ago in response to a message announcing the serious illness of his brother, Lloyd Smith, at Mullins, W. Va. Since then his family and employer have heard nothing from him.

That the phone message received here by Mrs. Smith, announcing the illness of her husband's brother, was bogus, is indicated by telegrams received from Lloyd Smith, declaring he has not been sick and sent no message. Smith has a wife and two children.

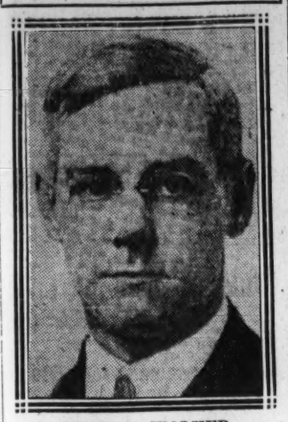
COUNCIL MEMBER



FRED S. WALKER, who last night was elected a member of the citizens' advisory council.

WALKER IS ELECTED TO ADVISORY COUNCIL

ceived 21 votes, which, although more than any other candidate received, was not enough, 25 being necessary for a choice.

Walker, who had thrice been a candidate for a place on the council, declared in a brief speech that he would "do everything possible for the good of the District." He said he would give special attention to schools.

The ballots used in the election were a brilliant red, this color having been selected by Jesse Suter, president of the federation, because in his opinion, it was a red-letter day in the history of organized citizenship in the District.

The men and women voted on last night had been unsuccessful candidates in the last election in April. One of them, William G. Henderson, of the North Capitol Citizens association, withdrew at the outset, saying he could not give the necessary time to the office.

Voting on the first ballot resulted as follows: R. F. Mancil, Conduit Road association, 1 vote; Frank L. Peckham, Burleith association, 1 vote; Ernest H. Pullman, Manor [illegible]; John A. Saul, Brightwood, [illegible]. Frank Hiram Snell, League of Women Voters, 10, and Robert [illegible], Southwest, 5.

His term of office will expire in April, when the next election will be held.

Commissioner Dougherty appeared at the meeting and was enthusiastically cheered. He said he regretted that he had to resign from the council and that now, like the man in the electric chair, he felt that something was going to happen to him.

Commissioner Dougherty urged the federation and the council to avoid factional disputes and obstructionist parliamentary tactics, and to carry forward a fine, constructive program for the advancement of the District.

The federation unanimously adopted the recommendations for the proposed membership drive that were submitted by a committee composed of Harry N. Stull, William R. Whipp, Fred S. Walker and William McK. Clayton. One recommendation was that a committee be appointed to confer with representatives of the various associations so as to make plans for the city-wide drive. Another was that a guarantee fund be solicited to finance the campaign. It also was recommended that the local federation work in conjunction with the civic federations of Arlington county, Va., and Montgomery county, Md.

When William McK. Clayton appealed for a fund of $400 to pay experts for making valuation of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., the delegates were quick to respond. Several of them pledged their associations to pay $10. Others will take the matter up with their associations. Mr. Clayton himself contributed $100 of his personal funds.

President Suter uged all delegates to endeavor to join the delegation that will go to the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial to celebrate "District day," October 6. William S. Torbert announced that if suffrage for the District was going to be urged at the exposition, he would not attend.

Judge Bars Salvation Army From Streets

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Meetings of the Salvation Army held on public highways constitute an obstruction to traffic and no city or town in the State has the right to permit use of the highways for purposes other than traffic, except for transmission of education, knowledge and the like, Judge Raplh W. Reeve ruled today, in finding Commander Amos Strickland, of the Lynn corps, guilty of obstructing traffic.

Judge Reeve fined the commander $5 and on his appeal released him on $1 bond for the superior court.

CUBANS ASK U. S. TO PAY PROFITS ON WAR SUGAR

Planters to Sue, if Havana Does Not, for Surplus on Sales to Allies.

Montreal, Quebec, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Cable advices from Havana to leading sugar interests here state that an influential group of Cuban planters and sugar mill owners is petitioning the Cuban government to take action against the United Seates Treasury for the recovery of $41,000,000, alleged to be the profit made by the sale of sugar to the allied nations during the latter years of the world war.

Dr. Sainz de la Pena, Cuban consul in Montreal, confirming the advices, said reliable information had reached him to the effect that the planters and owners would themselves press the claim if the Havana government refused to act.

In explanation of the matter, Dr. Sainz said that Cuba handed over her entire sugar crop in 1918 and 1919 to be sold by the United States government to the allied nations at cost price, and thus prevent possible unscrupulous speculation. The sugar, he continued, was sold through an equalization board. The board was recently dissolved and, after all expenses had been paid, there remained $41,000,000, which was handed over to the United States Treasury.

The Cuban planters and mill owners maintain that this sum is rightfully theirs, on the ground that they sold the sugar for the use of the allies at cost price, 2½ cents a pound, as Cuba's contribution toward the success of the allied cause.

"As Cuba has made no claim for indemnity for the expenses she incurred," Dr. Sainz added, "the planters feel that, after realizing sufficient money to clear all expenses, the United States should hand the remaining profit to them."

Civil Service Employes and Officials Observe First Anniversary in Office.

Friends of United States Civil Service Commissioner Jessie Dell yesterday decorated her desk at commission headquarters with flowers, as a pleasant reminder of the anniversary of her appointment as commissioner, and she was warmly greeted by employes and officials. Speaking of her experience while serving in one of the highest public offices to which a woman has ever been appointed, Miss Dell said: "The 365 days that have passed have been filled with much work and pleasure. The efficiency and cooperation of the commission's loyal force, both in Washington and in the field, have been very helpful and encouraging.

"I feel that we have made a real progress during the past year and the future promises much accomplishment. It is always an inspiration for me to recall that the avenue along which our work lies in the application and improvement of the merit system extends from Canada to Mexico and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Our work has been all the more interesting to me because of the wide field which it covers."

G. A. R. COMMANDER DENIES DISBANDING

Another Decade of Vigorous Activity Is Foreseen by John B. Inman.

This was the reply of Commander in Chief John B. Inman, Springfield, Ill., to reports that the national encampment of civil war veterans, which opens here Monday, would be the last. Mr. Inman denied there was any likelihood of the annual meetings being discontinued because of the thinning ranks.

Five thousand veterans will attend this year, the commander predicted, while the number of persons of auxiliary organizations will augment the visitors to around 50,000. Although the survivors of the war of '65 are dying at the rate of 17,500 a year Mr. Inman believes the annual parade in 1940 will be "an impressive sight."

"Even when the annual encampment is composed altogether of centenarians," he said, they will form more tha a corporal's guard."

Pigeon Extermination Begins in Alexandria

Extermination of the pigeons which for many years have infested the Alexandria city hall was started yesterday, and from 6 a. m. until noon Policeman Charles Miller, using a small rifle, killed 37 birds. Most of the birds were shot as they alighted on the eaves.

At the meeting of the city council Thursday, City Manager Morton reported he had received many complaints on the nuisance created by these birds, and he was instructed to rid the city hall of them.

HART OIL BURNER WEEK

NEAR NEWLYWEDS BRING FUN GALORE TO LICENSE BUREAU

Filing of Divorce Suits Sends Applicants for Permits Into Distraction.

FORGETTING TO PICK MINISTER IS BARRIER

Scarcity of Engagement Rings Gives Rise to Theories Among Clerks.

"One dollar please. Who's next?"

This request and question, all in the same breath, sends many a faltering soul away from the marriage license bureau rejoicing, not because they are one step nearer marriage, but because it's the end of a perplexing and sometimes trying situation.

Approximately half of those who come to the District Supreme court house to get their marriage licenses, whether old or young, large or small, repeaters or first-timers, usually fall into a condition the average layman would diagnose as "terribly flabbergastered." The other half are so shell-shocked they unconsciously act natural.

They not alone "act somewhat queerly," according to Russell P. Belew, who is pinch hitting for Col. William A. Kroll, the marriage license clerk, who is vacationing, but they do funny things.

The reasons never have been studied scientifically, court attaches declare, although one reason that may cause some of the more pronounced distraction, it is said, may be due to the fact that suits for divorce, both "amensa et thoro" and "a vinculo matrimoni," are filed at the same counter as the licenses are issued.

Forgot to Name Minister.

The favorite "bone" the license applicants pull, attaches say, is to forget they have to name a minister. This causes a most perplexing situation.

Recently a young man and his bride-to-be from out of town, after a careful perusal of the application blank, filled in all questions save one and submitted it to the clerk.

When informed no minister had been named, as required by law, the young man looked painfully at his near bride, scratched his head and said, "Well, what are we going to do?"

"Charlie" Roy, who has been helping out in such situations longer than 20 years, stepped into the breach and saved the day by telling the couple he would direct them to a minister.

"Methodist, Baptist, Episcopalian, Lutheran, Catholic or M. E. South," Charlie asked?

Most applicants are afflicted with courthouse nerves. In making out the application, which contains a few simple questions such as name, age and address, the licensees ruin many blanks because, as one applicant said, "The pen just won't seem to write."

Engagement Rings Scarce.

It also is strange how many applicants forget which is their right and left hand. When the clerk gives the oath and asks them to raise their right hand many raise their left.

While the clerk was busy issuing licenses the other day, a wistful little girl about 18 years old, went up to another clerk and asked, "Do they sell post cards in the building?"

When informed post cards were sold across the street, the girl left. Five minutes later she put in an appearance with a handful of cards. For more than half an hour she wrote. Finally a young man in the line of applicants asked her what she was writing.

"I'm telling the folks back home 'Just married,'" she said.

"For Pete's sake," he exclaimed. "I haven't got the license yet."

One of the most noticeable things at the courthouse is the absence of engagement rings. Nearly two-thirds of the brides-to-be don't wear rings.

According to attaches, this is in striking contrast to the years gone by and results either from the high cost of courting or because of the quick follow through of proposals.

Easy to Tell Boss.

It is easy to tell who is going to be the better half in most families, according to clerks.

There are a large number of cases in which the girl takes complete charge of preliminaries, such as filling out the application. In this class of cases, the girl answers all questions, signs the certificate, and tells her escort to "pay the man a dollar."

Ministers don't do all the marrying.

Many of those who are licensed to marry "want a good judge." They are sent to see Judge Robert E. Mattingly, of the police court, who calls in Richard Hughes, a bailiff, to act as best man, flower girl and maid of honor. The judge has married as many as three couples a day, and from all reports, does a very capable job of it.

Every year there is an average of 7,000 marriage licenses taken out in Washington, and, according to courthouse clerks, at least one laugh goes with each license, which makes it safe to say this job of issuing licenses is one of the funniest in town.

NO INSULTS ON GRAVES OBSERVED BY CARAWAY

FRENCH HUNT FINDS NONE

Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, yesterday sent a cablegram to the American Legion in Paris, saying that he had no personal information of American war graves in France being desecrated. When the senator gave out a statement recently saying that "To Hell with America" and other insults were written on the graves, he said he made it plain that he was not in that part of France. His information came from Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, member of the American battle monuments commission, he said.

"The substance of this testimony was published at the time," Senator Caraway continued, "and has never been contradicted so far as I know.

"Also I am in receipt of letters from many people substantiating the statement I have made with reference to the attitude of France. Among them was a letter from a gentleman in Boston criticising me, saying he had seen such inscriptions but thought they had been written by drunken Americans. Of course, with that explanation, if it satisfies him and others, I have no quarrel."

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—So great was the feeling caused by publication in the French press of Senator Caraway's charge of the desecration of American war graves in France that the minister of pensions sent messages to all sectors of the battle front where American soldiers are buried, ordering a rigid inquiry.

The investigation is said to have revealed no basis for the senator's charges. On the contrary, authorities state, it showed that isolated graves in local cemeteries are scrupulously kept up by the French, although visited by Americans only once a year, on Memorial day.

The American Graves Registration Service, charged with the upkeep of the great national cemeteries, denies categorically any desecration of the graves, which are guarded daily by former service men.

THEFT OF CHICKENS IN WAR CONFESSED

Veteran of Conflict Between States Appears in Court to Clear Conscience.

Nebraska City, Nebr., Sept. 18 (By A. P.)—Conscience stricken because he had stolen chickens during the civil war and desiring to "square accounts before it is too late," Tim Crook, 80-year-old war veteran, who lives in the hill country near Minersville, Nebr., went before District Judge Begley here and asked to be allowed to "plead guilty."

Judge Begley, however, just smiled and told him to forget about it.

"You see, when I was in company A of the Tenth Kansas infantry," the grizzled veteran said, "we didn't get to eat but every once in a while and a stray shoat or chicken was our meal. I guess I shot and stole from the big plantations as many as the next one. They say that all is fair in love and war, and we were fighting lots and eating little, and maybe it was all right, but I ain't felt right about it ever since. When this bread and water sentence business at Tekamah came up, I decided that if they were going to be that rough on poor fellows violating the liquor laws in other parts of the State, that maybe I had done wrong."

LEGION TO FACE MOVE TO CANCEL PARIS TRIP

premier of France, and now foreign minister, assuring the Americans of a cordial welcome.

When these messages were read at the convention of the District of Columbia department of the American Legion last month, there was enthusiastic applause. There was no doubt but that the local legionnaires, if asked then to vote on the Paris trip, would have been virtually unanimous in favor of it.

Can Not Turn Back Now.

As matters stand, the legion seems to be in a position where it can not turn back. Arrangements already have been made with the various steamship companies to take upwards of 30,000 legionnaires to France; railroads have promised reduced rates, and plans have been started in Paris to house the thousands of Yanks.

But there is another and more important reason why the legion can not turn back, according to legion officials. To call off the trip, they say, would be a cruel slap at France, out of all proportion to the flare-up inspiring it. The "traditional friendship" between France and the United States, these men say, is more than the hollow phase some say it is; it is an actuality, something to be nurtured and cherished.

Aside from these arguments, according to legion officials, there must be considered the prime motive of the Paris pilgrimage, the desire to visit the graves of the 50,000 Americans who laid down their lives in the world war. That, they say, is the real reason behind the trip, and nothing has happened which would justify turning back.

May Authorize Veto Power.

The first suggestion for a pilgrimage of the American Legion to France was made two years ago. The idea then was to commemorate Armistice day by a ten-year anniversary meeting in 1928. Subsequently this suggestion was modified and plans undertaken to have the legion hold its 1927 convention in Paris, thereby commemorating the tenth anniversary of the arrival of the American troops on the fighting front.

A French travel committee was appointed, with Bowman Elder, of Indiana, and John R. Wicker, jr., of Richmond, taking an active part in working out an elaborate plan for the trip. Every detail, even to advance arrangements for train reservations from various States, has been worked out and will be submitted to the national convention next month.

This convention will decide where the next year's convention is to be held and is expected to indorse the plan for holding it in Paris. But, coupled with this indorsement, there is expected to be a proviso specifically authorizing the national executive committee to call the program off if such action should appear warranted.

There is some question as to whether such a specific veto power is necessary in view of the fact that the national executive committee of the legion is the supreme body between conventions and can legislate in the name of the legion. In other words, it is contended in some quarters that the national executive committee could call the trip off between now and next spring even if the Philadelphia convention indorsed the trip and ordered it carried out. But the suggestion of a specific veto clause is regarded as an insurance against the uncertain conditions now prevailing and also as a recognition of the protests by certain State conventions of the legion against the projected trip.

Policeman Taken Mile On Auto Side, He Says

Mounting the running board of an automobile driven by Louis E. Hayes, 1429 Taylor street northwest, near Hains point yesterday afternoon, Policeman Henry H. Brown, of the First precinct, was carried a mile before Hayes would stop his car, Brown testified in traffic court last night.

Brown turned off the ignition several times, he said, but each time Hayes turned it on again. Brown said Hayes demanded that he get off the running board, and told him, "You're dumb, like all the rest of them." The defendant accused Brown of being "ungentlemanly." The court withheld judgment, and the case was continued.

GUARDIANS' BOARD SEES STEP FORWARD IN MOTHER PENSION

Final Report Submitted After 33 Years in Care of Dependent Children.

BODY IS CONSOLIDATED WITH WELFARE GROUP

2,373 Received Aid During Last Fiscal Year; Home Help Held Best.

Adoption of the mothers' pension law constituted the longest step forward that has been taken in the District's public welfare endeavors.

Poverty is the fundamental cause of a very large number of cases of child dependency.

Washington ranks among the highest of cities in the number of children cared for under public supervision.

These were outstanding statements in the final annual report of the Board of Children's Guardians, made public yesterday. The report covered the operations of the board during the fiscal year that ended June 30. But since the board passed out of existence on that date the report also reviews the entire 33 years of the board's existence. The Board of Children's Guardians now is consolidated with the Board of Public Welfare.

During the last year care was given to 2,373 children. July 1 there were 1,752 children under guardianship, 564 having been committed to the board during the preceding twelve months. Domestic situations to the number of 747, involving 1,473 children, came to the attention of the department of investigation and advice. Fifteen children were placed in adoption homes, 246 in free homes with relatives and friends, 172, over 16 years old, were placed on wages, with work and living conditions supervised.

5,407 Children Cared For.

Since the organization of the board in 1892, 5,407 children have been cared for until they reached 21 years of age, many from infancy. Temporary care has been given to 8,684 and 598 feeble-minded children have been educated and trained. Investigations of living conditions have been made of nearly 41,000 children reported neglected abandoned, abused or destitute.

Summing up the results developed in the board's work, the report says:

"Looking back over 33 years of experience in public care of children, a disinterested observer might see that the institutional group and foster home group of theorists were equally at fault, each claiming that its particular method was the proper one for every type of dependent child. Today we have come to understand that any environment except the normal and natural home with the child's own parents, is a mere substitute for a birthright of which the child has been robbed.

"Such a substitute can hardly be expected to be as good as the normal, original home; for the ties of blood and natural love and affection have been broken. Yet it has taken a quarter of a century for even social workers to see that both methods are often bad and that each has a place in the field of care for the dependent child.

"It is now generally agreed that the method of foster home care for normal, dependent children is superior to institutional care, if the foster home is properly selected and closely supervised by competent, practical, trained social workers.

"It is also agreed that the foster home method, without proper investigation and supervision, is the most dangerous substitute for the normal home. The normal home, however poor from a material standpoint, is better than its best substitute.

"Social workers now realize that the crime of the last 50 years in welfare work has been needless separation of child and parent—the intentional breaking up of homes by those who professed to advance social progress.

"In the name of welfare work, children have been kept in institutions and foster homes at great expense to the public when, with or without a small amount of aid, the proper type of social work would have saved not only the taxpayers' money but also the home and normal heritage of the child.

Home Aid Step Forward.

"Congress, at its last session, provided for public aid to dependent children in their homes and that action, together with consolidation of public activities in the public welfare board, constitute the longest step forward in the District's public welfare endeavors.

"Any thorough survey through the records of the District of Columbia will show that, in a very large number of cases, poverty was the fundamental cause of the child's dependency. The dependency ratio of Washington has always been high and even now, as compared to other cities, it ranks among the highest in the number of children cared for under public supervision.

"Sufficient aid to dependent children in their homes, applied with the best family case work principles will, in time, cut down the number of dependents under public guardianship."

French-Owned Autos Show Big Increase

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—France is prosperous if prosperity is indicated by the number of automobiles in use in the country. Statistics show there was an increase of 146,370 cars of all kinds at the end of 1925 over 1924. The figures for 1926, it is said, will show a further big increase.

At the end of 1925 the total number of cars running on the roads of France was 721,306. Paris and the department of the Seine led with 721,306.

$635,000 VALUATION OF MOTORBUS LINE ROUSES OPPOSITION

Method of Appraising Equipment in Rate-Raise Request Questioned by Commission.

REJECTION WOULD NOT PREVENT 10-CENT FARE

Increase Calculated to Allow 7½ Per Cent Return on $293,000 Investment.

The public utilities commission will materially scale the valuation demanded to be placed on its property by the Washington Rapid Transit Co., it was indicated yesterday.

As a basis for its request for authority to increase motorbus tares, the company asked for a valuation of $635,000. One of the methods used in arriving at this figure was the reporting of equipment at present-day prices, regardless of what was paid for it in the past, without corresponding offsets for depreciation. The experts of the commission will not agree to this and other items, it was said.

May Not Prevent Increase.

It is not thought, however, that reducing the valuation will operate to prevent an increase in bus fares, for, while the company indicated a straight 10-cent cash fare, with no discount for tokens, would result in annual profits, as the situation stands now, of $22,000, that sum would represent a 7½ per cent return on an investment of only $293,000 and it is deemed certain that the commission will allow a considerably higher valuation than that.

President E. D. Merrill, of the company, says the nature of the bus business is such that it should enjoy a return of 8½ per cent on investment, but it is not held likely that the commission will agree with him on that point.

William M. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens associations on the other hand, is expected at the next hearing, to argue against any increase in fare at all. It is believed he will allege that the financial hardships of the bus concern have largely been statistical in their nature.

Midshipman Posts Are Going Begging

Appointments to the U. S. Naval Academy from a quota of 40 sons of world war officers and enlisted men of the army, navy, and marine corps, who died prior to July 2, 1921, are going begging, according to the Navy Department, no applications having been received.

A law was passed at the last session of Congress authorizing a quota of 40 additional midshipmen, 20 of whom were to be the sons of officers of the three services who were killed in action or died prior to the above date of wounds or disease, and 20 to be sons of warrant officers and enlisted men of the three services. Appointments to fill the quota are to be made by the President.

FOLLOWS RODGERS

CAPT. HAROLD T. BARTLETT, who succeeds the late Commander John Rodgers in command of the navy's new long-distance flying boats.

NAVY PICKS BARTLETT FOR RODGERS' AIR POST

Will Command Planes on Flight That May Bring Hawaiian Attempt.

WELL KNOWN IN CAPITAL

Announcement was made by the Navy Department yesterday that Commander Harold T. Bartlett, until recently with the bureau of aeronautics, has been selected to command the large PN-10 flying boats now being constructed at the naval aircraft factory, Philadelphia, on the experimental West coast flight. He succeeds Commander John Rodgers, who was killed in a plane crash at Philadelphia recently.

Upon the success of this flight is understood to depend the possibility of another Hawaiian nonstop flight, that Commander Rodgers first attempted in 1925. The primary object of this flight is to determine the possibility of using aircraft for long-range scouting with the fleet.

Commander Bartlett, well known in Washington, has been a naval aviator and pilot since 1914, holding pilot license No. 19, as well as a pilot's license for seaplanes and the expert pilot's license issued by the National Aeronautical association. He was born in Connecticut in 1887, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1911.

During the world war he served with British and French air forces and was awarded the Navy Cross for air raids. He recently flew Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics Warner back to this city from Pensacola, Fla.

Commander Bartlett has not yet announced the plans he will adopt in determining the value of planes for long-range scouting, but it is expected he will follow closely Commander Rodgers' ideas.

He will fly the new planes from Philadelphia to San Diego via the Panama canal, where they will join the battle fleet for further long-distance flying.

Kellogg Seeks Word On Attack on Consul

Immediately upon receipt of newspaper reports that Earl Brennan, United States consul at Rome, had been beaten by fascist militia, Secretary of State Kellogg yesterday dispatched a cable to the American Embassy at Rome asking for particulars. Secretary Kellogg denied any previous knowledge of an attack on the American consul, which it is reported took place on the same day an assassin hurled a bomb at Premier Mussolini, and stated that in the absence of word from Rome he could neither deny nor confirm the report.

Other officials were of the opinion that the department would certainly have been informed if such an attack had been made. In their opinion, it would be strange if such an incident had happened without a report coming to the government here.

Police Get Man After Chase Into Maryland

After a chase of more than two miles, Detective Oscar Mansfield and Lieut. Joseph Pierson, of the Twelfth precinct, arrested Julius Highsmith, 24 years sold, of Bladensburg, Md., near Cottage City, Md. Highsmith was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor.

The chase started when the policeman saw Highsmith's motor car swerving from one side of the street to the other at Ninth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, Mansfield said. They were unable to overtake the car until they reached Cottage City, where Highsmith was seized after a struggle. Mansfield said. A deputy sheriff from Hyattsville escorted Highsmith to the District line where he was turned over to Mansfield.

UNITARIANS DISCUSS PLANS FOR BATTLE WITH INTOLERANCE

WOULD USE THE RADIO TO FIGHT PROPAGANDA

Attorney Who Argued for Scopes Gives Address at Fourth Session.

Nationwide campaign plans to combat enemies of religious and academic freedom were considered last night by the Unitarian Laymen's league at the conclusion of its fourth convention session, in All Souls' Unitarian church. Anti-evolution and similar legislation particularly would be opposed though educational methods and an intensive crusade conducted by lecture tours, radio and preaching, to overcome the propaganda from fundamentalist sources, it was explained.

The decision to start such a campaign, although long in the minds of Unitarian leaders, definitely was reached after speakers of the league vividly had brought forward what they termed the "menace of intolerance to religious freedom."

This intolerance, speakers declared, exists as well in the North as the South, and is not confined to any section.

New York Lawyer Speaks.

Numerous instances of bigotry and religious tyranny were called to mind by speakers, one of whom, Charles H. Strong, New York attorney and honorary vice president of the league, described the impressions he gained in Tennessee when he argued before the supreme court of that State in behalf of John T. Scopes, convicted evolution teacher.

"If the present wave of intolerance is to be checked it can not be done by the mere protest of a little band of liberals or intellectuals," the Rev. Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers, widely known clergyman and author of Cambridge, Mass., told the assemblage. Dr. Crothers said "the appeal must be made to the great body of well-meaning citizens." He declared "the liberty we can agree on is that which is defined in the Constitution," and urged that the right of minorities be protected.

Biblical infallibility was cited by Dr. Frank W. Pratt, of Richmond, as the real issue between fundamentalist and modernist. Claiming "this is the struggle today, and the sooner we understand it is the essential struggle which must be fought and won before Christianity can go forward the better we shall be able to do our part," the speaker declared that "when the transfer of religious authority has been made from an infallible book to individual reason and conscience, then evolution can be believed on its own merits."

Address Essentially Legal.

Strong's address essentially was legal. He pointed out that Unitarianism is one of the Christian religions, advancing legal proof to that effect and wound up his speech with the opinion that "the cause of freedom generally will be greatly promoted if the Unitarian Laymen's league continues to lead the liberal forces in the cause of religious and academic freedom."

Announcement was made that the convention will culminate today in services at All Souls' church at 11 a. m.

The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of the church, will preach the sermon on "What All Men Desire." Services will include the ringing of the famous Paul Revere bell, music on the Green Memorial and the Tulloch organs and the ringing of the Robertson chimes, with vocal numbers and congregational singing. Delegates will attend in a body.

Moore Again to Head Waterway Advocates

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Unanimous reelection of J. Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia, as president, selection of Baltimore as the next convention city, and the reports of various committees, brought the annual meeting of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association to a close here last night.

A letter from S. Wallace Dempsey, of New York, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee, was read before the convention. Projects favored by the association were indorsed by Mr. Dempsey, who also stressed the importance of linking the Great Lakes with the Mississippi and with the Atlantic coast by deep waterways.

A letter from Secretary of War Dwight L. Davis gave figures for 1925 to show the increased business done by inland waterways.

Particular reference was made to the Chesapeake and Delaware canal and the Norfolk-Beaufort waterways.

Air Corps of Army May Call Reserves

A recall, with their consent, to active service of perhaps 500 reserve officers of the army air corps, is now predicted unofficially in connection with plans for expansion of the air corps over a five-year period as authorized by Congress.

Ninety per cent of them would serve for periods of a year and 10 per cent for two years, according to plans, and most of them would be detailed with combat squadrons. The program provides for eventually supplying the corps with 1,650 regular officers, 550 reserve officers, 2,200 planes, and 15,000 enlisted men, including 50 flying cadets. There are now slightly in excess of 900 officers, 8,500 enlisted men, and 142 flying cadets.

GEN. KUHN ON WAY TO ATTEND REUNION OF 79TH DIVISION

War-Time Commander to Review Veterans at Sesquicentennial This Week.

COMMITTEE ARRANGES PROGRAM FOR MEETING

Military Turnout, Banquet, Reception and Memorial Services Are Planned.

Encouraged by the responses received at reunion headquarters in Philadelphia, the committee in charge of the reunion of the members of the Seventy-ninth division, which will be held in Philadelphia on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, have announced the tentative program of activities for the event.

Responses indicate the presence in Philadelphia from all parts of eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia, as well as other parts of the country, of several thousand former members of the division. Maj. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn, U. S. A. (retired), their wartime commander, is in Washington on his way to the reunion.

Col. H. Harrison Smith, of Philadelphia, is president of the Seventy-ninth Division association, and he stated here tonight that the Seventy-ninth Division day at the Sesquicentennial exposition Saturday will be the most martial in aspect of any of the special observances thus far held there.

Elks Club Headquarters.

On Friday the reunion headquarters will be opened at the Elks club, Broad and Vine streets, Philadelphia. Members of the association and former members of the division from Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia are directed to apply there for all information and for registration. They will receive badges and program at that time.

It is planned to give Friday afternoon over to visitations at the Sesquicentennial exposition. On Friday evening there will be unit reunions at designated points in the exposition grounds. In a number of instances it will be the first time the men of given units have gotten together since the division was demobilized at Camp Dix in 1919, following its return from France.

On Friday night at 10 o'clock all the officers and men of the division, with their ladies, will assemble in the auditorium at the exposition grounds for dancing. The music on this occasion will be furnished by the Seventy-ninth Division band.

Banquet for Veterans.

Saturday has been named Seventy-ninth Division day at the exposition. On Saturday afternoon an elaborate military celebration will be staged by the regular troops on duty at the exposition in honor of the Seventy-ninth division. This will be reviewed by Maj. Gen. Kuhn. On Saturday afternoon also a special reception will be tendered to the ladies of the division by the ladies' committee of the exposition, under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. Willis Martin.

Saturday night gives promise of being memorable, for that evening all the officers and men of all the divisional units will attend a divisional banquet. The First Regiment armory has been engaged, but if it should prove too small the banquet will be held in the Alpine Haus within the exposition grounds, which has a capacity of 9,000 persons. A brief business meeting of the association will be held in conjunction with the banquet.

On Saturday night while the divisional banquet is being held, the ladies of the division will be tendered a reception to be staged in the gold room of the Elks club at Broad and Vine streets. Chaplain Thomas J. Dickson, ranking chaplain of the A. E. F. during the war, will address the ladies, after which signal corps pictures of the Seventy-ninth division taken in France, will be shown.

On Sunday there will be a Seventy-ninth division memorial service at Valley Forge, to be held at the log cabin of the 314th infantry, which houses many interesting souvenirs of the war. The committee is arranging transportation facilities by bus and train and this is expected to be an impressive ceremonial in honor of the dead of the division.

MARYLAND EXPECTS 400 TO BE ENTERED IN FRESHMAN CLASS

Largest First Year Enrollment in History of College Park Is Predicted.

PRESIDENT R. A. PEARSON HOLDS FIRST RECEPTION

Courses Will Begin Wednesday—Newcomers to Be Guided by Faculty.

With more than 365 already registered in the freshman class at the College Park branch of the University of Maryland and the total expected to reach 400, the largest first-year class in the history of the College Park unit is assured.

Registration began Friday and classes will start Wednesday. Dr. Raymond Allen Pearson, new president of the university, headed the receiving line at a reception given the freshmen Friday evening in Ritchie gymnasium. It was Dr. Pearson's first close contact with the students. Assisting him were members of the faculty. Yesterday registration continued with recreation in the afternoon and movies at night in the auditorium. There will be vesper services this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the gymnasium.

Tomorrow morning freshmen will be given a psychological examination followed by a medical test in the afternoon. A recreation period will end the day.

A general meeting in the gymnasium will be held Tuesday morning followed by a library conference and recreation in the afternoon. Prof. R. W. Carpenter is chairman of the "Freshmen Week" committee whose function is to help the first-year student get through his registration details smoothly and to make him feel at home with the idea that he may begin classes Wednesday promptly and with some idea as to his surroundings.

Student Dance Saturday.

Following the Maryland-Washington college football game next Saturday, a dance will be given by those in charge of the Maryland student publications, in Ritchie gymnasium. Reese Sewell and Dan Fahey are in charge. All students, faculty members and alumni are invited. Any money left after expenses have been paid will go to help defray cost of representatives of the student publications to the convention of intercollegiate editors and business managers at Madison, Wis.

Maryland's new dining hall has opened although it probably will be November before it is fully completed, according to Miss M. Marie Mount, dietician and dean of the College of Home Economics, who has supervision over the hall. There are accommodations for 800 diners on the main floor of the new structure which also will have a cafeteria downstairs and a small dining room for dinner parties upstairs. The building is 130 feet long by 60 feet wide with a wing on the northeast corner for the kitchen and serving room.

Council Seeks Revision.

Suggestion of the student executive council of the university that there be a revision in the matter of final examinations by the committee on instruction may be translated into action, according to indications.

The Diamondback, official weekly publication of students of the university, has just made its first bow of the school year. M. H. Sprecher is editor-in-chief, and other members of the editorial staff are: R. R. Carrington, news editor; Mary Jane McCurdy, co-eds' editor; Geary Eppley, alumni editor, and Egbert F. Tingley, Parker Lee, Ross Black, "Jo" Kelly and Frank Terhune, reporters. Franklin Haller is business manager, and Amos Beachley circulation manager. W. H. Hottel is supervising editor.

Dan Fahey, editor, and Reese Sewell, business manager of the Reveille, student year book, have been on the job sometime and have adopted as their slogan "The best year book Maryland has ever had." Ruth Williams is the girls' editor. Remainder of the staff is yet to be appointed.

"My wife has taken your medicine and has been wonderfully benefited. For over four years she has had trouble with bloating and could scarcely eat any food because of this condition. Doctor's medicines did not help her and an operation was advised. Her brother, who is a druggist, sent her a bottle of MAYR'S and it helped her at once. I cannot praise your medicine enough." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Wife Says She Bought Wedding Breakfast

Charging that she had to take the money given her by her family to buy their wedding breakfast, Mrs. Irene C. McCray, of 3915 Windom place northwest, yesterday filed suit in the District Supreme court for limited divorce and alimony against Wilson F. McCray, an employe of the legal unit of the veterans' bureau. The plaintiff, through her attorneys, Raymond Neudecker and Chapin B. Bauman, alleges cruelty and inadequate support.

Although her husband earns $2,500 a year, Mrs. McCray declares she has been inadequately supported. Love letters, purported to have been written to her husband by a young woman, were alleged to have been found by Mrs. McCray, who asks the court for the custody of their two children and an order prohibiting McCray from molesting her.

GERMANY INCREASES DEMANDS FOR WHEAT

Increased German demand for hard, bread-making wheat and the higher grades of American cotton, but with little likelihood of an immediate increase in demand for foreign pork, dairy products and meats, are reported by William A. Schoenfeld, of the Department of Agriculture, just returned from two years' service as American agricultural representative at Berlin.

"Europeans generally," said Mr. Schoenfeld, "are eating wheat bread, as contrasted with poor-quality war bread and prewar rye bread. Germany is unable, for climatic reasons, to produce hard, glutinous wheat, with the result that an increasing demand for this quality of grain from the United States may be expected. Cotton goods production is developing along the line of higher quality fabrics, so that an increasing demand for American cotton of the higher grades also may be looked for."

The general standard of living of German and other European people has been raised greatly since the war, Mr. Schoenfeld pointed out, but they are determined upon a fixed policy of meeting the demand with home products. Domestic production of dairy products, pork and other meats is expanding, with the result that smaller quantities of these products will have to be imported.

Elevating Church Music Undertaken

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—In an effort to elevate the standards of church music in America, a special department of church and choral music will be established at Northwestern university this fall under Dean P. C. Lutkin, widely known authority on church music.

Several noted leaders in church music have been obtainced as special lecturers.

"There is a definite need for such a department," said Dean Lutkin, "to provide an educational program especially designed to train talented young musicians in church music, choral conducting and choral composition.

Music has played a tremendous role in the religious life of the world, and properly used, it is a vital and essential function."

DISTRICT EMPLOYES FACING REPAYMENT OF TRAVEL MONEYS

McCarl Rules Congress Has Made No Specific Appropriation for Trips.

PROTEST IS LODGED BY AUDITOR DONOVAN

Says if Precedent Is Nullified There Must Be Refunding Dating to 1878.

Do District employes who have traveled on official business face refunding money they have been paid to cover their expenses on such trips dating back to 1878?

This question hangs on the outcome of another dispute between Comptroller General John R. McCarl and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor.

A year ago O. E Fearn, superintendent of machinery of the fire department, made a trip to Louisville, Ky., and Indianapolis, Ind., to inspect improved motor fire apparatus and observe the repair shop practice of the fire departments of those cities. The commissioners authorized him to spend not to exceed $175 for traveling expenses. His expenses amounted to $103 and he was reimbursed from the general appropriation of the department.

Bill Paid Year Ago.

Now, after the bill has been paid for a year, Comptroller General McCarl disallows the bill. He recently sent to the commissioners a communication stating that the money was illegally paid because there was no specific appropriation for the purpose of travel and saying that general appropriations can not be drawn upon for traveling expense.

The commissioners referred the communication to Maj. Donovan, who has submitted to them a report on it, holding that the comptroller general was wrong. Donovan's report cites as a precedent what he avers is the only case in which the general accounting office was called upon to decide the question.

He says in 1910 a police detective was summoned to Camden, N. J., to testify before a United States commissioner. At that time the question was raised whether the expense of the trip should be borne by the Federal or District government. The comptroller of the Treasury ruled that it should be met from the general appropriation of the police department. That department had no specific appropriation for traveling expenses.

"This is not an isolated case," said Maj. Donovan. "Since the organization of the present local government in 1878, departments have paid, out of their general funds, expenses of employes who have traveled on business incidental to and necessary for the work of the departments.

"It is an established custom and has not heretofore been challenged. Congress has known about it and it was discussed before the appropriations committee of the House at the last session.

"If Fearn is to be made to pay back the money, then every employe who has traveled since 1878 may be made to do likewise. If they refuse to pay, the only recourse is to obtain remedial legislation or invite the Attorney General to sue the respective disbursing officers on their bonds. Such a suit would not last long in court, in my opinion."

The commissioners sent McCarl a letter, inclosing Maj. Donovan's report and asking him to reconsider his decision.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

Due to an error, the scores of the leaders in the recent masters' tournament held at Chicago appeared in last Sunday's column incorrectly. In order that no injustice may be done to any participant in that famous tourney, we will once more give a complete list of the final standing of the players.

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Marshall.....	8½	3½	Lasker.....	6	6
Maroczy.....	8	4	Pink.....	5	7
Torre.....	8	4	Banks.....	4½	7½
Jaffe.....	7½	4½	Chajes.....	4	8
Kupchik.....	7½	4½	Showalter.....	3	9
Kashdan.....	7	5	Isaacs.....	2½	9½
Factor.....	6½	5½

Some indication of the closeness of the struggle may be gleaned from the fact that no participant was able to go through his entire schedule without the loss of more than a single game. Marshall, the winner of first prize, gave the best of evidence as to his fine mental courage when he met a delicate situation by defeating both Moroczy and Showalter in the final rounds after losing to Newell Banks, United States checker champion, in round nine and meeting a reverse at the hands of Torre in the eleventh round.

Maroczy also lost but two games; one to Torre in the ninth round and the second to Marshall in the twelfth. He struggled mightily but was unable to rise to the heights under such straining circumstances. Torre bowed to Jaffe in the first round and did not lower his colors again until he lost to Lasker in the final round. Again the strain proved too much, and the Mexican champion felt his defeat keenly. Seeing the honors slip from one's grasp by so slight a margin under such trying conditions of combative struggle is heartbreaking. In modern master tourneys the price of glory is always obtained at the expense of great mental strain with which those at the lower end of the rating fortunately, or unfortunately, need not contend.

Jaffe and Kupchik also labored under high tension until the final rounds and both performed creditably. Each lost three games and Kupchik emerged the victor in their individual encounter.

Four games in which each contestant was unquestionably giving the very best he was then capable of, with the coveted honors hanging by a hair, are appended. It is unfortunate that the reader, nonchalantly pushing the wood over his board and following the moves critically, can not be made to run the gauntlet of emotions which the players themselves experienced in making those moves. Were he able to do so, and could but the veriest fraction of that element of fight and struggle be retained in the printed score, then indeed would chess be universal in its appeal to each individual as a man.

2,563 GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES SHIFTED TO NEW QUARTERS

TRANSFERS OCCUPIED MORE THAN 3 MONTHS

Seven Complete Libraries Put on New Shelves; 1,958 Motor Truck Loads Hauled.

The public buildings commission's "moving day" for various government offices is over. The "day" was a long one, lasting from June 9 to September 17, and a great amount of moving was done. The commission, under direction of Maj. U. S. Grant 3d, acting chairman, successfully accomplished what it set out to do, and five large sections of Federal activity were transferred to other locations in the interest of consolidation, efficiency and economy.

More than 40,000 square feet of floor space previously unoccupied has been reclaimed for use by the arrangement. Two thousand five hundred and sixty-three government workers had their place of work changed.

The bureau of mines, with 225 employes, was moved from the Interior building to the Winder building, Seventeenth and F streets. The office of the general counsel of the internal revenue bureau was moved from the Interior building to the Walker-Johnson building on New York avenue between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. Three hundred and eighty employes were affected by this change.

Other Moves Effected.

Other moves and numbers of workers concerned were: Office of the solicitor of the Treasury, from the Interior to the Walker-Johnson building, 19; bureau of pensions, from the Pension building to the Interior building, 739; general accounting office, from the Winder, Walker-Johnson, Ordnance and Treasury buildings to the Pension building, 1,200.

In order to house the bureau of pensions in the Interior building, the following internal moves were necessitated there: Division of forms, from the Eighteenth street side of the basement to the F street side; land office books and maps, from the basement to the ground floor; geological survey rock samples, from basement to ground floor and from the second to third floor; Federal employes' compensation commission, from the third and sixth floors to the fourth floor.

The Federal power commission was moved from the first and second floors to the sixth; the fine arts commission, from the ground to the third floor; the board of Indian commissioners, from the second to third floor; the bureau of education, from the basement and fourth floors to the sixth floor, and the supply division office, from the first floor, F street side, to the first floor, center wing.

Seven Libraries Shifted.

Seven libraries were moved—those of the bureau of mines, general counsel of the internal revenue bureau, solicitor of the Treasury, bureau of pensions, general accounting office, Federal power commission, and the bureau of education.

There were 1,958 motor truck loads of records, books and furniture transferred. Four trucks of the office of public buildings and public parks of the National Capital hauled 1,245 loads; two navy yard trucks hauled 372; two government printing office trucks, 277; one government fuel yard truck, 46, and one Treasury truck, 18.

There were 2,413 desks among the more conspicuous articles of furniture moved; 3,596 chairs, 3,175 file cases and cabinets, 1,583 sectional bookcases, 308 adding machines, 723 typewriters, 561 tables and 251 mirrors. Six million files were transferred from the Pension building office.

Pension office files removal required the building of special wooden cases to keep them in consecutive order in transit.

Cases were lowered from the gallery floor of the Pension building to ground floor loading platforms of the Pension building, by means of hydraulic lifts. Special cases were also built for transportation of books of the various libraries.

Special Equipment Used.

Wooden chutes running from windows on upper floors of various buildings to loading trucks below, hastened the work of moving, this method emptying the second floor of the Ordnance building of general accounting office files in a day and a half instead of four days, as originally estimated.

Heavy material, such as safes, metal desks and cabinets, were handled between trucks and windows by means of block and tackles operated by expert riggers from the navy yard.

Public buildings commission officials explained yesterday that had more intermediate space been available, the moves could have been completed in much shorter time. Under existing conditions, the west end of the rotunda of the Pension building offered the only space available, and several departments were set up in temporary operation here while new quarters were made available for them. This temporary space afforded room for 100 desks and as many as 300 workers at various times.

A list of the consecutive moves follows:

The rearrangement included, first, removal of bureau of pensions offices, furniture, fixtures and files from the third to the first floor in the Pension building.

This was followed by the transfer of the general accounting office divisions from the Winder and Walker-Johnson buildings to the Pension building. Bureau of mines activities were next moved from the Interior building to the Winder building, and the force of the general counsel of the internal revenue bureau was changed from the Interior building and given a new home in the Walker-Johnson building.

Bureau of pensions activities on the first floor of the Pension building to the Interior building; the general accounting office from the Walker-Johnson building to space vacated by pension bureau offices leaving the first floor of the Pension building were also included.

Other work cared for involved transfer of the general accounting office from the Treasury building into the second floor of the Pension building; rearrangement of the offices of the solicitor of the Treasury in the Treasury building and general accounting office divisions located at 1800 E street into the Pension building.

MANY SKYSCRAPERS RISE IN SAN FRANCISCO

Type Is Found Safest and Best in Withstanding Earth Tremors.

San Francisco, Sept. 1f (By A. P.).—Puncturing aesthetic opposition and thrusting aside fear of damage from seismic disturbances, the sky scraper definitely has triumphed on the Pacific coast.

At present the upward movement in skyline readjustment centers in San Francisco, the one large American city that has been tested by earthquakes.

Now under construction in San Francisco within two city blocks of each other are two office buildings, one of which is to rise to 31 stories and the other to 27.

Construction of office buildings exceeding 20 stories in height began in 1922 when an oil company erected a 22-story building for its home office and a 26-story building of the new vertical New York style of architecture was put up to house the Pacific coast headquarters of the telephone company.

Survival of every Class A steel frame building erected before the earthquake of 1906 proves, in the opinion of engineers, that this type of building is the safest and best in withstanding earth tremors. This also was demonstrated in the Santa Barbara quake.

ILLINOIS LABOR ACCEPTS CARAWAY EXPLANATION

Senator Accused J. H. Walker of Big Primary Fund in Good Faith, He Says.

INFORMANT G. O. P. CHIEF

Streator, Ill., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Thaddeus H. Caraway, Democratic senator from Arkansas, satisfied the Illinois Federation of Labor today that charges repeated by him in the Senate, linking President John H. Walker, of the federation, with large expenditures in the Illinois Republican senatorial primary campaign were made in good faith.

Caraway did not name the source of the information he had when he told the Senate he would like to know "how much money was received by John H. Walker" in the senatorial primary, but he said it came from one of the most prominent Republicans in Illinois, and promises his name later if the informer consented. Satisfied with this, the federation withheld a resolution censoring Caraway for repetition of the charges, and passed instead a resolution affirming its complete confidence in Walker.

Walker flatly denied any handling of funds in the Republican primary campaign between Col. Frank L. Smith and Senator William B. McKinley, and said Caraway had made a charge against him "by indirection and in a cowardly way." The labor executive had sought ever since the charges were made to find out their source, and federation representatives sought to file a denial with the Senate campaign funds committee which developed campaign expenditures by Smith of more than $250,000 and by McKinley of more than $350,000. Senator James A. Reed (Democrat), Missouri, chairman of the committee, admitted part of the denial after ruling out portions which the committee regarded as an attack on Caraway.

Sargent's Wyndham Painting Is for Sale

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—One of Sargent's most famous pictures—the Wyndham group—is for sale, says the Daily Express. The picture comprises portraits of three sisters, Lady Elcho, Mrs. Tennant and Mrs. Adeane, aunts of the present owner, Capt. Guy Wyndham.

Recalling the high value placed on Sargent's works and the astonishing prices realized at the sale of his smaller works after his death, the Daily Express suggests that the picture for sale likely will fetch a large sum. It says it has learned that £25,000 (about $125,000) was offered for it recently.

St. John, Newfoundland, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The cattleship Winona County, of the Oriole line, American merchant marine, was on fire today at Sand point. The blaze, believed to have started in one of the vessel's lower holds, was fought with team.

Shoot Gunmen First, Dever Orders Police

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 18 (By A. P.). "Shoot to kill," orders were issued by Mayor Dever today when he heard reports that two rival bootlegging gangs were preparing to fight with guns for control of the illicit liquor traffic in Chicago. Heads of the police department were told to exterminate the gunmen gangsters, bandits and other outlaws, "to shoot first and show no quarter."

Police officials reported they had not heard of a new bootleggers' war.

SECOND TRAIN WRECK LAID TO VANDALISM

Marion Talley Among Those Shaken Up by Crash on Arkansas Road.

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The second deliberate wrecking of a St. Louis-bound railroad passenger train within a week occurred late last night when train No. 806, of the Frisco, known as the Memphian, ran into an open switch at Harvard, Ark. Two trainmen were injured.

Investigation disclosed, it was announced from the office of President Kurn, of the railroad here, that a switching crew passed over the switch only 12 minutes before the passenger and found the switch properly set. This led to the conclusion that the switch was tampered with.

The Sunshine Special, of the Missouri Pacific was wrecked last Monday night at McGehee, Ark., killing the engineer and fireman and injuring 20 others. Investigation disclosed that angle bars had been removed.

Primary Law Repeal Before Ohio Voters

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Secretary of State Thad Brown announced tonight that he would certify the proposal to cancel the direct primary method of nominating candidates for office to voters in the November election.

Brown's statement followed his receipt of petitions bearing a sufficient number of signatures asking that the quetsion be set before the voters of the State. An appeal to the supreme court is the only recourse of those who oppose the repeal movement, Brown said.

REGINALD VANDERBILT POOR MAN AT DEATH

Estate Insufficient to Pay Debts, Funeral Costs or Settlement.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The personal estate of the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt was insufficient to pay his debts, meet the expenses of the funeral, support the family, or pay for the settlement of the estate, his executor has revealed. The condition of the Vanderbilt estate was disclosed in the filing of a routine petition by James R. Deering, of New York, executor under the will, with the probate court at Portsmouth.

Reginald Vanderbilt died last September. When his will was probated later in the month, estimates of his wealth ranged from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000. Mr. Deering's petition revealed, however, that he had little more than the $5,000,000 trust fund, the principal of which he could not use, under the provisions of the will of his father, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt. This trust fund has gone in equal shares to his two daughters, Mrs. Harry C. Cushing 3d, and his infant daughter, Gloria Vanderbilt.

STATE DEPARTMENT ATTACHE CONQUERS MT. RAINIER SUMMIT

William M. Gwynn Battles Way Over Wilderness of Ice to Peak 14,408 Feet High.

EXPLORES STEAM CAVES IN CRATER OF VOLCANO

Paradise Inn, Rainier National Park, Wash., Sept. 18.—Battling his way over a wilderness of ice, across bottomless crevices and along rocky ledges at the very edge of infinity, to nearly 3 miles above sea level, William M. Gwynn, of the State Department, reached the summit of Mount Rainier, 14,408 feet high, in Rainier National park, a few days ago.

Rainier is the highest perpetually snow-capped peak in the United States and is rated by mountaineers to be one of the most difficult mountains in the world to scale. Prospective climbers, therefore, are submitted to a thorough scrutiny before permission to attempt the ascent is given. Only the most hardy are allowed to make the trip.

Gwynn began his climb from Paradise Inn, 5,557 feet above sea level. He left the inn shortly after 1:30 in the afternoon and Camp Muir, the government shelter cabins at the 10,000-foot level, half way up, was reached at 7:15 p. m.

Reach Extinct Crater.

Here the party rested until 2:45 the next morning, when the drive for the summit was begun. First in the moonlight and later in the rising sun, they pushed on, arriving at the crater in the summit of the mountain at about 9:30. An indication of the difficulty of the climb may be gained from the fact that as the party neared the summit, only 15 or 20 steps could be taken between rests. They were forced to rest standing, as reclining in the snow and rising again would consume too much greatly-needed energy.

The party spent about an hour and a half in the fantastic steam caves in the crater of the extinct volcano, sleeping and resting. The return trip was begun at about 11, and Paradise valley again reached at 5 p. m.

Gwynn had as his guide, Stuart Twiss, assisted by Nelson Widman, both experienced members of the Rainier National park guide corps, a body of highly-trained mountaineers.

Unique Walking Stick Given to Isaac Gans

A unique walking stick, made entirely of materials gathered in the Panama Canal zone, was presented recently to Isaac Gans by Philip B. Keefer, of this city, who has spent sixteen years and nine months in the vicinity of the canal.

The lower part of the cane was sawed from a log of bullit wood found 80 feet below sea level in excavating for the Gatun locks. The log was found in 1908, the same year that bullit wood was discovered. The handle is made of wire con wood taken from a cross tie which was part of the old railroad used by the French in 1852. The wood never rots, and is so hard that a nail cannot be driven into it. Midway between the lower body and the handle of the cane is a white ring of ivory nut, plentiful in the canal territory.

Miss Janet Fish Head Of Emergency Nurses

Miss Janet Fish, sister of Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, yesterday was accepted by the Emergency hospital board of governors as superintendent of nurses. The board, consisting of Woodbury Blair, chairman; George W. White, Harry King, Col. Edward Clifford, Dr. Harry Kaufman and B. B. Sandidge, announced that Miss Fish would start on her new duties October 1.

Bell Opposes Permit To Extend Bus Line

Lieut. Col. J. Franklin Bell, engineer commissioner, yesterday refused to sign an order to permit Leon Arnold's Battery Park-Edgemoor motorbus line to cross the District line and traverse Connecticut avenue as far as Livingston street.

He said he would consider the matter and might eventually agree to a modified plan, but that he did not think so. He is averse to setting a precedent for letting a new traction line compete with existing lines and is also understood to desire to keep as many large vehicles as possible out of the congested traffic streams.

ORDER TO CONTINUE STATUE DECORATION

Sons of Revolution to Place Tributes on Monuments of Three Heroes.

Arrangements to continue the decorating of statues of revolutionary heroes in the District were made by the board of managers of the Sons of the Revolution in the District of Columbia, at the first fall meeting of the board, Friday.

Floral tributes will be placed on the statue of John Marshall, Friday; Count Casimer Pulaski, October 11, and Baron von Steuben, November 15. October 11 is the anniversary of the day Count Pulaski met his death aboard the United States brig Wasp, while September 24 and November 4 are anniversaries of the births of Marshall and Von Steuben.

The board this fall will conduct its annual prize essay contest on a revolutionary subject among students in the public and private schools of the District. The successful essay will be read at the public celebration of Washington's birthday. A committee has been appointed to participate in the celebration. New members elected Friday were Lieut. Comdr. Glenmore F. Clark, Col. Robert M. Thompson and Percy R. Van Kirk.

HOUSE DISTRICT QUIZ SET TO BEGIN FRIDAY

McLeod Issues Call to Committee to Meet; Capper in Capital.

Friday has now been set as a tentative day for beginning the investigation of local affairs by the House District committee. Representative McLeod, of Michigan, has written to members of the committee asking them to be present in Washington on that day. It had been planned to start the inquiry tomorrow, and it is not unlikely that some of the members will be here.

The office of Representative Gibson, of Vermont, who, because he headed the previous investigating committee, is expected to be elected chairman of the new inquiry, has been opened and Mr. Gibson, himself is expected to be here tomorrow or next day.

Senator Capper, chairman of the Senate District committee, arrived in the city yesterday. He plans to get members of his committee together at their convenience for a study of local affairs and with a view to formulating a program for the short session of Congress. Before the arrival of the other members he plans to devote his time to studying local needs. He is particularly interested in traction matters.

FORGET-ME-NOT DRIVE INDORSED BY OFFICIALS

War Workers Also Have Volunteers to Assist on October 2.

COMMITTEES ARE NAMED

The annual forget-me-not drive to be held October 2 by the District of Columbia department of the Disabled American Veterans, approved by President Coolidge and Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans bureau, was ordered last week by the District commissioners, Archbishop Michael Curley and Bishop William F. McDowell.

At a meeting of the chairmen of the various committees last week plans were made to enlist the aid of girls and women to sell the flowers in all public places where permission has been granted. The American War Mothers has volunteered to assist in the drive.

Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, president of the Federation of District Patriotic societies, joined the workers last week. According to Commander George W. Phillips, the liaison service which the organization has maintained in the Veterans bureau, will depend for its continuance upon the success of the forget-me-not drive. The committees is Frank M. Owens, accounting; F. W. Patterson, publicity; Z. W. Alderman, individual sellers; Fred Kochli, club contacts, and Ralph L. Chambers, distribution.

BELL'S AID HAS HARD JOB ON HIS FIRST DAY

Purchase of School Sites Under Congress' Handicap, Is Atkins' Assignment.

Maj. Layson E. Atkins, new assistant to J. Franklin Bell, engineer commissioner, reported for duty yesterday.

As his first assignment he was thrust directly into the difficulty of purchasing new school sites under the handicap imposed by Congress at the last session, which forbids purchase of land for more than 25 per cent in excess of assessed valuations.

He also was given the task of arranging for more sightly development of grounds surrounding schools erected recently, including the New Brightwood, John G. Whittier, George Truesdell, Job Barnard and James F. Oyster schools.

Memorial Organ Dedictaion Sunday

A new organ, to be known as the E. B. Bagby Memorial organ, in memory of the first pastor of the church, is being installed in the Columbia Heights Christian church, 1435 Park road northwest.

Dedication services will be held at the church by the Rev. Harvey Baker Smith, next Sunday, provided installation is completed by that time. The organ was built and is being erected in the church by the Moller Organ Co., of Hagerstown, Md.

Man Critically Wounded.

Critically wounded as the result of an altercation in an alley at Seventeenth street and Seaton place northwest, yesterday, Clarence Dixon, colored, 30 years old, 1723 Willard place northwest, is in Freedmen's hospital with slight chance of recovery. His assailant, who police report was William Jackson, also colored, 1765 Seaton place, fled following the shooting. The bullet penetrated Dixon's abdomen.

Guard Committee to Meet.

The executive committee of the National Guard association of the United States will meet at the Lafayette hotel tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, to discuss association affairs for the last year and consider and approve a program for the annual convention at Louisville, Ky., November 17 to 19.

War Veterans' Club To Hold Golf Tourney

A golf tournament, to be held the first week in October on the East Potomac park golf course, will be the opening gun of an extensive social season of the American War Veterans' club.

The next meeting of the organization will be held at the Mayflower hotel, Friday night, at 8 o'clock. Lieut. Col. Fred Butterfield Ryons is president of the organization.

School Convention Fare Cut.

A reduction of 25 per cent in the round-trip fare to Dallas, Tex., for those attending the department of superintendence convention in that city February 27 to March 3, 1927, was announced yesterday by S. D. Shankland, secretary of the organization.

COLORED POLITICIANS SEEK LIBERIAN POST

New Yorker and West Virginian Leading Candidates for Vacant Ministership.

The post of minister to the Liberian republic, vacant since the resignation of Solomon Porter Hood, is being sought by a large number of colored politicians, it was learned yesterday. The name of Charles E. Mitchell, of Institute, W. Va., and that of George W. Harris, of New York, often are spoken of in connection with the ministership, which carries with it a salary of $5,000 believed likely to be increased to $10,000 by the next Congress.

Mitchell is a certified public accountant and banker, and it is believed Senator Guy D. Goff is interested in his candidacy. As the position of recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia is held by a West Virginian, Arthur D. Froe, colored politicians have expressed the belief another position of the importance of the Liberian ministership will not be given that State.

On the other hand, the negro vote in New York State is divided because of recognition by Democratic organizations, which is considered favorable to the Harris candidacy. At present the American consul at Monrovia, holding a first-class post, is regarded as the personal representative of the President, leading to the conclusion, in some circles, that the post will not be filled by appointment of a colored man.

There's Special Call during the hot weather months for part-time workers in seasonal businesses. Keep abreast of these opportunities by keeping your eye on The Post's Help Wanted ad columns.

Cheese Investigator's Auto Bill Is Rejected

Robert E. Hardell, a Department of Agriculture worker, described as a "cheese-making investigator," was the subject of a decision handed down yesterday by Comptroller General McCarl. It is Hardell's job to go about the country investigating cheese factories.

For the last three years Hardell has been using an automobile that was hired out to the Department of Agriculture by his brother, John W. Hardell, on a basis of 14 cents a mile. Commercial garages had been charging Robert Hardell 15 cents a mile. Comptroller McCarl, in his decision on the case, said that while the arrangements seemed "bona fide and innocent," it was clearly a subterfuge to avoid the law which allows only 7 cents a mile.

Work, Half Completed, Likely to Cut Down Government's Rental Bill.

200 CARRY ON THRIFT DRIVE OVER COUNTRY

Reallocations in Department Space to Follow Completion Due in Three Months.

In an effort to save the Federal government millions of dollars annually in building rentals and construction, a nation-wide survey of all government owned and leased realty has been instituted by H. C. Smither, chief coordinator, under the bureau of the budget.

The survey will include all Federal property with the exception of that in the District of Columbia and realty owned and leased by the Postoffice Department.

D. P. Quinlan, assistant to the chief coordinator, explained that with such data as will be furnished by the survey, many reallocations in space can be made. He believes considerable economy will be effected from the contemplated changes.

The purpose of the survey will be to find how much space each department has at its disposal.

The office of the chief coordinator can compute how much is necessary for each department, based on the number of persons employed and the physical conditions peculiar to the work. Computations will be made on such a basis when the information is obtained from the survey.

Can Allot Space.

Smither has authority to allot space for governmental work, and reallotments will be made when the data gathered indicates it is warranted. Quinlan believes many departments have more space than they need, while others have not enough.

No attempt will be made to house government activities in cramped quarters, Quinlan explained, but will be to use the space already available to the best advantage.

According to Quinlan, the coordinator's office has been able within the last month to concentrate Federal activities in four or five cities with a net rental saving of more than $200,000. New Orleans was one city mentioned, where a large saving is expected to result from concentration.

The survey is only half completed. It was started three months ago and will be finished three months hence. It is being conducted by 200 area coordinators stationed throughout the country.

An idea of how comprehensive that data being sought in the survey is may be obtained from the bulletin being sent out to all heads of departments. It reads, in part:

"1. In order that the records of the Federal real estate board covering government-owned real estate may be brought up to date, it is requested that information be furnished the secretary, Room 240, Arington building, as follows:

(1) Name, location and brief description of property.

(2) To whom transferred and method of disposal.

(3) Price (if sold).

"(b) A list of all parcels of real estate acquired since January 1, 1922, giving the following information concerning each parcel—

(1) Location and name of property.

(2) Area and cost of land.

(3) How and when acquired.

(4) Description and cost of buildings and improvements.

"2. It also is requested that each future disposal or purchase of government-owned real estate be reported to the board in the same manner as soon as it has been completed."

CITY SCHOOL PLANS WILL BE EXPLAINED IN POST RADIO HOUR

Mrs. Hodgkins, of Board of Education, Will Give Brief Talk Tomorrow Night.

HARP, VIOLIN AND VOICE ON MUSICAL PROGRAM

Carbauh Concert Company, Back From New England Tour, Will Be Heard.

Music and two brief talks will be included in The Post biweekly radio program from WRC, Radio Corporation of America station, at 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

With the start of the 1926-27 school season this week, interest is centered in matters of educational import. Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, wife of Prof. Hodgkins, of George Washington university and member of the District of Columbia school board, will speak on a topic of interest to parents and children. This fall will mark the beginning of several changes in local school plans and policies.

In her talk on "Little Journeys Around Washington," Elisabeth E. Poe will describe the early history of the Capitol. The corner stone of the Capitol was laid by George Washington September 18, 1793, six years almost to a day after the adoption by the convention of the United States Constitution. Monday is also the 142d anniversary of the publication of the first daily newspaper in this country, the American Daily Advertiser of Philadelphia.

Harp on the Radio.

The first musical presentation of the hour will be harp, violin and voice selections by Elisabeth and Mary Keyes. These young women, one of whom is an experienced chemist in the employ of the United States geophysical laboratory, appeared successfully in local radio programs last year; their reappearance has been requested frequently. The harp selections will be the first presented on Post programs this season.

The Carbauh Concert Co., Earl Carbauh, barytone; Bob Carbauh, xylophone player, and Lillian Carbauh, accompanist, who have just returned from a Chautauqua tour through 150 New England cities and towns, will give a diversified program of vocal and instrumental music. The trio have arranged selections new to the radio audience.

In response to the last Post hour, W. C. O'Brien, 809 F street northeast, wrote: "I very much enjoyed the Post radio hour Monday evening. I was particularly impressed by the tenor soloist, James A. Barr. Another writer, George Gaviston stated: "Several numbers on The Post program were highly enjoyable. Also enjoyed the young lady's (Ruth Linder) piano solo and the several selections by the Columbia trio. Don't like these musical numbers with prosaic discussions of public questions on both sides of them." This is a welcome criticism, the programs are now arranged to include a minimum of talks on current or historical topics.

TRIO TO BE HEARD IN POST HOUR

Paine.

The Carbauh trio, Earle Carbauh, barytone; Lillian Carbauh, pianist, and Bob Carbauh, xylophone player, will be heard during Post hour from WRC at 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

HUGH M SMITH GETS POST

Hugh M. Smith on September 7 became head of the radio department of Frank Kiernan Co., of New York. Mr. Smith, during his seventeen years' general experience in advertising and merchandising, has specialized in the electrical and radio field which makes him particularly well qualified for his new position.

Among his successes in the radio field have been the advertising campaigns for the Weston instantchange radio plug, manufactured by the Weston Electrical Instrument Co., Newark, N. J., and for "Amperite," manufactured by the Radiall Co., of New York.

RADIO STATIONS COST $50,000 TO $250,000

During the recent discussion on the authority of Secretary Hoover as radio czar it was shown that it costs from $50,000 to $250,000 to build, equip and place a broadcasting station in operation. There are 536 stations operating on the 89 available wave lengths. Simple arithmetic shows how these stations must be dividing time to avoid interference. It is impossible to put 600 more stations on the available wave lengths and justify even the minimum investment.

It becomes necessary for some one to say who may and who may not broadcast, and there is no doubt that as soon as Congress convenes in December adequate legislation will be provided, placing this power in the hands of either the Secretary of Commerce or a separate radio commission. When this takes place many will certainly be shut out, and it is logical to believe that those who have pioneered in the art and who have maintained adequate and improving service should be given prior consideration.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR WRC AUDIENCE

A. ATWATER KENT PLANS OPERA STARS' PROGRAM

WJZ and Affiliated Studios Will Put on Air Collegiate Football Games.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicans will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall.

Westinghouse station, WRZ, Springfield, Mass., will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far West as the Mississippi river.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Frances Alda to Sing.

Announcement was made today by A. Atwater Kent, of Philadelphia, that starting Sunday evening, October 3, he will begin the broadcasting of a new series of weekly programs by nationally famous grand, opera and concert artists. Among those already scheduled for early appearance in the new Atwater Kent series are Frances Alda, Lucrezia Bori, Madame Schumann-Heink, Frieda Hempel, Josef Hofmann, Edward Johnson, Albert Spalding, Maria Kurenko, Louise Homer, Reinald Werrenrath, Margaret Matzenauer, Mary Lewis, Rosa Ponselle and Charles Hackett.

The listening audience will not want for sports broadcast during the coming autumn season according to the schedule of collegiate football games to be broadcast by station WJZ and affiliated stations, which has recently been made public. In the nine games scheduled for broadcasting, the team of one of the "Big Three' colleges will compete in seven, while in one of the remaining two games, the Navy will battle the University of Michigan. In the other Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania gridiron clash will be described. The annual Army-Navy clash has not been definitely booked because it will take place in Chicago, which is out of WJZ's present wireline system, but it is possible that this game will be included in the schedule.

Doubleday-Hill Adds Items to Radio Lines

In addition to its Freed-Eisemann and Crosley radio lines, Doubleday-Hill Electric Co. has stocked the Pathe loud speaker. Lieut. J. L. Allen, of the United States naval research laboratory, commended the speaker to W. H. Anthony, jr. "The Pathe speaker which I tested over the week-end I am enthusiastic about," he said. "The quality is wonderful."

A combined power amplified and "B" eliminator, operating from house current, is another unit introduced by the Doubleday-Hill Electric Co. It is called the powerizer. Although this firm no longer distributes Radio Corporation receiving sets, it continues as wholesale distributor of RCA radio tubes.

A radio store will be opened Wednesday in the location formerly occupied by the Fraternity Shop, 1217 H street northwest. J. Fred Huber, who until recently occupied part of the store of McHugh & Lawson, 1222 G street northwest, is owner.

Standard radio equipment, featuring Atwater-Kent, Radio Corporation of America and Stromberg-Carlson receiving sets will be carried, also a complete line of accessories. Aerial and repair service of guaranteed dependability will be maintained by the manager and his assistants. On the H street front of the store an elaborate score-board showing by electric lights the details of the world series games has been prepared for use during the coming series; the board will indicate returns received by radio.

For several years Mr. Huber was prominent here in football, boxing, wrestling and baseball. During the world war he was appointed by the mayor of Panama referee of boxing bouts in the Canal zone. He was selected by Gen. Clarence E. Edwards to assume charge of the enlisted men's club and was a director of the Y. M. C. A. in the Canal zone. Mr. Huber entered the commercial radio field in Washington when interest in broadcasting was first aroused and for several years was manager of the radio department of Lansburgh & Brother.

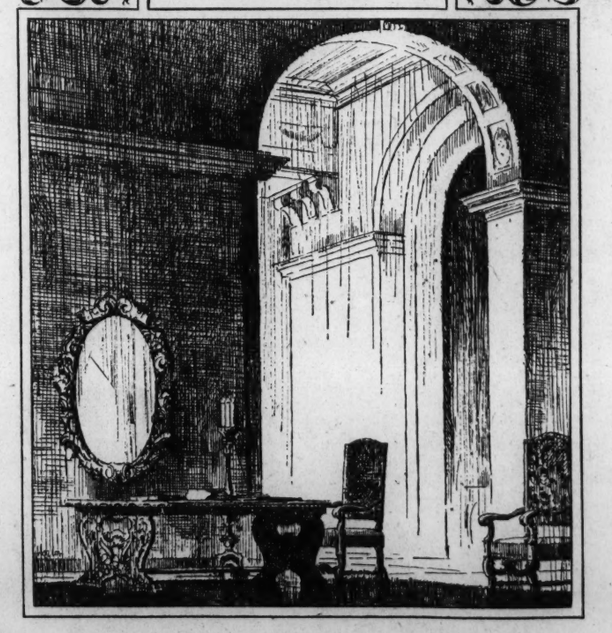
CARLTON HOTEL



An hotel that combines American facilities with the best traditions of European service

You who in Europe have sighed for American conveniences, and in America have missed the intimate charm of the de luxe hotel abroad, will rejoice in the Carlton Hotel in Washington. For here is the Continental standard of service in a setting that is as luxurious and comfortable as modern art and science can make it. Here the visiting nobility find their language spoken by their countrymen, their dishes prepared by an internationally famous chef, their rank respected by proper address from those who know whether to say "My lord," or "Signor le duce," or "Monsieur le comte."

To preserve the intimacy of the hotel, the number of rooms has been limited to 257, only a few of which are available singly, the majority being arranged en suite for families, diplomatic missions, touring nobility and royalty. It is suggested that reservations be made well in advance. Guests for whom accommodations are reserved are taken directly to their rooms, where a clerk registers them individually.

TWICE-A-DAY

REMOVE FILM FROM TEETH IS PRESENT-DAY DENTAL ADVICE

The FILM ON TEETH to Which Most "Off-Color" Teeth and Many Serious Tooth and Gum Disorders are Ascribed

BECAUSE tooth and gum disorders are now scientifically traced largely to a film that forms on teeth, which ordinary brushing fails to remove successfully, a radically different way in tooth cleansing is being widely adopted.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel a film—a slippery, viscous coating.

Film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. That is why, according to leading dental opinion, teeth look dingy and "off color."

Film clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It invites and breeds the germs of decay. And that is why it is judged so grave a danger to the teeth by authorities.

Film is the basis of tartar. And tartar, with germs, is the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why regular film removal is urged as probably first in correct gum protection.

Most dental authorities urgently advise thorough film removal at least twice each day. That is, every morning and every night.

For that purpose, obtain Pepsodent, the special film-removing dentifrice which leading dental authorities favor. Different from any other tooth paste.

Pepsodent curdles the film, then removes it; then polishes the teeth in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay and scientifically firms the gums. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And meets, thus, in all ways, the exactments of modern dental science.

On dental advice, people are adopting this new way of tooth cleansing. Obtain Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, at drug stores. Two months' supply at a moderate price—or send coupon for 10-day tube. Use twice every day. See your dentist twice each year. Make both a habit.

LACOSTE WINS U. S. NET TITLE; NATS DEFEATED; CARDS DIVIDE; REDS LOSE; VON ELM TRIUMPHS

Detroit Wins By Rally in 9th, 5-4

Three Pinch Batsmen Solve Marberry and Crowder Near End.

Triple by Cobb Ties Score; Nationals Assume Lead.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

DETROIT, Sept. 18.—Reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Ty Cobb is not yet "through" as a ball player and he convinced the Nationals of this fact here this afternoon when, in a pinch hitting role with one on the sacks, he tripled and later scored on a blow from Harry Heilmann's bat, these two runs giving the Tigers a 6 to 5 victory over Washington.

Until this final rally was staged, the Nats almost always had had the edge. They were credited with twice as many safeties as their opponents, 14 to 7, and were in front except momentarily while the teams were changing places at the end of the sixth, following a 4-run Bengal rally, which tied the score.

Smiler George Murray and Samuel Braxton Gibson were the starting flingers and the Nats were able to get at least one hit in every frame but one, while the Smiler was smiling his way through with almost perfect pitching. He went up in the air suddenly in the sixth, however, and Fred Marberry toed the slab for his fourth successive game and No. 61 for the season. Firpo did fairly well until the ninth, when the Tigers showed fight and again came from behind to win.

THREE pinch hitters turned the trick for the Detroiters. Neun, up for Warner, opened with a single, and Tavener suicided him along.

Then Cobb, who replaced Manion, tripled to right, tying the score, and Heilmann, who represented Gibson at the swinging block, bounced a hot one off Stan Harris' glove to send all of the athletes to the showers with the victory in the Ford city bat bag. Alvin Crowder was on the peak when this final blow was struck.

All of the Nats, except McNeely and the pitchers, obtained at least one hit with Stan Harris leading with three. Fothergill was credited with two of the Tigers' seven, but the bingles of Messrs. Cobb and Heilmann were the ones which carried the important mail.

There were no spectacular fielding bits, although McNeely would have been given for one had he held Neun's drive in the ninth, which started the trouble. Earl came in fast and made a dive for the ball, getting his hands on it, but being unable to hold it.

SO effective was Murray that in the first five frames the only ball which the Tigers were able to hit out of the infield was Fothergill's single, which opened round four.

This was nullified by a double play into which Manush hit, while another of these two-ply swats was turned in by the Nats in the first after Blue had coaxed a walk. Only three other Bengals had found their way to first, two via passes and one on Stan Harris's error.

Meanwhile, the Harrismen had been pecking away at Gibson's offerings and had rung the bell three times. Two errors following Goslin's single let them threaten in the first, but they did not score until round three, when Rice's single and theft and Myer's one baser to left were good for one marker.

Two runs were hung up in round 5, all of this damage being done with two dead when Goslin, Myer and the two Harrisses singled suc-

Greenfield Weakens; Donohue and Lucas Twirl for Reds.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Cincinnati dropped another game to New York today, putting the Reds a game and a half behind St. Louis, the league leaders. The Giants broke a 1-to-1 tie in the sixth, hitting Donohue and Lucas for four hits and four runs. The final score was 5 to 4.

The Giant onslaught began when Mueller singled and Ford missed Lindstrom's bounder, giving the runners their bases. Mueller scored on Frisch's single while Lindstrom went to third. Kelly also singled, scoring Lindstrom and putting Frisch on third. Donohue was then replaced with Lucas.

Terry forced Kelly, Frisch scoring. Tyson forced Terry and came in when Jackson's drive went for two bases while Christenson was juggling it for an error.

Cincinnati added two in the seventh on Roush's single and Pipp's homer into right field.

THE Phillies jumped in front in the sixth inning. The Cards scored a run in the eighth to even it up. With one out in the ninth, Nixon punched a single into centerfield. Henline batted for Wrightstone and flied to Hafey. Nixon then made a clean steal of second.

Jimmy Wilson was purposely passed, but the young acting manager, called Denny Sothern from the bench before going to first base. Sothern then responded with a hit that broke up the game.

Home runs accounted for all three of the Phillies' runs in the first game. Cy Williams hit his seventeenth homer of the season, and Mokan planted one in the bleachers with Williams on base.

Fair Golfers to Stage Belle Haven Tourney

Women golfers of the District will be guests of the Belle Haven club at Alexandria Monday, when they will compete in a miniature tournament. Although competition will be primarily for members of the Women's District Golf association, Mrs. H. A. Knox, president of that organization, announced last night that the Virginia club has extended an invitation to all feminine players affiliated with any of the clubs in this section to play.

A qualifying round of six holes will begin at 9:30, with match play of nine holes to follow. The Belle Haven course is an attractive nine hole lay-out, and the District women golfers are anticipating a day of good sport.

PAPERS WILL RADIO FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The newspapers of the country will not be shut out from broadcasting the details of the Dempsey-Tunney fight they receive over their wires from the ringside.

It has been given out by Tex Rickard, promoter of the bout in the Sesquicentennial stadium next Thursday night, that the broadcasting rights would be leased and that if newspapers broadcast the fight from their own sources it would constitute an infringement.

Mr. Austin said he saw no possible way in which Rickard could prevent broadcasting and added that if the promoter attempted to do so, the Sesquicentennial officials would not permit it.

10 Miles of Wire Used To Broadcast Amateur

Short Hills, N. J., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Ten miles of telephone wire was strung around the Baltusrol course to enable radio station WOR to broadcast play by play features in the national amateur golf championship.

Microphone in hand, Dennis Brown, editor of Golfing, followed the players from hole to hole, plugging in as he went on the net work of wires over which his story was carried to the transmitting station atop the store of L. Bamburger & Co., Newark.

This is believed to be the first time that a golf championship play has been on the air in the East.

Gehrig's Error Helps Indians to Run; Meet Today.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Before 27,000 fans, the Cleveland Indians took the fifth and crucial game of the series with the Yankees here today, 3 to 1, and rose within two games and a half of the league leadership. They play their final game tomorrow.

George Uhle held the pacemakers to four hits, which were scattered through as many innings.

As on Wednesday Uhle was wild, but he was able to bear down in the pinches and kept the Yanks away from the registering station in all except the fourth inning, when Meusel walked, stole second and came home on Lazzeri's double.

The Indians scored in the first on Spurgeon's single, Speaker's roller to Gehrig, which the latter threw into left field trying to double Spurgeon at second, and Burns' single. Spurgeon's second single, Speaker's double and Dugan's error of Burns' bounder in the third gave them another.

C. C. Pyle Sued to Give Franchise to Veterans

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Petition for a restraining order to enjoin C. C. Pyle from relinquishing the Chicago charter in the American Professional Football league to the Chicago Bulls, Inc., was filed in superior court today by Chicago chapter, No. 2, of the Disabled Veterans of America.

The veterans' organization asserted Pyle had promised the franchise to them and that they had spent more than $10,000 in arranging for their games.

The Bulls are scheduled to open their season September 26, at Newark, N. J. The petition was taken under advisement.

Hale Hits for Circuit; A's Beat Browns, 9-4

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics pounded Gaston and Wingard for twelve hits today and defeated the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 4.

Hale's home run with two on, followed by doubles by Simmons and Poole, gave the Athletics four runs in the final frame, although the game had been already salted away.

BOBBY JONES BEATEN IN FINALS

Elm was the better player throughout the match and this was frankly admited by Jones when, after the struggle was over, he was asked to say a word or two about his defeat.

Von Elm's superiority was not in his wooden shots, for he was more often playing the second ahead of his opponent, but in the masterly way in which he handled his irons. In this feature of the game Von Elm was like the Jones of former championships and Jones was like the Von Elm of the past. Time and time again Von Elm's ball was closer to the pin after his approach.

Jones Short With Irons.

In the first nine holes of the morning round Jones was playing his mashie for approaches which were never up and later in the day he often failed to carry the ball in the line of the pin. No better iron play has ever been seen in a final round, not even in "Chick" Evans' palmiest days and it was this iron play that beat Bobby Jones.

When it can be said that Jones was in three traps in the morning round, while Von Elm encountered only one, and that Jones was twice in traps this afternoon, it is evident that the mashie niblick was no longer a magic club in Jones' hands. More than this, on the tenth hole this afternoon he proved that he was human just like the rest of the golfers. His ball was in a trap and he actually failed to play it out. It is almost impossible to imagine Jones taking two shots to get out of a trap at a time in the match when his title was hanging in the balance.

More than this, Jones was more frequently off the course on his tee shots than Von Elm. It is true that he played fine recovery shots, but on the thirteenth hole this afternoon his hook was fatal, landing

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Dick Cox's triple in the fourth and Pittsburgh errors accounted for two runs and a 3-to-1 victory for the Robins today. It was their third straight win over the faltering world champions.

Emile Yde was hit only four times, but faulty defensive work by the Buccaneers let victory by. Paul Waner got three of Pittsburgh's six hits off McWeeney, but it was Traynor's triple, followed by a single by Grantham, which gave the Pirates their lone tally.

Announcement of the loss of two players was made by the Pirates today. Glenn Wright, shortstop, was called to his home in Archie, Mo., by the serious illness of his father.

UNCERTAIN TAKES MARLBORO FEATURE IN DRIVE

Corinth Gives Favorite Fight

Arrow Hawk Ridden to Easy Win by R. Workman.

MARLBORO Race Track.—Running for the first time during the meet, Uncertain defeated a rather shifty field in the farewell feature of today's program. Corinth placed, and Dream of the Valley, who defeated practically the same field in his last start, was third.

The victory was a popular one for the winner was backed into favoritism by the large crowd.

El Oudiane outsprinted the field away from the barrier and held the advantage for more than a half mile. However, Corinth and Uncertain always were within striking distance of the leader and by the time the stretch was reached they had the race all to themselves. Uncertain proved strongest in a drive.

Dream of the Valley, another well liked, trailed the field until entering the stretch where he went to the outside and closed with a rush to take third money.

APPELLATE easily accounted for the first race, a dash of 5½ furlongs for all ages. The winner was quickest away from the barrier and was under steady restraint until the stretch was reached, whehe he drew away from his company.

Beverwyck came from behind to place and Chow Chow was third. Sligo Branch challenged Appellate on the backstretch, but tired badly before the stretch was reached and dropped out of the picture.

The inconsistent Castilla bested a field of seven in the third race, a sprint of 6½ furlongs. Castilla followed the pace-making Uncle Abe into the stretch and caught the leader a sixteenth of a mile from the finish to win going away.

UNCLE ABE showed the most early foot and went into a comfortable lead. Castilla moved up strongly on the back stretch, and, seemingly, could have gone to the lead any time thereafter. Booker waited until the stretch was reached, however, before making his real bid for victory.

Rags, a winner at this meet, closed fast on the outside of the track to take third money.

Courser was much the best of the field that faced the barrier for the mile and a sixteenth race, the fourth event of the day. Racing on the outside all the way, Courser took the lead as the field swung for the stretch and drew away from Harry Carroll, who was second in the final strides.

The Peruvian was first away from the barrier, and by saving ground managed to retain the lead for more than a half mile.

After that, however, he began to tire, and Harry Carroll went to the front with Courser close on his heels. Courser circled the leader as they started for the stretch, and although he went a trifle wide, had much in reserve when the final effort came. The Peruvian lasted long enough to show.

Cup Bearer showed the most speed from the start and drew into a long lead, but began tiring in the stretch and had to be hard ridden down the end to save the decision. George De Mar raced under early restraint, but came fast through the last quarter mile and was steadily wearing the winner down. Starbeck raced well and made a game finish.

Peanuts Clips World's Record at Aqueduct

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). R. L. Gerry's peanuts carrying 114 pounds with Jockey Thurber up, created a new world's record for the mile and a furlong at Aqueduct track today by stepping the distance in 1:48 3-5 in winning the Edgmere handicap worth $6,-550. The time clips one fifth of a second from the mark established by Chilhowee at Latonia in 1924. W. R. Coe's Pompey, with Sande astride, landed the place, with Black Maria, coupled with Pompey, third.

Peanuts was a 9-to-2 shot, with the Coe entry the favorite at 7 to 20. The Dade Memorial handicap, for 3-year-olds and up at 6 furlongs, purse of $2,000, was won by Old Slip, at Dade park. Sandy Hatch was second in front of Sunny Sal. The time was 1:12.

HURRICANE FOUR WINS.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Laddie Sanford's Hurricanes won the third tilt of the American open polo championship by defeating the Anglo-American Princemere team 10 goals to 9 at the Meadow Brook club today.

Sanford put his team into the lead in the third chukker, scoring three goals in succession. Eric Hedley of the Californian midwick team which won the open championship two years ago scored five goals for the Hurricanes.

RIALTOS AND AUTHS OPEN PLAY-O

Rivals Battle On Barracks Diamond

Capital City League Finalists Start Play at 3.

"Gilly" Ottenberg to Face McGowan or "Shout" Taylor.

THE finals for the unlimited championship of the Capital City league will start today with the Rialtos, winners of Section D, meeting the Auths, champions of Section E, at the Washington barracks at 3 o'clock. A week from today, the winner of this game plays the Knickerbockers, who have practically clinched the Section A honors, to decide the race.

The dividing of teams into sections, according to their relative strength, as far as possible, has done much to keep interest in the series this year and also promises to make the finals different from any similar play-off for the unlimited title.

It will mark the first time that all but one of the "big" clubs has been eliminated. The Knickerbockers will represent the veteran organizations and comes into the finals after defeating the best of the city's teams. This fact takes nothing away from the Rialtos and Auths, who would have given any set of clubs a run for the money.

IN THE Auths, the finals will show the youngest club ever to reach the last lap of the race. Composed for the most part of High school players, the Auths marched to the senior Capital City title and followed with a parade through the Section C ranks, in both cases without the loss of a single game.

The Rialto nine is unique as sandlot clubs go, and is probably the only "closed" team in the city. No player who is not a member of the club may play and, to the credit of the Hebrews, they have taken in no new members to strengthen their team.

While the Rialtos might be classed with the long-established teams, today will mark their first real opportunity to break into the charmed circles of championship teams.

The Auths, with few exceptions, have played together for a number of seasons. Bill Sanderson piloted them to fame in the midget and junior ranks when they were known as the Southends, and Sanderson is still in charge.

"GILLY" OTTENBERG, who has won thirteen games without a defeat this year, is slated to hurl for the Rialtos. Ottenberg is a slow ball artist with a nice curve, and perhaps the best control of any sandlot pitcher. He has walked only three men this season.

For the Auths, the pitcher will be either McGowan or "Shout" Taylor. The former, not so long back a star with the Aloysius Midgets, has been improving with every game this season. Taylor, despite his 97 pounds, is pretty much pitcher, as his clean record for the season will testify.

The probable line-ups of the two teams follow:

Virginia White Sox Meet Severn Today

The Virginia White Sox, excused from their Arlington county game with the Hartfords, will travel to Annapolis, Md., today, where they will play the Severn A. A. nine. Charlie Brown, who blanked Cherrydale, will pitch. Manager Terry wants the following players to report at his home, 321 C street northwest, at 11:30 o'clock: McAlroy, Singletary, Schmidt, Brown, Griffin, Walsh, Gibeaux, Dove, Dickerson, Sams and Demma.

Ralph Young Pitches No-Hit, No-Run Game

Pitching for the Industrial Home School yesterday against the District Training School nine, Ralph Young, who starred with the New Havens this year, pitched a no-hit, no-run game, allowing but one player to reach first base. He walked. Industrial won the game, 10 to 0.

Young hurled another no-hit game early in the Capital City league midget series, but several reached the bases in that contest.

Football Series Just Ahead

□□□ CENTRAL HAS 2 VETERANS □□□

For Public High School Teams

By WALTER HAIGHT.

PREPARATION for the approaching high school football series will be in full sway this week with the opening of the public schools tomorrow. Business, Central and Tech already have started work, while Eastern and Western are due to take the field for the first time on Tuesday.

While it is rather early to make predictions, especially on a subject as uncertain as a high school sport, the coming series is likely to be one of the closest fought of the last decade, if the chatter of the various coaches bears fruit.

AT Business, John Collins claims he hasn't looked them over, but has hopes, while Coach Ahearn, of Western, has not been questioned. Ahearn has perhaps the best material, but will hardly admit it.

The Western team will probably be built around the following quartet, which has served it scholastic apprenticeship: "Shorty" Hilleary, halfback and kicker; "Big" Walker, 165-pound guard; Coombs, the lanky center, and Capt. Fred Owens, a halfback. Parks, another guard, is expected to be a regular.

"Bobby" Stevens, all-high shortstop, will be out for the team. He played well in independent circles last fall and may get one of the backfield berths.

"Peewee" Walker, who was operated on for appendicitis during the summer, will hardly be available. His parents are opposed to his participating in athletics, it is said.

Business has the most veteran players on hand, ten in number, and with the fifteen new players to report has the heaviest squad in the circuit. The experienced players are May, Stewart, Dobrowolski, Davis, Silverman, Reville Jones, Higbey, Bernard Jones, Claggett and McGarrity. Henry Gallotta and Billy Byrd have shown the best form of the newcomers.

EFFORTS are being made to obtain the use of the Gallaudet field for Business practices. In the event that the gridiron is obtained, Business will scrimmage with "Zube" Sullivan's St. John's team this week.

Let it also be known that Business has a new set of uniforms as well as a new coach.

Coach Kelly is beginning to know who's who among his Central candidates. The reported migration of former Capt. Minnicks, of Tech, to the Mount Pleasant school will not materialize, according to Kelly. Neither Minicks nor Garrett, another prospective jumper, has put in appearance.

Schofield, the former Tech end, has reported but will not be available until after the first advisory, and hence will not meet Tech, which Central plays October 29. Capt. Blackistone and Sweet, a guard, remain of Central's fine squad of last year. Kelly has a large and green field of candidates from which to pick a supporting cast for that pair.

BLACKISTONE will be shifted from center, where he was regarded as the best pivot player in local high school ranks in many years, to quarterback. He will back up the line on the defense in addition, according to the coach's present plans.

Central's candidates, and the positions for which they seem best fitted, follow: Backs, Capt. Blackistone, Simmons, Sproul, Woodson, Birthwright, Ambrogi, Stevens, Ault, Boyd, Ross; centers, Michaelson, South; guards, A. Rogers, Dinkin, Trodden, Coombs, Smith; tackles, Sweet, C. Rogers, Tew; ends, Parke, Sargent, Rhodes, Lamb, Schofield.

The Central schedule follows: October 1, Baltimore Poly, stadium; 8, Alexandria High, stadium; 19, Eastern, stadium; 23, Newport News High, at Newport News, Va.; 29, Tech, stadium; November 5, Business, stadium; 12, Western, stadium.

SENIOR TITLE TO TREMONTS; FITZGERALD LEADS HITTERS

THE Tremonts won the championship of the Petworth Senior league yesterday by virtue of a double victory over the Kennedy nine at American League park. The scores were 6 to 5 and 12 to 4, the second game being called in the eighth on account of darkness.

At the end of the regular season the Tremonts and Kennedys were tied for the first honors.

"Doc" Baker's pitching and the uphill fight of the Tremonts featured the first game. The Kennedys hopped out to a 5-to-1 lead in the first three innings, but the Tremonts rallied to tie the count in the seventh and win by scoring a single run in the ninth. Baker allowed only six hits and fanned sixteen batters.

THE Kennedy went to the front again in the second game, only to "blow" in the eighth inning when the Tremonts shoved eight runs across the plate.

Nelson Jett pitched the second game and yielded six hits and fanned ten. Torney, the Kennedys, whiffed eight but was hit hard.

Gallotta and Ruppert were the "big guns" for the Tremonts in the second game, each getting a homer, while Hargett was the only Kennedy player able to hit Jett consistently.

Takoma Tiger Player Has .500 Average for 9 Games.

FITZGERALD, of the Takoma Tigers, led the Petworth Senior league in batting, the averages compiled by Secretary Pete Ciango reveal. Fitzgerald slammed the ball for the neat average of .500, competing in nine games. He was at the bat 36 times and collected eighteen hits, including seven doubles.

Dobrowoski, of the Kennedys, carried off second honors with an average of .488, making 20 hits, including four doubles, two triples and a homer. Dan Gallotta, Tremonts, was next in line with .486, while Hargett, Kennedy; Nee, Arrows; Collins, Arrows, and Garrett, Yorkes, were other players in five games or more to hit over the .400 mark.

Sole, of the Cardinals, was the "Babe Ruth" of the circuit, being credited with three homers. Jett, of the Tremonts, twice hit for the round-trip.

NEVER before has a forecast on the women's national golf tournament been so difficult to figure, and never before have there been so many promising youngsters entered for the event. Miss Glenna Collett, the defending champion, is the popular candidate for the victory, but some critics point out that the loss of five out of six tournaments which she has entered this year will weaken her chances.

The chances are, however, that when the titleholder starts next Monday at the Merion Cricket club she will be equipped with a full measure of the championship spirit for which she is famous. That Miss Collett can be depended upon to pull out of tight places was proved in the Shenecossett tournament when she came through with colors flying after being four down and six to play.

But five names have been inscribed on the Cox cup since 1916, but there is admittedly at least, a chance that this year will see a new name added to the honor roll. Alexa Stirling Fraser held the trophy for three years and kept it during the two war years, but she has declined to enter the play this year.

Miss Marion Hollins, 1921 champion, probably will be prevented from playing due to ill health, and as Miss Edith Cummings, since her victory of 1923, has been out of competitive golf, she also will be among those missing. Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd is expected to enter and Miss Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto, Canada, will add the international flavor in the week of championship golf.

Taken from all angles, the probable winners of the 1926 national championship can perhaps be reduced to four players—Miss Collett, who is the favorite; Miss Maureen Orcutt, the metropolitan champion, who is undoubtedly the best player that New York has produced in many years; Miss Virginia Van Wie, who this year gained the honor of defeating the champion in a 19-hole final, and Miss Louise Fordyce, of Youngstown, Ohio, who also downed Miss Collett in the North and South championship at Pinehurst.

NEW COURT LOOP IN FIELD.

A fourth basketball league will make its appearance on the local courts this year, according to the plans of Mr. John R. Cavanaugh, who is organizing a parochial school circuit to provide competition in the Catholic schools.

An executive board drawn from the church and including leading physical directors in the city will direct the new league, some of the requirements of which will be heart examinations, health supervision, and the use of women coaches and officials.

The Baltimore Catholic Review has offered a cup to the league, which, according to Mr. Cavanaugh, will be awarded on a merit basis in addition to the winning of games.

It is expected that most of the parochial schools will enter teams in the new league and the following have already expressed their intention of joining; St. Paul's, Holy Cross, St. Martin's, St. Peter's, St. Vincent's Orphan asylum. St. Martin's will also enter a team in the Washington Recreation league this year.

Accounts and Fashion Shops

□□□ WINNER GETS POST CUP □□□

In Week-Day Finals Tuesday

FASHION SHOP and General Accounting Office will fight it out for the championship of the week-day leagues and the Washington Post cup in a three-game series starting Tuesday at 4:45 o'clock. All the games will be played on the South Ellipse diamond.

It seems a difficult matter to eliminate the veteran players from these league titular battles. Year after year the youngsters have aimed to take the jobs of Johnny Blier, Eddie Carroll, Mike Moran and others and every season those fellows seem to keep up the stride.

However, several youngsters have made the grade and hold down regular berths on the two teams. In the latter class is Jack Mattingly, who has come forward with a rush and now classes with the best infielders in the city.

"PING" PURDY, the redheaded shortstop, is not in the final for the first time in a number of seasons. He cast his lot with the Chevy Chase Dairy team this year and was eliminated with his team when it lost the playoff for the Commercial league championship to Fashion Shop.

When the series was being planned, Fashion Shop was among the teams that was opposed to adding players from other clubs within the league which the team represents. But when it was voted that each club be allowed one player, the Clothiers chose Irving Claude as their man. Claude pitched the team to two victories in the semifinals and may be the deciding factor the rest of the way.

This series is making sandlot history in more ways than one. In the first place, it is the first time that the clubs have ever played the finals on the Ellipse diamonds, free to the public. Second, the District Umpire association is donating its men to officiate the games, and, third, the scorers are also working without pay.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The price of 40,000 seats to be placed on sale for the Army-Navy football game here, November 27, will be determined by returns from a public auction of 500 boxes, each of which is expected to bring about $2,000.

The auction will be held within two weeks, it was announced by the South Park board, which controls Soldiers field, scene of the coming fray. It was indicated that most of the choice seats, other than in the boxes, would cost at least $10, but the commissioners hoped to be able to offer some for $5.

The tremendous cost of bringing the cadets and midshipmen to Chicago was given as the reason for the high admission. After the boxes are auctioned, the other seats will be put on the market.

Mercury A. C. Eleven In First Drill Today

Coach Joe Ganey will put the candidates for the Mercury A. C. eleven through their first workout today at Union park, Fifteenth and H streets northeast, at 10:30 o'clock.

Corinthian Seniors In Two Games Today

Looking forward to next season when he will put the Corinthians in the senior division, Coach Walter Newman has arranged two tests for his club today. The Times Pressmen will be met at 11 o'clock on the south Ellipse, while at 3 o'clock the Corinthians tackle the Liberty club on the Plaza.

Smiler George Murray and Samuel Braxton Gibson were the starting flingers and the Nats were able to get at least one hit in every frame but one, while the Smiler was smiling his way through with almost perfect pitching. He went up in the air suddenly in the sixth, however, and Fred Marberry toed the slab for his fourth successive game and No. 61 for the season. Firpo did fairly well until the ninth, when the Tigers showed fight and again came from behind to win.

THREE pinch hitters turned the trick for the Detroiters. Neun, up for Warner, opened with a single, and Tavener suicided him along.

Then Cobb, who replaced Manion, tripled to right, tying the score, and Heilmann, who represented Gibson at the swinging block, bounced a hot one off Stan Harris' glove to send all of the athletes to the showers with the victory in the Ford city bat bag. Alvin Crowder was on the peak when this final blow was struck.

All of the Nats, except McNeely and the pitchers, obtained at least one hit with Stan Harris leading with three. Fothergill was credited with two of the Tigers' seven, but the bingles of Messrs. Cobb and Heilmann were the ones which carried the important mail.

There were no spectacular fielding bits, although McNeely would have been given for one had he held Neun's drive in the ninth, which started the trouble. Earl came in fast and made a dive for the ball, getting his hands on it, but being unable to hold it.

SO effective was Murray that in the first five frames the only ball which the Tigers were able to hit out of the infield was Fothergill's single, which opened round four.

This was nullified by a double play into which Manush hit, while another of these two-ply swats was turned in by the Nats in the first after Blue had coaxed a walk. Only three other Bengals had found their way to first, two via passes and one on Stan Harris's error.

Meanwhile, the Harrismen had been pecking away at Gibson's offerings and had rung the bell three times. Two errors following Goslin's single let them threaten in the first, but they did not score until round three, when Rice's single and theft and Myer's one baser to left were good for one marker.

Two runs were hung up in round 5, all of this damage being done with two dead when Goslin, Myer and the two Harrisses singled suc-

Donohue and Lucas Twirl for Reds.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Cincinnati dropped another game to New York today, putting the Reds a game and a half behind St. Louis, the league leaders. The Giants broke a 1-to-1 tie in the sixth, hitting Donohue and Lucas for four hits and four runs. The final score was 5 to 4.

The Giant onslaught began when Mueller singled and Ford missed Lindstrom's bounder, giving the runners their bases. Mueller scored on Frisch's single while Lindstrom went to third. Kelly also singled, scoring Lindstrom and putting Frisch on third. Donohue was then replaced with Lucas.

Terry forced Kelly, Frisch scoring. Tyson forced Terry and came in when Jackson's drive went for two bases while Christenson was juggling it for an error.

Cincinnati added two in the seventh on Roush's single and Pipp's homer into right field.

Fair Golfers to Stage Belle Haven Tourney

Women golfers of the District will be guests of the Bell Haven club at Alexandria Monday, when they will compete in a miniature tournament. Although competition will be primarily for members of the Women's District Golf association, Mrs. H. A. Knox, president of that organization, announced last night that the Virginia club has extended an invitation to all feminine players affiliated with any of the clubs in this section to play.

A qualifying round of six holes will begin at 9:30, with match play of nine holes to follow. The Belle Haven course is an attractive nine hole lay-out, and the District women golfers are anticipating a day of good sport.

PAPERS WILL RADIO FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The newspapers of the country will not be shut out from broadcasting the details of the Dempsey-Tunney fight they receive over their wires from the ringside.

It has been given out by Tex Rickard, promoter of the bout in the Sesquicentennial stadium next Thursday night, that the broadcasting rights would be leased and that if newspapers broadcast the fight from their own sources it would constitute an infringement.

Mr. Austin said he saw no possible way in which Rickard could prevent broadcasting and added that if the promoter attempted to do so, the sesquicentennial officials would not permit it.

10 Miles of Wire Used To Broadcast Amateur

Short Hills, N. J., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Ten miles of telephone wire was strung around the Baltusrol course to enable radio station WOR to broadcast play by play features in the national amateur golf championship.

Microphone in hand, Dennis Brown, editor of Golfing, followed the players from hole to hole, plugging in as he went on the net work of wires over which his story was carried to the transmitting station atop the store of L. Bamburger & Co., Newark.

This is believed to be the first time that a golf championship play has been on the air in the East.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Denny Sothern, pinch-hitting in the ninth, lined out a solid single that scored Al Nixon from second base and enabled the Phillies at last to check the rush of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Phillies won, 3 to 2, in a hot battle after losing the first half of the twin bill, 7 to 3.

Despite dropping the second contest, the Cardinals gained a half game on Cincinnati, as the Reds lost again to New York. St. Louis now leads the National league race by a game and a half.

Hal Carlson, right-handed ace of the Phillies, made his seventeenth victory of the season a fine one, by holding the Cards to seven scattered hits, and making them fight hard for the two runs they got. Carlson also helped with a single and a double and scored one of the runs in the tight battle. His defeated opponents were Alexander and Rhinehart, a left-hander. The latter pitched the last two innings and was charged with the defeat.

THE Phillies jumped in front in the sixth inning. The Cards scored a run in the eighth to even it up. With one out in the ninth, Nixon pinched a single into centerfield. Henline batted for Wrightstone and flied to Hafey. Nixon then made a clean steal of second.

Jimmy Wilson was purposely passed, but the young acting manager, called Denny Sothern from the bench before going to first base. Sothern then responded with a hit that broke up the game.

Home runs accounted for all three of the Phillies' runs in the first game. Cy Williams hit his seventeenth homer of the season, and Mokan planted one in the bleachers with Williams on base.

C. C. Pyle Sued to Give Franchise to Veterans

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Petition for a restraining order to enjoin C. C. Pyle from relinquishing the Chicago charter in the American Professional Football league to the Chicago Bulls, Inc., was filed in superior court today by Chicago chapter, No. 2, of the Disabled Veterans of America.

The veterans' organization asserted Pyle had promised the franchise to them and that they had spent more than $10,000 in arranging for their games.

The Bulls are scheduled to open their season September 26, at Newark, N. J. The petition was taken under advisement.

BOBBY JONES BEATEN IN FINALS

Elm was the better player throughout the match and this was frankly admited by Jones when, after the struggle was over, he was asked to say a word or two about his defeat.

Von Elm's superiority was not in his wooden shots, for he was more often playing the second ahead of his opponent, but in the masterly way in which he handled his irons. In this feature of the game Von Elm was like the Jones of former championships and Jones was like the Von Elm of the past. Time and time again Von Elm's ball was closer to the pin after his approach.

Jones Short With Irons.

In the first nine holes of the morning round Jones was playing his mashie for approaches which were never up and later in the day he often failed to carry the ball in the line of the pin. No better iron play has ever been seen in a final round, not even in "Chick" Evans' palmiest days and it was this iron play that beat Bobby Jones.

When it can be said that Jones was in three traps in the morning round, while Von Elm encountered only one, and that Jones was twice in traps this afternoon, it is evident that the mashie niblick was no longer a magic club in Jones' hands. More than this, on the tenth hole this afternoon he proved that he was human just like the rest of the golfers. His ball was in a trap and he actually failed to play it out. It is almost impossible to imagine Jones taking two shots to get out of a trap at a time in the match when his title was hanging in the balance.

More than this, Jones was more frequently off the course on his tee shots than Von Elm. It is true that he played fine recovery shots, but on the thirteenth hole this afternoon his hook was fatal, landing

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Dick Cox's triple in the fourth and Pittsburgh errors accounted for two runs and a 3-to-1 victory for the Robins today. It was their third straight win over the faltering world champions.

Emile Yde was hit only four times, but faulty defensive work by the Buccaneers let victory by. Paul Waner got three of Pittsburgh's six hits off McWeeney, but it was Traynor's triple, followed by a single by Grantham, which gave the Pirates their lone tally.

Announcement of the loss of two players was made by the Pirates today. Glenn Wright, shortstop, was called to his home in Archie, Mo., by the serious illness of his father.

FOOTBALL RESULTS

THE Basque had done his full share in accomplishing the downfall of the native forces, but even his ineffective resistance today could not dim the luster of Lacoste's final touch to the dramatic rise of the French supremacy.

Lacoste's victory not only sent the historic American cup overseas for the first time in 23 years and the second time in its history, but lifted the solemn faced French youth to world's championship heights.

Lacoste now holds two American titles. He lifted the national indoor championship last February when he also defeated Borotra in the finals. And within the last week, he has applied the crowning touches to his victorious march, first by vanquishing Tilden in the final Davis cup match, then overcoming Tilden's conqueror, Henri Cochet, in the semifinals, and finally, today, beating his greatest French rival. Borotra not only has been the biggest thorn in Lacoste's path but he had gained the Wimbledon championship this year.

Tilden was the first to congratulate and grasp the hand of his successor after today's match. "Big Bill" was a somewhat forlorn figure as he filled the role of linesman for the act in which he has played a star part over eight successive seasons.

FROM the viewpoint of American prestige, it was a doleful spectacle as Tilden, along with other famous American champions, as "Maury" McLaughlin, "Little Bill" Johnston and Dick Williams, sat on the side lines to watch a pair of young invaders fight for the crown they have shared in holding.

It was all the more disappointing because of Borotra's mediocre exhibition.

The "bounding basque" had little fire and dash left for his final set. The gruelling five struggles on two previous days had sapped his strength.

He was game to the finish, staging a whirlwind rally in the final set even when his defeat appeared inevitable. But it was only a flash of the real Borotra. He could not sustain the accuracy of his volleys against the machine-like steadiness of his rival's drives.

The point score and stroke analysis follow:

MARLBORO Race Track.—Running for the first time during the meet, Uncertain defeated a rather shifty field in the farewell feature of today's program. Corinth placed, and Dream of the Valley, who defeated practically the same field in his last start, was third.

The victory was a popular one for the winner was backed into favoritism by the large crowd.

El Oudiane outsprinted the field away from the barrier and held the advantage for more than a half mile. However, Corinth and Uncertain always were within striking distance of the leader and by the time the stretch was reached they had the race all to themselves. Uncertain proved strongest in a drive.

Dream of the Valley, another well liked, trailed the field until entering the stretch where he went to the outside and closed with a rush to take third money.

APPELLATE easily accounted for the first race, a dash of 5½ furlongs for all ages. The winner was quickest away from the barrier and was under steady restraint until the stretch was reached, whehe he drew away from his company.

Beverwyck came from behind to place and Chow Chow was third. Sligo Branch challenged Appellate on the backstretch, but tired badly before the stretch was reached and dropped out of the picture.

The inconsistent Castilla bested a field of seven in the third race, a sprint of 6½ furlongs. Castilla followed the pace-making Uncle Abe into the stretch and caught the leader a sixteenth of a mile from the finish to win going away.

UNCLE ABE showed the most early foot and went into a comfortable lead. Castilla moved up strongly on the back stretch, and, seemingly, could have gone to the lead any time thereafter. Booker waited until the stretch was reached, however, before making his real bid for victory.

Rags, a winner at this meet, closed fast on the outside of the track to take third money.

Courser was much the best of the field that faced the barrier for the mile and a sixteenth race, the fourth event of the day. Racing on the outside all the way, Courser took the lead as the field swung for the stretch and drew away from Harry Carroll, who was second in the final strides.

The Peruvian was first away from the barrier, and by saving ground managed to retain the lead for more than a half mile.

After that, however, he began to tire, and Harry Carroll went to the front with Courser close on his heels. Courser circled the leader as they started for the stretch, and although he went a trifle wide, had much in reserve when the final effort came. The Peruvian lasted long enough to show.

Peanuts Clips World's Record at Aqueduct

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). R. L. Gerry's peanuts carrying 114 pounds with Jockey Thurber up, created a new world's record for the mile and a furlong at Aqueduct track today by stepping the distance in 1:48 3-5 in winning the Edgmere handicap worth $6,550. The time clips one fifth of a second from the mark established by Chilhowee at Latonia in 1924. W. R. Coe's Pompey, with Sande astride, landed the place, with Black Maria, coupled with Pompey, third.

Peanuts was a 9-to-2 shot, with the Coe entry the favorite at 7 to 20. The Dade Memorial handicap, for 3-year-olds and up at 6 furlongs, purse of $2,000, was won by Old Slip, at Dade park. Sandy Hatch was second in front of Sunny Sal. The time was 1:12.

HURRICANE FOUR WINS.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Laddie Sanford's Hurricanes won the third tilt of the American open polo championship by defeating the Anglo-American Princemere team 10 goals to 9 at the Meadow Brook club today.

Sanford put his team into the lead in the third chukker, scoring three goals in succession. Eric Hedley of the Californian midwick team which won the open championship two years ago scored five goals for the Hurricanes.

DEMPSEY BATTERS LOUGHRAN AS TITLE BOUT NEARS

Three Mates Pounded by Champ

Boys Present Gold Rabbit's Foot to Wear Against Tunney.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The latest punch in the nose Jack Dempsey received was delivered after his workout at the dog track here this afternoon. He did not know about the court action while he was engaging with his sparring partners, but the viciousness with which he tore into Tommy Loughran was an indication that he expected the latest thrust from Jack Kearns.

Loughran felt the sting of the champion's punch and came near hitting the canvas. The fleet Philadelphian used all of his trickery to escape it, but at the close of their two rounds Dempsey drove him into a corner, cutting loose with a left hook that landed squarely on the chin. Loughran's knees sagged and he fell into Dempsey's arms.

Dempsey engaged in his usual five rounds of glove work today, ripping and tearing into his three sparring mates with reckless abandon. He boxed the first round against Benny Krueger, the German light-heavyweight champion.

KRUEGER was driven all over the ring under a furious battering. Loughran boxed the next two rounds, while Marty Burke faced the champion for the final two.

When Dempsey crawls into the ring against Tunney in Philadelphia next Thursday night, he may carry a gold-mounted rabbit's foot concealed in his fighting trunks. The rabbit's foot and gold belt buckle were presented to the champion today by fourteen boys, junior members of the Pennsylvania Athletic Club of Philadelphia. They were guests to the champion at a luncheon tendered by Samuel Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works.

Dempsey gave a bit of advice to the youngsters on the value and benefits of boxing as a healthful exercise and presented each with silver boxing gloves, miniature of the 6-ounce championship size.

Von Elm Practiced Golf in Back Yard

Salt Lake City, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—George Von Elm learned how to play golf in his own back yard. The new 25-year-old champion, who took the American amateur title today by beating Bobby Jones, began driving and putting when he was 8 years old.

As a schoolboy he laid out a miniature golf course in his back yard and spent many hours there when free from his studies. He imitated and ed golfers about whom he read or had seen play. Von Elm's home was in Salt Lake City, Utah, then.

Leonard Von Elm, Salt Lake City champion, a brother, who is 2 years older than George, says the new champion used only a mashie niblick when he first started playing the game. He became a master with that club and soon developed the ability to use them all with uncanny precision.

At 9 he started as a caddie at the Salt Lake City Country club. In 1916, when he was 15, he entered the Utah State championship tournament and upset all precedents by coolly winning the title. Since then he has captured the Utah golf title els four times.

Von Elm moved to Los Angeles in 1922, although his family still lives in Salt Lake City. He has carried away first honors previously in the trans-Mississippi tournament, Pacific Northwest tournament and California State tournament. Last year he was runner-up to Harry Cooper in the Los Angeles $10,000 open.

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy and Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified grooming cream which costs only few cents a jar at any drugstore. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on special occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; it helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

his ball in a ditch from which he played a high niblick shot. The ball fell short of the green into a trap and thus the hole became an easy victor for Von Elm, whose second shot from the fairway was within 10 feet of the cup. Von Elm never missed a drive.

Both players putted well, with four one-putt greens for each of them; the blond-haired Californian ran down the longest putts. There was only one three-putt green during the entire day and this was Von Elm's experience on the fourteenth green this afternoon.

There were two interesting incidents on the putting greens. On the seventeenth in the morning round, when Jones was 1 down, he putted to the lip of the cup.

VON ELM started to putt, but being disturbed by the chattering of the gallery, stepped away from his ball, which was fully 2 feet from the cup, and waited for the murmurs to subside. Jones, who was sitting by the side of the green jumped up and knocked the ball away, conceding the out, although it was certainly a missable one.

A few moments later Jones putted on the home green and overran the cup by at least two feet. As he stood sighting the putt in careful fashion, Von Elm, who had dropped into a sitting position, jumped up and walking over to Jones' ball knocked it away. This act of sportsmanship was loudly applauded by the crowd, but later in the afternoon, when the situation was more tense, they were not so polite.

Jones came in from the morning round one down. It was the first time in four years that he had found himself in this position, his last experience of this character being at Brookline to Jess Sweetser in 1922 and history repeated itself, for Sweetser defeated Jones in the 36-hole match and won the championship.

Jones would have been worse off but for the fact that he laid Von Elm a stymie on the sixth hole, winning the hole when Von Elm was entitled to a half. Again on the short fourth hole this afternoon when Von Elm's tee shot landed his ball about 3 feet above the cup, giving him an open door for a birdie 2 and a win. Jones from a distance of 20 feet laid him another stymie and Von Elm was only able to secure a half.

On two other holes today, the second and twelfth of the morning round, the stymie raised its snaky head against Von Elm, but the latter managed to putt his ball in circular fashion into the cup.

THIRTY-FIVE holes played in two strokes over par by each rival for the championship today tells the story of the great golf which thrilled the gallery. This equality of strokes, however, is misleading, for Jones was frequently struggling for his pars by chip shots from off the green, while Von Elm needed only the regulation two putts.

Only too often as Von Elm tightened his coil around the stocky Atlanta boy the latter seemed to hurry his shots, while Von Elm played with infinite care.

There was not an approach which was not prefaced by a deliberate survey of the distance to be covered nor a putt that was not carefully studied before the ball was hit. His caddy, a freckle-faced lad, hovered around, and Von Elm did not hesitate to consult with the youngster when there was a difficult stroke to make.

Bobby Jones has played 133 holes during this event in one over 4's, and today he was only two strokes over par, and yet he was beaten. More than once in his career he has found a golfer against whom hole after hole in par availed nothing and today he went through the same ordeal.

It is true that the man who defeated him has also been playing fine golf throughout this tournament, but today he rose to heights which not even Bobby Jones was able to reach. For four years Von Elm has traveled east from the Pacific coast, covering something like 24,000 miles, waiting for his triumphant day to come. His young wife, who made her way through the lines today to watch her husband play, wept with joy when the final scene was enacted on the thirty-fifth green.

THE new champion is 27 years old and has long been considered the best golfer on the Pacific coast. Runner-up in the national championship at Merion two years ago, he was not discouraged last year at Oakmont, and his presence in this tournament was typical of the spirit to win which characterized his play today.

From the time he became 1 up at the seventh hole this morning he never allowed Bobby Jones to get into the lead, playing every shot with grim determination and not weakening for a single moment, and always keeping Jones fighting from the under side. The fact is that Jones bowed his head today to a golfer who deserved the victory he so nobly won.

Von Elm Knew He'd Win On 11th Hole, He Says

Short Hills, N. Y., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—"You're a wonder George—will you give me a putting lesson?" was Bobby Jones' greeting to George Von Elm, new national amateur champion, when the blond westerner and the champion he dethroned today reached the quiet of the Baltusrol clubhouse.

"Sure I'll do that," responded Von Elm smilingly as he threw his arm around the shoulder of the Atlanta youth.

"I knew I'd win when that long putt dropped on the eleventh hole," the new champion said. "I was playing too good golf to lose today. I felt all through the tournament that I'd come through. Only once all day did my putter go wrong, and that was on the thirty-second hole this afternoon when I had to take three."

The 25-year-old Californian has another important engagement before he returns to the West with the greatest honor amateur golf can bestow. Von Elm confided in the clubhouse that he wants to see the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Philadelphia on September 23. "Then I'll go home," he said.

Among the first to congratulate the new title holder was his wife, Mrs. Von Elm, who threw herself in his arms at the thirty-fifth hole after Bobby had shaken the hand of his conqueror.

Then the gallery surged about Von Elm and hoisting him to their shoulders, marched with cheers down the eighteenth fairway toward the club house. Some one in the crowd whistled "California, Here I Come" as the throng proceeded, and it was only at the insistent demand of Von Elm that he was finally lowered to his feet to finish the parade, arm in arm with his wife.

A grizzled old caddy, pleased as the champion over Von Elm's success, marched proudly in front with the bag of clubs that had tolled off such masterly shots today.

He warded off the curious who thronged the way and kept up a continual fire of witticism. Locked in one hand was a trophy which to him was second only to the championship cup—the golf ball that Von Elm had battered unerringly from tee to green on his march through the fairways to the championship.

Defeat Best Thing for Golf, Jones Says After Match

Short Hills, N. J., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Bobby Jones received his defeat at the hands of George Von Elm today as the "finest thing that could have happened for amateur golf."

"If ever a man deserved to win, George did," said Bobby. "He just put us all down and stepped on us."

Von Elm, blushing and stammering, received the championship trophy with his head bowed, eyes riveted on the ground.

"I don't know what to say and you wouldn't either," was the new champion's brief message to a cheering throng which looked on at the presentation.

Johnson Faces Tigers Today; ST. LOUIS SERIES NEXT Rookie Hurlers Forced to Idle

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 18.—The volunteering of George Murray to take the Washington pitching assignment in today's game came as a tough blow to Rookies Lefty Thomas and Pat Loftus, both of whom had presentiments that Pilot Harris' eye might light upon them when he was casting about for a starter.

As the result of Murray doing duty this afternoon, Harris is able to start again on his regular assignment wheel, and probably will be able to use his regulars in order over the balance of the week. This means that Walter Johnson will fling against the Tigers tomorrow in the getaway fracas here, with Coveleskie and probably Admiral Jones performing in the twin bill which opens the set with the Brownies in St. Louis Monday.

This twin bill, incidentally, is the only one carded until the Nats' end their schedule with one against the Mackmen on September 29, when "finis" will be written to the 1926 big league season.

ALTROCK and Schacht make quite a team in more ways than one. Al was among the missing at the apple orchard this afternoon, celebrating Yom Kippur. The two agreed among themselves, however, that Nick would do the eating for Al, with the latter doing the praying for Nick. The scheme worked out well.

George Marshall, the big collar and cuff man from Washington, visited the Nats' headquarters here last night. He came to work out some details in connection with the pro basketball league in which he is the boss of the Capital City entry.

Buddie Myer, who starred at basketball as well as baseball while a rah-rah boy with the Mississippi Aggies, has received an offer to play with one of the professional teams this winter, but has turned it down. Its just as well that he did for it simply saved President Griffith the trouble from doing it.

There is a clause in the players' contracts which prohibits them from participating in other sports without the club's permission—and the club never gives this permission. In fact, it will be recalled that, just before he was named manager, Harris was forced to quit the pro basketball game. President Griffith contends that he pays his players well and it costs him a good deal to get them, consequently he sees no reason why he should risk losing them by injury in some game in which he is not interested.

A STORY appeared in one of the local papers here to the effect that there probably would be no clubs in the American league staging "Ladies' days" next season. According to the secretary, Eddie Eynon, the article is untrue, as far as it concerned Washington, for no such action is being planned by the Nats.

As a matter of fact only four clubs in the league now have special days when the fair fans are invited—Washington and Boston, in the East, and Chicago and St. Louis, in the West. Cleveland abolished these days a month or so ago, and the Browns canceled them last season for a time, but then put them on the schedule again.

The Washington club looks upon them as good things from a box office standpoint, for experience has shown that many of their guests on Fridays are cash customers on the other six days of the week.

Manager Harris is much interested in the work of Left Fielder Brickell, who is doing well with the Pirates. "He came near being one of us," said Bucky this morning. "Frank Isabel, Wichita Falls skipper, recommended him to us, but by the time we could get our scout there to give him the once over Pittsburgh had landed him."

Ty Cobb must rate Wingo mighty highly, as the red head has replaced Harry Heilmann in right in the last two games. The Georgian also had the fans guessing in Thursday's first contest, when he withdrew Fothergill, the second leading hitter in the league, to let Wingo bat for him.

The Tigers do not look like the outfit they promised to be earlier in the season. Along with their failure to hit in pinches is sloppy work afield. In the first inning of today's game they were charged with two miscues, but were lucky that they did no real harm, despite the fact that they followed a hit off Goslin's bat.

GENE EVADES PUNCHES OF MATES

Delaney Misses Often; Cut Lip Improves; Leonard in Ring.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Gene Tunney's workout today was an "in-between" affair, not so good as his best but far from his poorest. The challenger's boxing this afternoon was good and bad in spots. Jimmy Delaney, St. Paul light-heavyweight, gave the big crowd more than its money's worth with his rushing, tearing tactics.

Delaney managed to hit Tunney frequently, but many of the punches were half spent, when they got home and Tunney cleverly evaded some of the more murderous wallops. Delaney used a fast left hand throughout his two rounds in the ring. Tunney forced Delaney to miss more often today than was the case yesterday or the day before. The marine entry got some hard drives home and again cut his sparring partner's nose.

Today's exhibition was important, in that it apparently showed Tunney's lip well on the way to recovery. When the Stroudsburg camp was opened a cut, following a cold sore, made a troublesome lip, causing some uneasiness among the attaches and well-wishers of the bidder for championship. Either by accident or design, Delaney popped a hard left squarely on the lip today with no disastrous result.

HAROLD MAYS, back in camp after a pugilistic venture into New Jersey, closed the afternoon's entertainment with two rounds in the ring. Mays' style of boxing is not so flashy as that of Delaney and the last exhibition made something of an anticlamax after the preceding fist and skull clash, but the Bayonne boy did his work well at that.

Tunney forsook the road today, although this part of his training routine has not been abandoned. He will run again before he fights, but may not explore the Pocono trails on foot tomorrow.

Boxing tomorrow afternoon will close the public appearances of Tunney in the ring until the Sesqui climax. He will do his work in private Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

There were a couple of informal boxing rounds on the program today, when Tunney put on the gloves with a newspaper reporter in his room. The reporter was a fair fighter in his day, winning a title under the name of Benny Leonard.

Tunney will remain in Stroudsburg until early Thursday, when he will go to Philadelphia by train. The trip to the battleground will be made in a private car of a friend and he will be quartered in a private residence in the Sesquicentennial city.

KEARNS ASKS JACK, GENE TO COURT

"Taxpayer's" Suit to Bring Action Next Tuesday.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Jack Dempsey, world champion, and Gene Tunney, challenger for his heavyweight crown, have an opportunity to meet in a court room here next Tuesday, but not as antagonists.

The suit, said to have been brought by Jack Kearns, Dempsey's former manager, to prevent Tex Rickard, promoter, from paying the fighters any money before they honestly fulfill their contract in the ring at the Sesquicentennial stadium next Thursday night, came up in common pleas court today, and because of the defectiveness of the bill of complaint the case went over until Tuesday.

The defect was the failure of the complainant to name Dempsey and Tunney as defendants with Rickard. The court allowed the bill to be amended and gave ample time for the fighters to be legally notified so that they can make their appearance.

HOWEVER, it is not likely that Dempsey and Tunney will leave their training camps for their attorneys can appear for them. The defect in the bill was pointed out by Ira J. Williams, counsel for Rickard, who also argued for the dismissal of th esuit on the ground that it was insufficient in averments.

The court took under advisement Mr. Williams' motion to dismiss the suit.

After court adjourned, Tex Rickard gave out a statement that the suit was merely another gesture on the part of Kearns to find out where Dempsey's money is so an attachment can be made.

Kearns has a suit pending in New York to recover $333,000 from Dempsey.

The suit was brought in the name of Sol Wittenberg, an investigator for the law firm, of which John R. K. Scott is a member. He is described in the bill of complaint as a "taxpaxer and ticket holder." The bill asserts that to pay money to the fighters before the fight would be to defraud the State and the taxpayers' plaintiff if there were not "honest competition."

The bill further alleged that it was the intention to remove the cash proceeds of the fight from Pennsylvania jurisdiction.

The State of Pennsylvania is interested in the case, attorneys for the "taxpayer" said, because the Commonwealth under the boxing commission law receives a percentage of the gate receipts.

Attorney Williams, in his argument, said the taxpayer was trying to assume the powers of the boxing commission and the attorney general's department, and that the taxpayer had no right to doubt the government of Pennsylvania and try to get an injunction over the heads of the two State departments.

Dempsey, by Early Knockout, 39 MINUTES IS LIMIT Is Opinion of Ring Experts

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—On the site where America is celebrating 150 years of independence, the setting has been laid for a fistic battle between two modern young gladiators.

Surrounded by reminders of the glories of America's embattled history, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney are expected to add a spectacular and unprecedented chapter to boxing history in a match next Thursday at the Sesquicentennial stadium that can not last more than 39 minutes.

If the expectation of most expert critics can be depended upon, it will not last half that long. In spite of a competitive lay-off since 1923, Dempsey, the champion for seven years, is favored by the big majority of observers not only to successfully defend his title, but to win by a knockout.

THESE opinions are based on Dempsey's apparent come-back to close to his best physical condition, his recognized superiority over the challenger as a puncher and despite Tunney's own record for ruggedness and hitting ability.

For the privilege of witnessing the first heavyweight title battle of ten rounds in three years Promoter Tex Rickard expects a throng of 140,000 to pay about $1,500,000.

Only such masses as have witnessed the English Derby at Epsom, the Grand Prix at Longchamps, or the 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis would compare with the throng of fans expected to occupy seats in the big horseshoe shaped structure, or on the wide expanse of infield at prices ranging from $3.30 to $27.50.

The gathering probably will be as notable in representative citizenship as it is in size. Governors, cabinet members, Ambassadors, senators and congressmen, leaders in business and society, men and women of all walks of life will make up the cosmopolitan outpouring.

The magnets for all this public interest are two hard-fisted athletes trained for a hand-to-hand struggle that has a $1,000,000 stake.

THEIR immediate reward is a $600,000 purse, of which $450,000 goes to Dempsey—win, lose or draw—but to the victor an avenue for amazing financial return is opened.

In these days of highly commercialized sports, the heavyweight champion's income is of stupendous proportions. Not only can he command close to $500,000 for a single ring appearance, but his revenue from motion pictures, exhibitions and advertising projects may run well into six figures without his even working up a perspiration.

Dempsey has held sway since 1919, when he knocked out Jess Willard, at Toledo. His opposition since then, however, has been limited, partly because of a lack of real contenders and partly because of complications in the champion's business affairs which have hampered his fighting career.

During his last three successive years of competitive idleness, Dempsey has been accused of dodging the big negro challenger, Harry Wills, but the facts, as stated by Tex Rickard, seem rather to prove that opposition from political sources, prejudiced against a mixed title match, has been more responsible for the two failing to meet.

KNOCKOUTS of Tom Gibbons and Bartley Madden, men who had stood up against the heaviest guns of Dempsey and Wills without hitting the floor, elevated Tunney to a commanding role.

His position was further strengthened by a refusal of Wills to accept an elimination match with him last year.

Tunney is the champion's equal in physical proportions, both being at their best at about 190 pounds, and his superior as a boxer. The chief differences, however, come in speed, aggressiveness and punching ability. In all three the champion, even though admittedly past the peak of his career, is conceded to have a margin. Tunney's strong defense and his age, however, are counted in his favor, as well as his ability to box and absorb punishment.

In personality there is a strong contrast between the dark-browed champion, nervous and cat-like in his movements, and the pleasant-faced, blue-eyed and straight-backed challenger. Dempsey is all nerves, always on the jump, while Tunney is of calm and steady although far from stolid temperament. Jack likes crowds and activity; Gene prefers quiet peace, the woods and his books.

Dempsey in Receivership Following Kearns' Suit

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 16 (By A. P.).—Jack Dempsey was thrown temporarily in the hands of a receiver late today as the result of a suit filed by Jack Kearns, his former manager, demanding an accounting of all funds earned by the world's heavyweight champion from August 3, 1923, to August 3, 1926, the period of their three-year contract.

Dempsey was ordered to appear before Vice Chancellor Robert H. Ingersoll at 10 o'clock next Tuesday morning for a hearing.

Kearns in his bill of complaint, a voluminous document of 20-odd pages, sets forth that he has been manager of Dempsey for more than five years and that he brought him from obscurity, increasing his earnings from $200 for an exhibition to where he could have earned $500,000 for fighting Harry Wills, the negro challenger.

Kearns sets forth that he signed articles of agreement with Tex Rickard on August 18, 1925, for Dempsey to fight Wills on or before July 4, 1926, and that the champion had been guaranteed $500,000 for the engagement.

Kearns has a suit for $333,000 pending against Dempsey in New York. This represents a third of the money Kearns figures Dempsey could have earned provided he had carried out the campaign Kearns had mapped out for him.

HILLTOP VARSITY IMPRESSIVE AGAINST FRESHMEN

Aerial Game Effective In Drill

Donovan and Maroney Complete Heave for Touchdown.

Thompson Brilliant in Backfield; Frosh Unable to Gain.

By JACK ESPEY.

STACKED against the sturdiest crew of Freshmen who have trod the Hilltop gridiron in years, the Georgetown University varsity eleven met its first real bit of competition of the season in a practice game yesterday and presented the coaches a satisfying exhibition of its ability.

Although to the casual observer who heard Head Coach Little shout criticism at his men, the varsity appeared to play raggedly, such really was not the case, for they took hold of new plays only recently introduced and performed them well nigh perfectly.

The forward passing game, which seems to be one of the main parts of Georgetown's attack this year, was executed in midseason style with George Donovan and Bob Nork on the throwing end and Tip Maroney and George McCabe receiving.

Donovan and Maroney once turned in as pretty a piece of forward passing as has been seen in practice or contest on a local field in years. Donovan shot the ball 35 yards and Maroney snared it at his fingers' ends to complete the pass, and then streaked his way to the goal line 20 yards distant.

THE play was easily done despite the fact that the freshmen team was affording stanch opposition. The freshmen had been under the wing of Assistant Coach Frank Murray for two weeks, and they brought their training into good use.

In the other departments the varsity also played well, end runs and off-tackle smashes worked smoothly, with fine interference. Jerry Thompson, the stocky halfback who is attempting to fill the shoes of Jack Hagerty, brilliant ball-carrier of last year's team, got away in a couple of dashes around the ends, while Nork and McCabe hit into the line for large gains.

On the defense the first stringers blocked every thrust of the freshmen, who apparently had learned less about attack than defense.

Georgetown now faces the last week of preparation before opening the season at American League park Saturday against Drexel institute. If the present fast pace of the Hilltoppers can be maintained, they should start with a victory.

cessively. A good catch by Tavener of Bluege's near Texas leaguer for the final out prevented at least one more run being coined.

Both teams were up and doing in the sixth canto with the Tigers doing more. Ruel's opening single, Murray's suicide and Rice's one-shot gave the Nats one while it took four to satify the Junglecats, who knotted the count and were still threatening when the final out of the inning was turned in. In this session, Murray apparently lost much of his stuff. Although a two-base error by Rice started him off on the wrong foot.

Gibson led off with a single and carried on to third when Sam let the ball get past him. Blue then coaxed his third straight pass of the game and the alien pitcher counted on Manush's grounder, on which Lou was forced at second.

FOTHERGILL singled Heinie to third, and when Murray passed Wingo and had three balls on Gehringer, Marberry relieved him and gave the batter the ball needed to force one run in.

The runners held their bases on Warner's weak looper to right, but Tavener's liner to center brought home the two needed to make the score 4-all. Manush killed the rally by fouling to Ruel.

A nobby double steal, with Stan Harris on the front end, put the Nats in the van again in the seventh session. With two down, Bucky came through with his third single of the game, taking second on a balk and third on Bluege's scratch one off Tavener's chest. Then Stan and Ossie pulled their thieving act and Ruel ended the frame by lofting to Wingo.

In the ninth, with one out of the way, Joe Harris cracked out the first extra-baser of the game, doubling to the scoreboard. Stewart took his place on second and, after Stan Harris had been hit, took third on Bluege's roller on which Bucky was killed at second.

He got no further, however. Then the Tigers showed their claws again and pounded home victory.

Maryland U. Shows Form

□□□CRUM UNDECIDED ON TEAM□□□

In Drill With G. W. Eleven

UNIVERSITY of Maryland and the George Washington football squads scrimmaged for more than an hour yesterday at College Park, the first time this season that either team has been in action except with scrub teams.

The Old Liners appeared to be much farther advanced than the Hatchetites, both on offense and defense, and the Maryland men, too, apparently were in better physical condition.

George Washington, though, has a lot of good material and should be ready to meet its first real test when it tackles City College, of New York, here October 2.

Maryland, however, must get in trim earlier, for Washington college, which will invade College Park next Saturday, is due to bring the best eleven in its history. The Eastern Shoremen, in addition to having many veterans left, have much good new material and also a new coach by the name of Brown from Butler college. He is said to be injecting a "get there" spirit in the Chestertowners.

THE scrimmage yesterday showed that Crum, of George Washington, has not yet decided upon a tentative first team, while, on the other hand, Curley Byrd, of Maryland, has tentative first and second teams working, although few of the positions on the Old Line eleven are clinched.

The Old Liners started with Keenan and Adams, ends; Zulick and Leatherman, tackles; Fletcher and Wondrack, guards; Schenck, center; Kessler, quarterback; Linkous and Snyder, halfbacks, and Schrader, fullback.

Most of the linemen on the Maryland squad got a chance, while all the backs, except Thomas, who is nursing a bruised knee, saw action. Boyd was the second string quarterback with Capt. Stevens, Pugh and Parsons as the other ball toters.

Bafford, regular center, also was kept out to favor a slightly hurt ankle, but Schenck, a 153-pounder who was a halfback on the 1925 freshmen, showed up well in the position.

All of Maryland's backs did creditable work, while Dent, end, and Porter, guard, were conspicious among the second string linemen, although a number of others did some good work.

Friendship Gridmen To Workout Today

A drill for the Friendship A. C. eleven has been booked for today on the Fifth and L streets southeast field at 10 o'clock. The Stephens nine, which competed in section C, of the Capital City league, will tackle the Clifton Park nine today on the East Riverdale field at 3 o'clock.

Cubs, Braves Divide; Double Play Mark Set

Boston, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Boston and Chicago divided honors in a double-header today. The Braves won the first game, 3 to 2, scoring the winning run in the ninth with two out on High's single to right. The second game was a Chicago victory, 6 to 0.

Blake held the Braves to five hits, made three hits himself and fielded his position well.

Manager Bancroft and Catcher Taylor of Boston were put out of the first game for disputing a decision by Umpire McLaughlin at third base.

The Cubs made three double plays in the second game and claimed that their total of 173 to date has set a new National league team record for double plays.

C. U. GRIDMEN SHOW FORM IN WORK

McAuliffe Is Pleased by Smoothness of Playing.

Special to The Washington Post.

HAMPTON ROADS, Va., Sept. 18.—After 10 days of preliminary practice the Catholic university eleven took on its first real semblance of a smooth running machine in a long workout held this morning. The boys had their usual early morning walk, breakfasted, and after a short rest went to the Naval Station stadium. At 9 o'clock the morning session began and not until 11:30 did Coach McAuliffe call a halt to the festivities.

For the past several evenings Coach Jack McAuliffe has been holding blackboard practices, and in order to see how much the men profited from these instructions he had the first and second teams spend the entire morning in signal drilling.

McAuliffe was far from disappointed as he watched both elevens move up and down the field with marked precision and speed, the backs being especially prominent in their performance.

ON the line of the regulars Capt. Emil Mayer and Bill Connors played at end; Jack McGann and Jack McGovern were tackles; at guard Bill Shields and Ray Dufour did their stuff, and Bill Linskey held down the center berth.

The backfield was composed of Ray Foley at quarter, Nick Manfreda and Bill Harvey, half backs and Jimmy Schmidt full back.

The second team had in its lineup Johnny Long and Bill Howell at end; Joe Donnelly and Bill Larefel, guards; Coup Campbell and Ed Guyer, tackles, and center, Skater O'Donnell. In the backfield were Happy Conveigh, quarter; half backs, Tommy Smythe and Eddy Best and full back, Jim Carney.

The results of the coming scrimmage with the Naval Base teams here will show clearly whether or not these line-ups will be shifted around again before the opening game of the season, to be played at Norfolk League park on Saturday, September 25, against the Norfolk Marines.

St. Stephen's Gridiron Prospects Doubtful

There seems to be much doubt as to whether the St. Stephens A. C. will have a football team this season, owing to the fact that certain players have failed to turn out for practice.

The team will scrimage today at 1:30 o'clock on the field at Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Palace A. C. Eleven Lists Drill Today

Coach Turner will gather his Palace A. C. gridmen today on the Washington barracks diamond at 13 o'clock for a practice session. A meeting of the club will be held at Seventh and M streets southwest, Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

Cigarette IV Far Outclasses

□□□ WINNER COST $60,000 □□□

Field for President's Trophy

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

L. GORDON HAMERSLEY'S Cigarette IV had little trouble taking the second and third heats of the President's cup race yesterday, thereby clinching the title to the trophy. In the three heats, one of which was run Friday, the victorious boat led the other contestants by margins ranging from one-half to 1 mile.

The boat that was expected to force the winner, Miss Syndicate, one of Horace Dodge's craft, dropped out of the race in the final lap of the last heat when its propeller was broken. At the time of the accident, Miss Syndicate was running second, as it did in the first two heats. After the retirement of Miss Syndicate Commodore F. G. Ericson had little difficulty in piloting the Horace, also a Dodge boat, into second place.

L. Gordon Hamersley is the pilot and owner of the Cigarette IV, and it is reported that it cost him $60,000 to build the boat. In all races it has been in except the President's cup event, engine trouble has forced it out, but aside from losing a bolt in the first heat Friday, Hamersley reports that it has been in perfect running order.

MRS. W. J. CONNERS, driving her Miss Okeechobee, captured the Secretary of the Navy silver cup in a race in which Horace, Greenwich Folly and Cutis Wilgold III started.

The last named boat was leading by a good margin on the second lap, but developed engine trouble and was forced out. The Horace took second place and Greenwich Folly third.

Paul Prigg captured the Biscayne Baby class trophy with his No. 20 boat that won all of the three heats. His time was 8 minutes and 54 seconds, an average of more than 40 miles an hour.

Miss Spitfire VI took the 151 hydroplane class trophy although it dropped out in the final lap of the last heat because of engine trouble. This was possible because of the fact that it had won the first two heats and accumulated sufficient points under the scoring system. The spectators were keenly disappointed when Miss Spitfire dropped out, as Miss Westchester, winner of the heat, was putting up a great fight and making one of the few close races of the two days of competition.

Lady Helen II established a new world's record in taking the Junior President's cup race for boats under 350 cubic inches piston displacement. Her time for the 12 miles was 13 minutes and 4 seconds for an average speed of 39 4-5 miles per hour.

Dreadnaughts Play Chevy Chase Today

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 18.—Kermit Smith, under a contract to play with Washington in the American league next season, will pitch for the Dreadnaughts here tomorrow afternoon, when that club plays the Chevy Chase nine, one of the fastest unlimited teams in Washington. The game will be played at the Dreadnaught park, starting at 3 o'clock.

REGATTA RESULTS

CHESAPEAKE & POTOMAC HANDICAP—Miss Lizzie, owned by J. W. Orme, was only entry. It covered the 9-mile course in 8 minutes. Average speed—30 miles an hour.

PRESIDENT'S CUP RACE—Second heat: Won by Cigarette IV; second, Miss Syndicate; third, Horace; fourth, Greenwich Folly; fifth, Solar Plexus; sixth, Palm Beach Days; seventh, Sara de Sota; eighth, Nuisance; ninth, Special Chance. (Special Chance, owned by Elmer Chance, Maryland Yacht club, Annapolis, was an added starter). Distance, 15 miles. Time, 16 minutes and 18 2-5 seconds. Average speed of winner—53.53 miles an hour.

151 HYDROPLANE CLASS—Final heat: First, Westchester II; second, Spitfire V; third, Miss Washington; fourth, Baby Peerless; fifth, La Palina; sixth, Baby Star. Time, 8 minutes and 58 seconds. Average speed—40.15 miles an hour. Miss Spitfire II forced out because of engine trouble.

Miss Spitfire VI won the event, having scored enough points in the first two heats.

BISCAYNE BABIES—Final heat: First, No. 20; second, No. 15; third, No. 00; fourth, No. 23. Time, 8 minutes and 54 seconds. Average speed—40.45 miles per hour.

No. 20 won the event, taking every heat.

PRESIDENT'S CUP RACE—Final heat: First, Cigarette IV; second, Horace; third, Greenwich Folly; fourth, Solar Plexus; fifth, Palm Beach Days; sixth, Sara de Sota; seventh, Nuisance; eighth, Special Chance. Time, 17 minutes and 2.6 seconds. Average speed, 52.45 miles per hour. Miss Syndicate, driven by Horace Dodge, forced out because of engine trouble.

Cigarette IV won the cup, taking every heat.

JUNIOR PRESIDENT'S CUP RACE—For boats under 350 cubic inches piston displacement. Winner, Lady Helen II; second, No. 20; third, No. 15; fourth, No. 00; fifth, Lady Helen I; sixth, No. 23. Distance, 12 miles. Time, 13 minutes and 4 seconds. Average speed—39 4-5 miles per hour. (World's record.)

Southern Juniors Win Over Robins in Tenth

The Southern Juniors nosed out the Robin Juniors in a 10-inning game yesterday, 7 to 6. In the tenth inning with two out and one on, Blugie Moran hit to deep center, bringing in the winning run.

McGuire worked on the hill for the victors and allowed 12 hits and fanned 16 batters. Today the Southerns will tackle the Kroyden Juniors on the East Ellipse diamond at 1 o'clock.

KNICKS MEET ST. JOSEPH TODAY

Friendship Diamond Scene of Finale in Section A.

THE Knickerbockers will attempt to maintain their clean slate for the Capital City league season today when they meet the St. Joseph nine on Friendship field, Wisconsin avenue above Woodley road, starting at 3 o'clock.

St. Joseph registered a protest on last Sunday's game, which it lost to Mount Rainier. Allowing of the protest would give St. Joe a mathematical chance to tie the Knicks, and for that reason Capital City officials decided that the teams play the final game.

INASMUCH as the first meeting of these clubs terminated with St. Joseph forfeiting by leaving the field, after protesting an umpire's decision, there is expected to be no love lost in today's clash.

St. Joe advertised that it can beat the Knicks out of the Georgetown hollow. Today's the day.

"Lefty" Tripp or "Mike" Farrington will do the hurling for St. Joseph, while Manager "Pete" Haley will pick his flinger from the following staff: "Lefty" Flynn, Hal Chase, "Lefty" Jones, Ross Fisher, Henry Phipps and "Mac" McCarty.

MARINES SET FOR GRID OPENER

Keady's Men to Play New Hampshire Saturday.

DURHAM, N. H., Sept. 18.—Enhanced by three weeks of intensive training here, the United States Marine Corps football players are prepared for their opening skirmish here next Saturday with the University of New Hampshire gridmen. The Devil Dogs are steeled for this battle and hope to inaugurate their season with a victory.

Tom Keady, who has served coaching terms at Fordham, Vermont university and Lehigh, is acting as head coach for the Leathernecks. His aid-de-camps are Lieut. Frank B. Geottge and Lieut. Harry B. Liversedge, U. S. M. C. Both starred with past Marine teams.

The team is managed by Maj. Joseph C. Fegan, U. S. M. C., who is also athletic officer for the United States marine corps. The assistant manager is Capt. E. D. Howard, U. S. M. C.

Contrary to general belief, the Marines are composed mainly of former college satellites. A few have been drafted from the "rank and file," but the majority once were regaled in college raiments.

The schedule, which numbers thirteen engagements, is as follows:

September 25, New Hampshire university, Durham, N. H.; October 2, King college, Washington, D. C.; 9, St. Xavier college, Cincinnati; 16, Lehigh university, Bethlehem, Pa.; 23, Catholic university, Washington, D. C.; 30, Providence college, Providence, R. I.; November 2, Canisius college, Buffalo; 6, John Carroll university, Cleveland; 11, Temple university, Philadelphia; 13, Detroit university, Detroit; 20, President's cup game; Washington, D. C.; 25, Washington university, St. Louis; 27, Dayton university, Dayton, Ohio.

16th Artillery Takes Polo Tourney Opener

The Sixteenth field artillery quartet got off to a flying start in the fall high goal tournament of the War Department Polo association, which was opened yesterday on the Potomac park field, the gunners trouncing their mates from Fort Myer, the Third Cavalry, 21 to 4.

Third Cavalry at no time was able to cope with the flood of goals rung up by the Artillerymen, and but for the work of Lieut. Elms, a substitute, would have failed to score a single goal from the field, as a handicap of 3 was given the losers.

Joining in the opening play, War Greens and the Sixth Field Artillery of Fort Myer, Md., met, with the former using a handicap of 1 in beating the Marylanders, 9 to 4.

The tournament will be resumed Monday, War Whites meeting the Third Corps Area team, starting at 4 p. m.

Washington Ladies' Pin League Opens Oct. 12

The Washington Ladies' Duckpin league will renew activities this season with a ten-team circuit holding forth at the Coliseum alleys. It was decided at a meeting held last Thursday to open the season on Tuesday, October 12.

The officers elected are: May O'Brien, president; Bronson Qualtes, vice president; Lorraine Gulli, secretary-treasurer, and J. B. Baker, official scorer.

RIALTOS AND AUTHS OPEN PLAY-OFF SERIES TODAY

Rivals Battle On Barracks Diamond

Capital City League Finalists Start Play at 3.

"Gilly" Ottenberg to Face McGowan or "Shout" Taylor.

THE finals for the unlimited championship of the Capital City league will start today with the Rialtos, winners of Section B, meeting the Auths, champions of Section E, at the Washington barracks at 3 o'clock. A week from today, the winner of this game plays the Knickerbockers, who have practically clinched the Section A honors, to decide the race.

The dividing of teams into sections, according to their relative strength, as far as possible, has done much to keep interest in the series this year and also promises to make the finals different from any similar play-off for the unlimited title.

It will mark the first time that all but one of the "big" clubs has been eliminated. The Knickerbockers will represent the veteran organizations and comes into the finals after defeating the best of the city's teams. This fact takes nothing away from the Rialtos and Auths, who would have given any set of clubs a run for the money.

IN THE Auths, the finals will show the youngest club ever to reach the last lap of the race. Composed for the most part of High school players, the Auths marched to the senior Capital City title and followed with a parade through the Section C ranks, in both cases without the loss of a single game.

The Rialto nine is unique as sandlot clubs go, and is probably the only "closed" team in the city. No player who is not a member of the club may play and, to the credit of the Hebrews, they have taken in no new members to strengthen their team.

While the Rialtos might be classed with the long-established teams, today will mark their first real opportunity to break into the charmed circles of championship teams.

The Auths, with few exceptions, have played together for a number of seasons. Bill Sanderson piloted them to fame in the midget and junior ranks when they were known as the Southends, and Sanderson is still in charge.

"GILLY" OTTENBERG, who has won thirteen games without a defeat this year, is slated to hurl for the Rialtos. Ottenberg is a slow ball artist with a nice curve, and perhaps the best control of any sandlot pitcher. He has walked only three men this season.

For the Auths, the pitcher will be either McGowan or "Shout" Taylor. The former, not so long back a star with the Aloysius Midgets, has been improving with every game this season. Taylor, despite his 97 pounds, is pretty much pitcher, as his clean record for the season will testify.

The probable line-ups of the two teams follow:

Virginia White Sox Meet Severn Today

The Virginia White Sox, excused from their Arlington county game with the Hartfords, will travel to Annapolis, Md., today, where they will play the Severn A. A. nine. Charlie Brown, who blanked Cherrydale, will pitch. Manager Terry wants the following players to report at his home, 321 C street northwest, at 11:30 o'clock: McAlroy, Singletary, Schmidt, Brown, Griffin, Walsh, Gibeaux, Dove, Dickerson, Sams and Demma.

Ralph Young Pitches No-Hit, No-Run Game

Pitching for the Industrial Home School yesterday against the District Training School nine, Ralph Young, who starred with the New Havens this year, pitched a no-hit, no-run game, allowing but one player to reach first base. He walked. Industrial won the game, 10 to 0.

Young hurled another no-hit game early in the Capital City league midget series, but several reached the bases in that contest.

Football Series Just Ahead

□□□ CENTRAL HAS 2 VETERANS □□□

For Public High School Teams

By WALTER HAIGHT.

PREPARATION for the approaching high school football series will be in full sway this week with the opening of the public schools tomorrow. Business, Central and Tech already have started work, while Eastern and Western are due to take the field for the first time on Tuesday.

While it is rather early to make predictions, especially on a subject as uncertain as a high school sport, the coming series is likely to be one of the closest fought of the last decade, if the chatter of the various coaches bears fruit.

AT Business, John Collins claims he hasn't looked them over, but has hopes, while Coach Ahearn, of Western, has not been questioned. Ahearn has perhaps the best material, but will hardly admit it.

The Western team will probably be built around the following quartet, which has served it scholastic apprenticeship: "Shorty" Hilleary, halfback and kicker; "Big" Walker, 165-pound guard; Coombs, the lanky center, and Capt. Fred Owens, a halfback. Parks, another guard, is expected to be a regular.

"Bobby" Stevens, all-high shortstop, will be out for the team. He played well in independent circles last fall and may get one of the backfield berths.

"Peewee" Walker, who was operated on for appendicitis during the summer, will hardly be available. His parents are opposed to his participating in athletics, it is said.

Business has the most veteran players on hand, ten in number, and with the fifteen new players to report has the heaviest squad in the circuit. The experienced players are May, Stewart Dobrowolski, Davis, Silverman, Reville Jones, Higbey, Bernard Jones, Claggett and McGarrity. Henry Gallotta and Billy Byrd have shown the best form of the newcomers.

EFFORTS are being made to obtain the use of the Gallaudet field for Business practices. In the event that the gridiron is obtained, Business will scrimmage with "Zube" Sullivan's St. John's team this week.

Let it also be known that Business has a new set of uniforms as well as a new coach.

Coach Kelly is beginning to know who's who among his Central candidates. The reported migration of former Capt. Minnicks, of Tech, to the Mount Pleasant school will not materialize, according to Kelly. Neither Minicks nor Garrett, another prospective jumper, has put in appearance.

Schofield, the former Tech end, has reported but will not be available until after the first advisory, and hence will not meet Tech, which Central plays October 29. Capt. Blackistone and Sweet, a guard, remain of Central's fine squad of last year. Kelly has a large and green field of candidates from which to pick a supporting cast for that pair.

BLACKISTONE will be shifted from center, where he was regarded as the best pivot player in local high school ranks in many years, to quarterback. He will back up the line on the defense in addition, according to the coach's present plans.

Central's candidates, and the positions for which they seem best fitted, follow: Backs, Capt. Blackistone, Simmons, Sproul, Woodson, Birthwright, Ambrogi, Stevens, Ault, Boyd, Ross; centers, Michaelson, South; guards, A. Rogers, Dinkin, Trodden, Coombs, Smith; tackles, Sweet, C. Rogers, Tew; ends, Parke, Sargent, Rhodes, Lamb, Schofield.

The Central schedule follows: October 1, Baltimore Poly, stadium; 8, Alexandria High, stadium; 19, Eastern, stadium; 23, Newport News High, at Newport News, Va.; 29, Tech, stadium; November 5, Business, stadium; 12, Western, stadium.

SENIOR TITLE TO TREMONTS; FITZGERALD LEADS HITTERS

THE Tremonts won the championship of the Petworth Senior league yesterday by virtue of a double victory over the Kennedy nine at American League park. The scores were 6 to 5 and 12 to 4, the second game being called in the eighth on account of darkness.

At the end of the regular season the Tremonts and Kennedys were tied for the first honors.

"Doc" Baker's pitching and the uphill fight of the Tremonts featured the first game. The Kennedys hopped out to a 5-to-1 lead in the first three innings, but the Tremonts rallied to tie the count in the seventh and win by scoring a single run in the ninth. Baker allowed only six hits and fanned sixteen batters.

THE Kennedy went to the front again in the second game, only to "blow" in the eighth inning when the Tremonts shoved eight runs across the plate.

Nelson Jett pitched the second game and yielded six hits and fanned ten. Torney, the Kennedys, whiffed eight but was hit hard.

Gallotta and Ruppert were the "big guns" for the Tremonts in the second game, each getting a homer, while Hargett was the only Kennedy player able to hit Jett consistently.

NATIONAL GRIDDERS DRILL.

The National A. C., 150-pound football champions last year, will practice on the Plaza today at 10:30 o'clock. All players and candidates are requested to report to the field.

Takoma Tiger Player Has .500 Average for 9 Games.

FITZGERALD, of the Takoma Tigers, led the Petworth Senior league in batting, the averages compiled by Secretary Pete Clango reveal. Fitzgerald slammed the ball for the neat average of .500, competing in nine games. He was at the bat 36 times and collected eighteen hits, including seven doubles.

Dobrowoski, of the Kennedys, carried off second honors with an average of .488, making 20 hits, including four doubles, two triples and a homer. Dan Gallotta, Tremonts, was next in line with .486, while Hargett, Kennedy; Nee, Arrows; Collins, Arrows, and Garrett, Yorkes, were other players in five games or more to hit over the .400 mark.

Sole, of the Cardinals, was the "Babe Ruth" of the circuit, being credited with three homers. Jett, of the Tremonts, twice hit for the round-trip.

Titular Golf Nearing. Capitals Plan Affair. Court Loop Formed. Tourney Advances.

NEVER before has a forecast on the women's national golf tournament been so difficult to figure, and never before have there been so many promising youngsters entered for the event. Miss Glenna Collett, the defending champion, is the popular candidate for the victory, but some critics point out that the loss of five out of six tournaments which she has entered this year will weaken her chances.

The chances are, however, that when the titleholder starts next Monday at the Merion Cricket club she will be equipped with a full measure of the championship spirit for which she is famous. That Miss Collett can be depended upon to pull out of tight places was proved in the Shenecossett tournament when she came through with colors flying after being four down and six to play.

But five names have been inscribed on the Cox cup since 1916, but there is admittedly at least a chance that this year will see a new name added to the honor roll. Alexa Stirling Fraser held the trophy for three years and kept it during the two war years, but she has declined to enter the play this year.

Miss Marion Hollins, 1921 champion, probably will be prevented from playing due to ill health, and as Miss Edith Cummings, since her victory of 1923, has been out of competitive golf, she also will be among those missing. Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd is expected to enter and Miss Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto, Canada, will add the international flavor in the week of championship golf.

Taken from all angles, the probable winners of the 1926 national championship can perhaps be reduced to four players—Miss Collett, who is the favorite; Miss Maureen Orcutt, the metropolitan champion, who is undoubtedly the best player that New York has produced in many years; Miss Virginia Van Wie, who this year gained the honor of defeating the champion in a 19-hole final, and Miss Louise Fordyce, of Youngstown, Ohio, who also downed Miss Collett in the North and South championship at Pinehurst.

NEW COURT LOOP IN FIELD.

A fourth basketball league will make its appearance on the local courts this year, according to the plans of Mr. John R. Cavanaugh, who is organizing a parochial school circuit to provide competition in the Catholic schools.

An executive board drawn from the church and including leading physical directors in the city will direct the new league, some of the requirements of which will be heart examinations, health supervision, and the use of women coaches and officials.

The Baltimore Catholic Review has offered a cup to the league, which, according to Mr. Cavanaugh, will be awarded on a merit basis in addition to the winning of games.

It is expected that most of the parochial schools will enter teams in the new league and the following have already expressed their intention of joining: St. Paul's, Holy Cross, St. Martin's, St. Peter's, St. Vincent's Orphan asylum. St. Martin's will also enter a team in the Washington Recreation league this year.

PLANS for a banquet, dance, winter gym classes, indoor track, swimming and basketball were a few of the things which members of the Capital Athletic club have mapped out for themselves this year.

The banquet will take place at the Lee house on Thursday, September 30, and will mark the close of the outdoor season and the opening of the indoor season. Miss Lillian Hoffman, chairman of the subscription dance, announced that the affair will be held at the Potomac Boat club and the date has been set for Friday, October 8. It has been arranged to raise funds for paying off some old bills, and the club hopes its friends will come to its rescue. Misses Loretta Olmsted and Gail Nickerson are assisting Miss Hoffman with arrangements.

The indoor swimming season has been inaugurated in the Y. W. C. A. pool and will continue every Wednesday evening during the winter. The squad will observe strict training rules at all times, Miss Skadding explained, in order that they may be in condition for all nearby meets.

Arrangements have been made for the use of Wilson Normal school gymnasium two nights each week for gym, track and basketball, and on October 31 the Potomac river camp will be formally closed with a bonfire Halloween party to which members and their friends are invited.

The two members who have been welcomed into the club are Misses Clara Schmidt, and Viola Mae Trappe.

WEBSTER SCHOOL TO OPEN.

The Marjorie Webster school of physical education will open tomorrow with the largest enrollment in its history. Plans for the fall and winter athletic programs have not been completed, but the hockey squads will start practice shortly in preparation for the regular interclass tournament. It has not been decided whether an outside schedule will be arranged, but the school will in all probability develop some fast teams.

CAPITAL TENNIS ADVANCES.

All first round matches in the Capital Athletic club tennis tournament have been concluded and a concolation tournament for the eliminated players is under way on the Monument courts. The matches are being played off rapidly. Twenty-two racketers were entered for the play, and in every respect the present tourney is the most successful of the annual affairs the club has staged.

The Capitalites have reserved two courts for Thursday evenings and four courts for every other evening so it is expected that the finals will be reached by the end of the coming week.

Results of the first-round matches were:

Marion Leech defeated Julia Amen, 6—1, 6—4; Tillie Raine defeated Helen Kenyon, 6—0, 6—0; Claudia Kyle defeated Frankie Ross, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2; Marie Seibold defeated Alma Whaler by default; Ruth Curran defeated Francise Major, 6—3, 6—1; Pearl Demarest defeated Elisabeth Shepley by default; Maybelle Boyce defeated Mary Bercuoski by default; Willie Gude defeated Ione Whaler, 6—1, 3—6, 6—3, and Josephine Godbold defeated Loretta Ulmsted by default.

Accounts and Fashion Shops

□□□ WINNER GETS POST CUP □□□

In Week-Day Finals Tuesday

FASHION SHOP and General Accounting Office will fight it out for the championship of the week-day leagues and The Washington Post cup in a three-game series starting Tuesday at 4:45 o'clock. All the games will be played on the South Ellipse diamond.

It seems a difficult matter to eliminate the veteran players from these league titular battles. Year after year the youngsters have aimed to take the jobs of Johnny Blier, Eddie Carroll, Mike Moran and others and every season those fellows seem to keep up the stride.

However, several youngsters have made the grade and hold down regular berths on the two teams. In the latter class is Jack Mattingly, who has come forward with a rush and now classes with the best infielders in the city.

"PING" PURDY, the red-headed shortstop, is not in the final for the first time in a number of seasons. He cast his lot with the Chevy Chase Dairy team this year and was eliminated with his team when it lost the play-off for the Commercial league championship to Fashion Shop.

When the series was being planned, Fashion Shop was among the teams that was opposed to adding players from other clubs within the league which the team represents. But when it was voted that each club be allowed one player, the Clothiers chose Irving Claude as their man. Claude pitched the team to two victories in the semi-finals and may be the deciding factor the rest of the way.

This series is making sandlot history in more ways than one. In the first place, it is the first time that the clubs have ever played the finals on the Ellipse diamonds, free to the public. Second, the District Umpire association is donating its men to officiate the games, and, third, the scorers are also working without pay.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The price of 40,000 seats to be placed on sale for the Army-Navy football game here, November 27, will be determined by returns from a public auction of 500 boxes, each of which is expected to bring about $2,000.

The auction will be held within two weeks, it was announced by the South Park board, which controls Soldiers field, scene of the coming fray. It was indicated that most of the choice seats, other than in the boxes, would cost at least $10, but the commissioners hoped to be able to offer some for $5.

The tremendous cost of bringing the cadets and midshipmen to Chicago was given as the reason for the high admission. After the boxes are auctioned, the other seats will be put on the market.

German Champ Meets Turner; 42 Rounds on Big Card.

LOCAL fight fans should be in for a treat Tuesday night at Kenilworth when 42 rounds of boxing will be presented. While there are no champions on hand defending titles and the bouts do not promise to be of championship caliber, yet what is lacking in this respect should more than be made up by the willingness and aggressiveness of the combatants.

The headliner of 12 rounds between Jack Turner, of Washington barracks, champion middleweight of the army, and Julius Weisse, German middleweight titleholder, appears to be a natural. No direct line on them is obtainable since neither has met the same foes, but both are of the slugging type that is willing to take a couple in order to get home a single stiff wallop.

Fighters run pretty true to type and it is practically a certainty that both Turner and Weisse will follow their accustomed manner of mixing. Hence the battle should be a genuine give and take, and take your own choice for the winner.

THE local German colony is stringing with Weisse to a man, and not merely for a racial reason either. Since coming to America Weisse has fought four times in Madison Square Garden, two resulting in wins and the other pair in draws.

Weisse's best effort was made against Franklin Carpenter, a Dempsey sparring partner, who is no palooka as fighters go. The German dropped Carpenter twice for the count of nine in the last round.

Turner is convinced he can show local fans he is just as good as he was the night he held Willie Stribling to a draw. Turner has felt both the praise and the boos of local audiences and is convinced that he will again gain the good graces of the local fans Tuesday.

The ten-round semifinal finds Walter McFeeley against Dewey Adams, amateur middleweight champion of South America.

ALL-AMERICAN TEAM ANNOUNCED BY JOHN M'GRAW

Giant Leader And Ruth Differ

Wright Named Ahead of Joe Sewell for Shortstop.

O'Farrell, Root, Rhem Among Others Given Positions.

By JOHN J. M'GRAW,
Manager, New York Giants.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—I do not entirely agree with the selections made by Babe Ruth for the All-American baseball team, but in compliment to him I want to say that he, and those who have helped him, have done a masterful job. It is much stronger than any combination picked in previous years. It is not only based on mathematical records but it takes into account actual ability and also the human element. For example, no one can find any figures that will show a man's gameness as compared with another man.

Competitive spirit is one of the strongest factors in any pennant organization but, unfortunately, it has never appeared as such in the records.

Before entering into discussion of a subject that has interested me unusually, suppose I give Ruth's team and then mine:

Ruth's All-Amer. Team.		My All-Amer. Team.
Burns, Cleveland	1b	Burns, Cleveland
Hornsby, Cardinals	2b	Hornsby, Cardinals
Traynor, Pirates	3b	Traynor, Pirates
J. Sewell, Cleveland	ss	Wright, Pirates
Goslin, Senators	lf	Meusel, Yankees
Mostil, White Sox	cf	Mostil, White Sox
Cuyler, Pirates	rf	Ruth, Yankees
Margrave, Reds	c	O'Farrell, Cardinals
Pennock, Yankees	p	Uhle, Cleveland
Uhle, Cleveland	p	Root, Cubs
	p	Rhem, Cardinals

You will notice that I have added an extra pitcher. I have selected Root and Rhem, two young pitchers, over Pennock because the latter has been pitching for a winning and hard-hitting club all season. He has had more runs to make his record good. This, however, is no reflection on the ability of Herb Pennock. I regard him one of the greatest pitchers in the game.

Pennock, though, is an experienced veteran. Rhem and Root are both first-year men. They battled through to recognition in spite of a lack of run making at times. Root has, in fact, been a main factor in keeping the Cubs in the race.

The opinion of the newspaper men is all the more valuable because obviously it is not partisan. They see all the players and from their mental and actual position can get an unprejudiced viewpoint. Their judgment has been remarkably good. In many cases they have picked the right man for value, regardless of his actual statistical record.

I have no committee to help me. I am handicapped, much as Ruth was, by not having seen some of the players for any great length of time. I have seen most of those whom I have picked, though. I know of my own knowledge that they have the goods.

THERE can be no doubt of the gameness of George Burns, of Cleveland. He has worked under most discouraging physical conditions and always has made good. He has been an inspiration to his team. Burns is not a fast infielder, but his spirit has warranted my selection. His hitting has been wonderful.

I don't think there could be any question as to the selection of Rogers Hornsby for second base. He is a wonderful fielder as well as a great hitter.

Of course, I have considered Eddie Collins, one of the best second basemen that ever lived. He, however, is older and also is a manager. I would also consider Frankie Frisch, but for the fact that he has been in bad health all season and has not been physically able to show his real game. I suspect, though, that I would have considered Critz, of the Reds, ahead of either Frisch or Collins for this season. His work has been really wonderful. Critz is younger and is improving with every game.

I have seen J. Sewell often and regard him one of the best of the shortstops. Still I am compelled by judgment to select Wright, of the Pirates. In many ways he is the most important factor on the Pittsburgh club. You will recall how the club slipped when Wright was out of the line-up.

On the left-hand side of the infield the National league appears to be much stronger this year than the American. This also includes second base. I don't know of any trio in the American league that could surpass Hornsby, Wright and Traynor. Even if it came to a second choice the National league would still be stronger.

One of the best shortstops in the world is Travis Jackson, and where would you find a more accurate and reliable shortstop than Dave Bancroft? The fact that he is a veteran has not slowed him at all.

AT third base the National league has the best trio)—Traynor, Bell and Lindstrom. I doubt if anybody in the American league compares with that trio when we consider hitting, fielding and base running. I am mindful, in saying this, that Joe Dugan, of the Yankees, is one of the greatest infielders that ever lived. This year, the other trio appear to have an edge on him.

In the outfield I have selected all American leaguers—Ruth, Mostil and Meusel.

I can understand, of course, why Ruth, through a sense of modesty, did not pick himself. No team would be complete for the All-America without him. He justifies the selection in every way—fielding, hitting and throwing.

I have selected Bob Meusel because of his steady hitting and throwing. Though I haven't the records before me, the chances are that Meusel has driven in a very large share of the Yanks' winning runs. He has his weaknesses, of course, but as an all-around factor Meusel belongs on the All-America team.

In making this selection I had to consider Heilmann, Fothergill, Cuyler and Waner. Incidentally, if I had to pick between Cuyler and Waner, I think I would choose the latter. Ruth has not seen those two men work as I have. I never saw a gamer man than Waner. Besides that, his record is remarkable, when we consider that he is a first-year man. He stepped right out and made good from the start.

Fothergill, also, has been a big factor in the race all season. His hitting stands out as one of the events of the baseball year. Then, how could we figure out a great ball club without considering Harry Heilmann? He is not only a great hitter and outfielder, but what we know as a smart, thinking ball player.

Even so, I have decided to agree with Ruth in the selection of Mostil. That boy hit .335 up until a few days ago and was a wizard in the outfield.

IN selecting O'Farrell over Hargrave or anybody else, for the catching job, I think most ball players will agree with me. O'Farrell is largely responsible for the showing made by the Cardinals. He has a great arm and knows just how and when to throw. For illustration, our club didn't hesitate this season to start running on Hargrave, but that boy O'Farrell made us more cautious. On top of that O'Farrell has caught nearly every game.

This is no reflection on Hargrave. I think he has the most natural position at bat I have seen for a long time. His form is so nearly perfect that in a previous article I advised young players to study him as an example. It is mighty close between those two, but I must give the palm to O'Farrell.

In conclusion let me repeat: The selections of Ruth and his committee for the All-American team are the best I have seen for years. They are based on a judgment that really means something.

One Year Is Required In Making Golf Balls

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Golf balls are like wine and oysters, they can not be turned out in 24 hours. It takes months for them to mature, and golf balls laid down one year will not be played with till the next.

A manufacturer when questioned denied makers were restricting suplies of cheap balls to sell dearer ones. He said there had been a heavy demand this year which accounted for the shortage.

ALEXANDRIA POOLS, BATHERS TOO FEW, CLOSE FOR SEASON

Attendance Has Been Large Until Cool Weather Arrived Last Week.

COGAN WILL DIVIDES ESTATE WORTH $25,000

124 N. Patrick St., Alexandria, Va.

The municipal swimming pools will close for the season at 6 o'clock this evening, according to an announcement made by City Manager Paul Morton yesterday, the attendance having fallen off to such an extent during the recent cool weather that it is not thought justifiable to continue their operation this season.

The two pools were opened September 1, and, until the last few days, the attendance has taxed their capacity.

While the actual cost of the pools to the city, in addition to a substantial donation by Leopold Ruben, whose offer of a donation initiated the bathing pool project, was less than $30,000, the property is worth much more than this. The city took over the uncompleted building of the Y. M. C. A. construction, of which had been discontinued for lack of funds, at a cost of $10,600, this being the amount of indebtedness outstanding. There are three acres of ground for which the association paid approximately $16,000, and several thousand dollars were spent on the building. The remodeling of this building to suit the new conditions, and the installation of dressing rooms, lockers, and other appurtenances cost approximately $12,500, and the actual cost of constructing the large pool, which was borne by Mr. Ruben, was $6,000.

This is the first project exclusively for the entertainment of the public, in which Alexandria has ever been engaged, and it has proved to be popular. The pool is well adapted to aquatic contests, and next season, it is expected, will see many of these.

The kindergartens established at the beginning of the school year at Takoma Park, Silver Spring, Woodside, Bethesda and Kensington, in connection with the public schools at those places, started with an aggregate enrollment of approximately 175, according to Prof. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of schools, and with teachers specially trained for the work. The heaviest enrollment was at Takoma Park, where conditions are said to be crowded. Members of the Woman's auxiliary to the fire department, meeting in the engine house Monday evening, decided to inaugurate their fall campaign to raise funds for the firemen, with a "bake sale," October 2, in the engine house, from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon. This will be followed by a Halloween masked ball, October 30. Election of officers will be held at the regular meeting the second Monday in October.

A record enrollment of 216 pupils was reached at the local school at its opening on Monday. This has grown almost daily, and there is little doubt but that the appointment of a seventh teacher will be imperative before the school year has advanced very far.

HINDENBURG STOPS MOVE TO GIVE HIM A COUNTRY ESTATE

President Asks That Money Go to the Donors or to War Widows.

RETURN OF MONARCHY ASKED BY FRATERNITIES

Berlin, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—President von Hindenburg has quickly brought to an end a move on the part of the Pommeranean enthusiastic well-wishers, who purchased him a country estate, which it was intended to present on his birthday, October 2. On that day he will be 79 years old.

When the soldier-president learned that a newspaper was circulating a subscription list, he requested that the money be refunded to the donors, or if this was impossible, to turn it over to the widows and orphans of soldiers killed in the world war.

As far as a public man can enjoy privacy during his vacation, President von Hindenburg succeeded admirably in choosing a secluded spot in the Bavarian highlands. Unlike Paul Smiths in the Adirondacks, where President Coolidge passed his vacation, no newspaper reporters hovered over the chief executive's summer abode, and no staff of secretaries and stenographers converted Frau von Schilcher's castle into a workshop.

The only evidence of the distinguished guest's presence was a guard of Bavarian police stationed at the castle, much against the president's wish.

The mountain folk exhibited remarkable restraint while the president was at Dietramszell. Even the daily coach from Munich, which ordinarily came to Dietramszell, ended its trip near Schoenegg, so as not to disturb the guest. Only when the president ventured on excursions was it impossible for him to evade ovations by cheering crowds.

Joseph Bourgeot, librarian for the Dawes commission at Berlin, is the first Frenchman to receive a doctor's degree at a German university since the war. He has been awarded his Ph. D. at the University of Frankfort, writing a thesis on pacificsm under Prof. H. N. Cornelius, one of the best known pacifists and philosophers in Germany.

"M. Bourgeot said that he became acquainted with my philosophy works while interned as a prisoner during the war and that he received comfort from them," Prof. Cornelius says: "His thesis on the war and peace philosophy of Augustine was a deeply thoughtful piece of work."

Provincial police are extremely wary of soviet propaganda, despite the increasingly friendly commercial and political relations of Germany with the soviet government.

The chief of police of Heilbroon, a Suabian manufacturing center, recently prohibited the Russian violinist, Soermus, from preceding his solo numbers with an oral explanation of the purpose and meaning of each number, on the ground that "public safety and order might be endangered."

Elizabeth Bergner, Germany's favorite stage and screen star, is booked to appear this season in a preponderance of foreign plays, a number of which are said to be of her own choosing. She is scheduled to play Cleopatra in Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," which is to be followed by the German Julius Berstels' comedy "Dover Calais" and later by Michael Arten's "The Green Hat."

A reichstag investigation appears probable into the activities of numerous scholastic fraternities which are openly demanding the return of a monarchy. The "Kyffhauser Verband," a national students' organization, at a recent convention passed a resolution declaring:

"We renew adherence to our old slogan 'With God for kaiser and fatherland.' We firmly believe that a monarchical form of government is to be preferred, although in our support of the present government, our honorary brother, President von Hindenburg, must be our guide and model."

QUEEN'S PURCHASES ON SHOPPING TOURS LISTED BY PAPERS

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). With the English channel conquered, first by a maid and then by a mother, the question is now being asked who will be the first grandmother to perform the feat. So far there seemingly are no really promising candidates in sight to carry on the sequence started by the performances of Miss Ederle and Mrs. Corson.

When a queen goes shopping the broad glare of publicity continues to play upon her as it does upon virtually all her activities outside the precincts of the royal palaces.

Queen Mary took occasion, while stopping at Goldsborough, to make a shopping expedition to Harrowgate, nearby, and the account of her trip through the curio shops filled a full half column of close print in one of the big provincial papers. Even the purchases she made were enumerated in detail. These included a Chinese jade elephant and a monkey in similar material, some other Chinese antiques, a pair of blue Wedgewood vases and a Sheraton tea caddy of exquisite workmanship.

Her housewifely eye for a bargain, as well as her taste, were especially marked.

The land is not rich enough to produce Iowa corn, but grouse, wild fowl and salmon abound at the Barvas.

Diamond brokers are shuddering over the possibility that the increased alluvial diamond diggings in South Africa may result in a lot of cheap stones being thrown on the market.

Discovery and proclamation of an additional number of alluvial diggings has caused anxiety not only among the directors of the diamond mines, but also to the South African government officials, who fear the consequent flooding of the markets with a cheaper grades of gems will seriously affect their business.

The opening of a new diamond field always attracts both professional diggers and men who are either out of employment or are lured from their regular work by the hope of striking a fortune. The vast majority who try their luck, however, are bitterly disappointed and every diamond rush is invariably followed by a frantic endeavor by many disillusioned men and women to return to their former jobs.

Who owns a letter in transit? This is a question agitating government officials and the British public. The decision of the postmaster general to sell advertising on envelopes, printed by the postage stamp cancellation machines, has roused the anger of storekeepers and the British public generally.

All kinds of arguments have been set forth against the government's action. An envelope, after being posted, does not belong to the postmaster general any more than a consignment of freight belongs to a railroad company, is the general argument of persons opposing the innovation.

The government postal service, it is further contended, is merely the carrier which undertakes to deliver the letter to its destination for a fixed fee.

Sheffield steel manufacturers, in their efforts to cut into the American safety razor blade trade, are now turning out millions of blades every week. One firm alone employs 1,300 workers, and produces more than a million blades weekly. It is making preparations to double its capacity within the next few months.

In his annual report, Sir Gerald Bellhouse, chief inspector of factories, says that for some years Sheffield has been supplying a good proportion of the steel for the manufacture of safety razor blades in the United States, but of late the Sheffield manufacturers have been exerting themselves to produce the actual blades themselves for Britain's share of the world trade in this particular line.

Mrs. Charles E. Holmes has been chosen president of the Current Topics club to serve one year. Other officers chosen are Miss N. E. Smith, vice president; Mrs. Clayton F. Moore, secretary, and Mrs. W. E. Bennett, treasurer. Mrs. Kate Bascall entertained the club.

Sixteen replies were received by the Current Topics club and the Women's club to letters sent by them to each candidate in the recent primary inquiring as to their stand on the eighteenth amendment and their views as to the operation of the Washington suburban sanitary commission.

For the benefit of the Independent fire company of Riverdale, a successful carnival was held on the school grounds at University Park, beginning Thursday night and closing last night. The affair was under the auspices of the University Park Civic association.

At the first meeting of the Riverdale Citizens Improvement association following the summer recess, a report was submitted by Municipal Advisory Engineer Nickum setting forth the plans of the mayor and council and road committee for street improvements. The program calls for permanent improvements of the town's thoroughfares with special attention to drainage.

Theodore W. Venneman was named chairman of a committee to take up with the mayor and council enforcement of town traffic ordinances and also to confer regarding the ordinance compelling sewer connection in so far as it relates to property of citizens already connected with the system installed by the Riverdale Park Co.

Resignation of Louis Van Wormer as secretary of the association was accepted and Arthur T. Upson was, by unanimous vote, elected his successor. Mrs. Jesse Lane Keeley was given a vote of thanks for her work for the association.

BRENTWOOD.

The mayor and council met Monday evening, with 100 citizens present. Charles street residents were at the meeting en masse to protest against the flooded condition of their street in rainy weather. The proposed plan of eliminating the flood water was explained as follows: Water from Mount Rainier has been piped to the east side of Harris street and flows down that street to the intersection of Prospect avenue, where a catch basin will be constructed with two openings. The lower and larger opening will carry the greater part of the water down Prospect avenue through the park; the upper and smaller opening will carry some water to Charles street during heavy rains. The county surveyor has made a survey of Prospect avenue to establish the width of the street and work on the drainage ditch from Harris street will start at once.

A number of citizens were present to protest the granting of a permit to J. O. Holbrook to build a coal yard next the B. & O. railroad on Eldridge avenue, but as no very specific objections could be mentioned, no action was taken and the original permit stands. The balance of the county road rebate fund has now been received, amounting to $1,185.96.

Permission was granted by the mayor and council to the Holladay Street Ladies club to hold a party and dance on Holladay street September 30 and October 1 and 2 for the benefit of Holladay street improvement.

OPENING OF INSTITUTE CHAPTER TO BE RALLY

Formal Exercises Will Be Held on Wednesday; Prizes to Be Awarded.

ADDRESSES BY BANKERS

By F. W. PATTERSON.

An outstanding event in the financial district this week will be the opening rally of the Washington chapter, American Institute of Banking, which will mark the beginning of all chapter activities for the current year, and will be held Wednesday at the Willard hotel, commencing at 8 p. m.

Paul B. Detwiler, assistant cashier Philadelphia-Girard National Bank, and president-elect of the American Institute of Banking, will be the honor guest and from an experience of many years in institute work will bring a helpful and interesting message to the present chapter members as well as to the vast number of new students who are expected to enroll on that night.

While the meeting is planned primarily to make possible a comprehensive presentation of the activities for the year, as well as to bring together the entire membership for a social evening, the formalities will include the presentation of prizes to successful students in the school year closed in June, and addresses by representatives of the District bankers' financial associations. Following the exercises there will be music and dancing. The program follows:

Introductory remarks, president of the Washington chapter; presentation of certificates, president of the chapter; presentation of three Charles J. Bell prizes, amounting to $50 in gold, by Charles J. Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co.; presentation of the three Washington Clearing House association prizes, totaling $50 in gold, by John Poole, president Federal-American National Bank and member of the clearing house committee; greetings from the District Bankers association, by Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank and vice president of the bankers association; greetings from the Alumni association, by Edward J. McQuade, vice president Liberty National Bank and president of the alumni; "The American Institute of Banking" by Paul B. Detwiler, president; outline of chapter activities for the year, by T. Hunton Leith, assistant cashier Security Savings and Commercial Bank and president of the local chapter.

Insignia Committee Named.

Following the suggestion that distinguished services of high officers of the District Bankers association should be acknowledged by a distinctive badge or insignia which could be worn at conventions and other formal gatherings of bankers, Howard Moran, president, has invited John Poole, president of the Federal-American National Bank and Harry V. Haynes, president of the Farmers and Mechanics National Bank, to form a committee to be known as the insignia committee of the association.

National Debt Payments.

Funds available for reduction of the national debt from the sinking fund and payments under foreign debt settlements indicate that retirement of the debt contracted in the world war should compare favorably with the past records of the Treasury.

The government recently virtually extinguished the $127,000,000 indebtedness after the war of 1812 by 1835, or in 21 years. The civil war debt of $2,844,000,000 was reduced in 28 years to $839,000,000. Debt retirements since the termination of the world war to June 30, 1926 amounted to $5,841,290,000.

According to computations contained in Bankers Trust Co.'s publication entitled "United States Government Securities," which has just been issued, the present interest-bearing debt of the government should be extinguished by 1951. The war debt should be retired by 1948, or just 30 years after the close of the world war. Any surplus revenues during the period which are not subjected to calculations should operate

Wheat Market, Firm at First of Week, Weakens as Skies Clear.

PROSPECTS OF GOOD YIELDS LOWER CORN

Flax Also Declines, but Oats Advance as Result of Light Offerings.

Changing weather conditions were a dominating factor in the grain markets during the week ending yesterday, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture, and prices advanced or declined as weather became more or less favorable.

Rains in the United States and Canada delayed marketing and threshing of spring wheat and the market turned firmer. Toward the last of the week, however, weather conditions became more favorable and the market weakened. Corn crop prospects continued generally favorable and prices declined 2 to 3 cents a bushel. Flax also declined as a result of Argentine competition, but oats prices advanced as a result of light offerings of good quality grain.

The world wheat market situation was not changed materially. Reports from virtually all the important countries of the northern hemisphere except Russia and China indicate this year's wheat crop is but little larger than last year's.

In the European countries, however, production, according to the present estimates, is about 8 per cent below last year. Rains have delayed marketing in Europe and reports also indicate the quality of much of the wheat is not high. This is causing a good demand for high quality wheat from the United States and exports to date have totaled nearly 60,000,000 bushels. Canadian marketings have been delayed by the recent rains, but heavier offerings are expected if weather continues favorable.

World Prices Higher.

World wheat prices, as reflected in the Liverpool December prices, are about 6c per bushel higher than at this time last year. September prices in Winnipeg, however, are only about 3c higher than at this time last year, while Minneapolis September wheat is 10c lower and Kansas City September about 21c below quotations at the corresponding time last year. The lower United States prices reflect the larger crop and larger exportable surplus east of the Rockies.

Receipts of hard winter wheat in the central Western markets fell off materially during the week as a result of floods and transportation difficulties. Country movement was very light and current receipts generally were of poor quality grain. Elevators were the principal buyers, but mill and export demand also was fairly active. Bids for grain to arrive were advanced sharply in Kansas City and were about 8½c over the Chicago December price at the close of the week. No. 2 hard winter wheat 12 per cent protein was quoted at 5c over the Kansas City September price, which closed September 17 at $1.28. 12½ per cent protein was quoted at 6c over and 13 per cent at 7c over. Soft winter wheat prices were firmer as a result of light receipts rather than an improved demand.

Cash premiums on spring wheat practically were unchanged. The bulk of the receipts was of damaged grain, which sold slowly. All good wheat readily was taken by mills. Mill storage space, however, is limited, as Northwestern mills have accumulated large stocks of winter wheat.

A large percentage of the deliveries by farmers in the spring wheat territory also is reported to be going into storage, but interior elevators have become unwilling to take grain on a storage basis because of the poor condition of the wheat at present. Twelve per cent protein No. 1 dark Northern sold at Minneapolis at from 2 to 6 cents over the September price, which closed September 17 at $1.39⅝. Twelve and one-half per cent sold at 3 to 8 cents over and 13 per cent at 5 to 10 over. The movement of durum wheat was slow, but with clear weather a large movement is expected, and it is believed also the quality will be good generally. No. 1 amber durum was quoted at Minneapolis at from $1.37 to $1.50 per bushel, an advance of about 4½ cents for the week.

Rye Market Fluctuates.

Pacific Northwestern markets also were firmer. Exporters and mills were competitive buyers, and prices for soft and Western white were quoted at the close of the week at Portland at $1.32 per bushel. Larger quantities are reported going into storage, as farmers are not forced to sell. Receipts at the Northwestern markets were about double those of last year, and the movement from the Northwestern ports is the heaviest in years. The Idaho movement to the Northwest, however, has fallen off, as outlets are available in other directions.

The rye market fluctuated with wheat. Mills bought the better grades, but the receipts of damp and sprouting qualities were slow sale. Future prices advanced about 1½ cents, and No. 2 rye sold at Minneapolis at around 94 to 95 cents per bushel.

There was some concern as to the outturn of the corn crop as a result of continued wet weather and the lateness of the crop. Heavy receipts, however, and better weather toward the close of the week weakened the market and prices declined 3 to 3c per bushel. There was a good demand, however, for the current offerings and stocks at the markets have continued to decrease slowly. The Pacific coast demand was fair in the central West and there also was some inquiry from Texas, Oklahoma and the Mississippi valley. Premiums on white corn were increased at Cincinnati, where No. 3 white sold at 83 to 84c compared to 81c for No. 3 yellow. No. 3 yellow at St. Louis sold at 80½c, and No. 3 yellow at Kansas City at 84 to 85c.

The poor quality of a large percentage of the receipts of new oats caused prices to advance, particularly for the better grades. Receipts have fallen off sharply and the demand for good quality grain has become active.

Barley in the central West advanced about 1½c during the week. Maltsters were active buyers at Minneapolis, Chicago and Milwaukee, but only a small percentage of the receipts were of good malting quality. Pacific coast markets were not materially changed. There is a good supply of feed barley well distributed and the demand for this grain for feed is more active.

London markets were also not materially changed, superior California barley being quoted at about $1.90 to $1.95 c. i. f. There was very little trading on either medium or superior qualities of California barley. Tunisian barley was in good demand, as quality was above normal. There was very little demand for Danish, Polish or Swedish barley. The English crop was reported late and the yield is disappointing. The barley trading in English markets is exceedingly dull because of strike conditions.

STEADIER TONE SHOWN IN MARKET FOR BONDS

French Issues Resume Advance; Many Prices Drift Aimlessly.

CARRIER GROUP IS FIRM

New York, Sept. 18 (By the Associated Press).—Bond prices drifted aimlessly in today's quiet trading, with the market developing a somewhat steadier tone after yesterday's relapse. Confidence was partly restored by the vigorous rally in stocks and the refusal of financial circles to take alarm over the maintenance of relatively stiff money rates.

French obligations resumed their advance as the recent spell of profit taking ran its course. Fractional gains were recorded by nearly all the government, railroad, municipal, and steamship issues on a moderate volume of buying. Belgian, Italian and German bonds, however, lost ground.

Trading in domestic liens was singularly lifeless, the observance of the religious holiday intensifying the usual Saturday dullness. Gains of 1 to 2 points were registered by Granby Mining 7s, Empire Gas & Fuel 7½s, American Writing Paper 6s and Continental Paper & Bag 6½s, but Skelly oil 6½s slumped nearly 3 points to 135.

Rail issues were firm, but they failed to keep pace with the vigorous upturn in the stocks of the carriers. Missouri Pacific first 6s and Oregon Short Line 5s were in demand.

Bank Clearings Less Than a Year Ago

Bank clearings at leading cities of the United States for the week ended September 16 aggregated $9,483,623,000, a gain of 32.9 per cent over last week, a holiday week, but a loss of 4.4 per cent from the like week of last year, according to Bradstreet's Journal. Outside of New York the total was $4,250,623,000, an increase of 35.9 per cent over last week, but a decrease of 3.8 per cent from this week a year ago. New York showed a drop of 4.9 per cent from last year. Twenty-eight cities reported decreases from last year, while 30 disclosed gains. Chicago reported a loss of 7.3 per cent; Philadelphia, 4.2 per cent; Detroit, 1 per cent; St. Louis, 6.3 per cent; Cleveland, 1.4 per cent; Baltimore, 18 per cent; Minneapolis, 14 per cent; Cincinnati, 2.6 per cent; Atlanta, 37.5 per cent and New Orleans, 14 per cent. Boston displayed a gain of 4 per cent; San Francisco, 1.7 per cent; Pittsburgh, 5.6 per cent; Los Angeles, 11.2 per cent and Kansas City, 3.2 per cent.

Ellsworth to Direct Acacia Conference

N. E. Ellsworth, superintendent of agents of the Acacia Mutual Life Association of this city, will direct a regional conference of branch managers and agents of the Middle Atlantic States, to be held at Philadelphia tomorrow.

Recent additions to the official staff of the Acacia Mutual Life Association, as announced at headquarters yesterday, include Dr. D. M. Shewbrooks, associate medical director, and C. L. Kirk, advertising manager. Dr. Shewbrooks was formerly with the Lincoln Life Insurance Co. Mr. Kirk is a Fort Wayne, Ind., man.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—All grain averaged lower in price today. Heavy selling of wheat, induced by more favorable weather conditions in the Canadian Northwest and a forecast of generally fair over the three provinces, revealed a lack of buying power in the pits, and values broke sharply. Corn and oats followed in the wake of wheat. At the finish wheat showed a net loss of 2½ to 3⅛ cents; corn was down 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents; oats were off ¼@⅜ to ½ cents, and provisions 10 to 35 cents lower.

Although sentiment was bearish, traders failed to press the selling side on the declines. There was short covering and scattered buying at times, however, which acted as a check on the market. Little export demand was in evidence at the seaboard, but one report said charters had been let for about 2,000,000 bushels of wheat of which 400,000 bushels were at the gulf. The trade looks for a liberal reduction in the domestic visible supply of Monday, the figures probably reaching 2,000,000 bushels.

There was little general demand for corn, aside from week-end profit taking by shorts. Much long corn was unloaded on the decline. Warmer weather of the past few days has ripened corn rapidly in many sections.

Oats averaged somewhat lower with other grains, but failed to reflect the full decline scored in corn.

Provisions were lower in line with hog values and the weakness in grains.

WASHINGTON KIOSK REVEALS WEATHER FELT BY RESIDENTS

DIGRESSION BLAMED IN PART ON DEAD AIR

Some Cities Have Banished Them as Giving Places Bad Reputation.

If the weather kiosk at Pennsylvania avenue and E street northwest had been telling temperatures in some other city this summer, its days might be numbered now.

St. Louis, Mo., once had a weather kiosk. An irate group of business men had it torn down and banished forever. They were afraid that it would give the city a "bad name" from a weather standpoint. The same thing has been done in several other cities by booster organizations.

The crime which cost those kiosks their lives was recording a temperature higher than the so-called official temperature. But none of them was more guilty in that respect than the kiosk in this city.

Flouts the Forecaster.

During the several "heat waves" here this summer, the temperature registered in the kiosk has invariably been several degrees higher than the official temperature. There are instances on record, according to J. H. Jones, of the instrument division of the United States weather bureau, where the kiosk temperature has been as much as 10 degrees greater than the official temperature.

The reason for this variance is obvious. The thermometer which gives the official temperature for Washington is located on the roof of the weather bureau building, whereas the kiosk thermometer is located right on the street.

The official thermometer on the roof of the weather bureau is inclosed in a little shed-like structure and is sheltered from the rays of the sun. The temperature which it registers is the temperature in the air, free from all outside influences. Virtually all "official" thermometers are so elevated and sheltered.

Kiosk Made of Iron.

The Pennsylvania avenue kiosk is located at a spot that usually feels the full force of the heat's rays. The heat is reflected from the burning asphalt and has a strong influence on the thermometer within the kiosk. But that is not the only factor tending to boost the mercury. The kiosk is made of iron, a metal notorious for absorbing and retaining heat. Furthermore, a large amount of dead air gets inside the kiosk and helps to damage Washington's weather reputation.

So it is that the kiosk thermometer will show a temperature of 100, say, when the official temperature is announced as 95. But at that, the kiosk temperature probably comes nearer to the temperature experienced by the average Washingtonian than does the other. Mr. Jones, of the instrument division, admits this.

If the official thermometer were taken from its sheltered nook on the roof of the weather bureau and placed in the hands of a pedestrian in downtown Washington on a hot day, it might have a different story to tell.

However, it is almost certain, a

The weather kiosk at the west end of Pulaski square, Pennsylvania avenue and E street. Records of the past few months show that its thermometer has little in common with the official thermometer at the weather bureau. Many cities have abolished kiosks similar to this one for that very reason.

LONDON SEEKS DEFENSE AGAINST WAR AIR RAIDS

URGE GAS PROOFROOMS

London, Sept. 18.—The defense of the city of London against raids from the air was discussed recently in the British parliament. The members of parliament devoted their time to studying measures necessary to protect the civilian population against death from bombs and especially from poison gas.

C. G. Ammon, the socialist member of parliament from Chamberwell, has a bill framed to provide every man, woman and child in London with a gas mask. He wants to train the entire citizenry to the use of masks, so that they will not be at the mercy of poison gas if war should break out against England without warning and London were besieged from the sky.

It also is in the scheme to require the householders of London to build "gas rooms" in their houses, the same as folks in the American cyclone States have special cellars where they may stay with safety during the great windstorms.

Every house will, if the bill goes through, be outfitted with sizable rooms, treated chemically at fixed intervals, so as to remain proof against the fumes from the poison gas shells.

The bill also would equip large public shelters which would not be used except in war time and would be bombproof, gasproof buildings, where hundreds of poor people could find refuge from the attacks.

Mustapha Kemal Flouted When He Orders Harem Veil Discarded in Turkey.

SHORT-SKIRT WEARERS BRAVE JAIL IN GREECE

London, Sept. 13 (By A. P.). Dictators and kings the world over are trying to reform woman's dress by various methods. But skirts continue to shrink, sleeves get no longer and the edicts of man have not covered up the bare necks which various high-placed officials pretend to find objectionable.

Mustapha Kemal's press agents would have one believe Turkish women have cast aside the veil at his suggestion and altered their costumes to harmonize with the women of the West.

Kemal's Order Flouted.

Yet travelers who have been away from the great cities in Turkey say the Mohammedan women are clinging to their veils. Turkish men had to lay aside their fezzes, and some Turks were executed for clinging to them.

Pangalos tried to lengthen women's skirts by law in Greece, but had to abandon the attempt. Greek women went to jail rather than comply with the orders of the Athenian dictator.

King George let it be known in Cowes that he thought very short skirts were unattractive, and many of the women who associate with royalty donned longer gowns. But he was too wise to attempt any general reform in woman's dress. Both he and Queen Mary have done much to prevent extreme fashions from prevailing among women who are received at court.

Mussolini's Experiment Fails.

Mussolini's effort to standardize the dress of Italian women and lessen the cost of dress by having a uniform for women is creating much amusement among British officials who had to do with the effort made in England during the great war to provide a standard costume for women at a remarkably cheap price.

Even the humblest women showed themselves to be individualists and despised the cheap and unattractive costumes.

King Albert of Belgium may get the women of Belgium to help exchange by using only war bread. President Hindenburg may persuade German women to use only home-grown rye for bread, thus reducing the importation of wheat flour, and Mussolini may get Italy to eat more potatoes and less macaroni in the interest of national finances, but Englishmen who had a hand in trying to standardize female attire and reduce its cost to a minimum smile at the efforts of the Italian dictator to put Italy's artistic, color-loving women into drab uniforms.

Baseball Is Leading In Philippine Sports

Honolulu, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Baseball easily ranks as the most popular game in Hawaii, which is as cosmopolitan in sports as in population. A survey just made estimated that 5,500 men and boys on organized teams took part in the national game in the Territory this year.

The story is going around of a teacher who asked where New York was, and whose class of young American citizens of Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, Filipino, and Korean ancestry thereupon informed her New York was in both the "big leagues."

STINNES' DAUGHTER WINS AUTO CONTEST

Girl Drives Car 500 Miles, Defeating 50 Others, in Germany.

Berlin, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Clairenore Stinnes, 29-year-old daughter of the late Hugo Stinnes, is turning her energies to sports now that she has been deprived of a business career by the collapse of the far-flung Stinnes fortune.

Driving her own sport racer, Fraulein Stinnes recently won the South-German reliability automobile tour of 500 miles against 50 men and women competitors. She is the foremost woman automobile driver in Germany.

The story is told of how her father entrusted her at an early age with a share of the management of his industries. Sent to South America to reorganize a branch office, she amazed her father by firing a half-dozen executives. She directed the South American branch until new executives arrived from home. Like her three brothers and a younger sister, her middle name is Hugo.

AFRICAN TRIBE HELD IN SERFDOM, TRIAL OF PRINCES REVEALS

Brothers, Held for Attempted Murder, Tell of Natives Born in Slavery.

BOTH NABBED AFTER BATTLE WITH CHIEFS

Palapye Road, Beuchuanaland, Sept. 18.—A life of serfdom is still led by a whole tribe of African natives in the British protectorate of Bechuanaland. Bechuanaland was visited by the Prince of Wales when he made his tour of the union.

At that time Sekgoma was chief of the Bechuanaland natives, called the Bamangwato. He was the successor of Khama, the greatest of all the native chiefs South Africa has seen. But since Khama's days the rule of the Bamangwato has steadily degenerated. Factions have arisen and been steadily growing in strength.

Trouble came to a head when Sekgoma was succeeded by Tshekedi, who is acting as chief during the infancy of Sekgoma's son. Tshekedi, who is only 21 years old, was educated at the native college at Lovedale and was summoned there last December to succeed Sekgoma. Almost at once friction arose between Tshekedi and Simon and Obeditse Ratshosa, grandsons of Chief Khama and princes of the royal blood.

The trouble came to a head last April. On April 4, a message was sent to the Ratshosa brothers telling them to attend a khotla (native council) on Easter Monday. They sent back an insolent message, saying that they were attending a wedding. In the afternoon, the khotla sat again and the brothers were again told to appear. This time they did attend.

The chief said he would treat them as others who disobeyed him and ordered them to be thrashed. The Ratshosas said that they were princes of the royal blood and could not be flogged.

A fight ensued. Simon and Obeditse got away and later returned armed and, it is alleged, deliberately fired at the khotla. Four shots were fired; three by Obeditse and one by Simon. All went wide. Then Obeditse went further forward and fired again. The chief, Kgosidintski, and Copole were wounded. After this the members of the tribe retaliated. The accused fled and sought shelter, one at the magistrate's and one at a storekeeper's.

The Ratshosas were subsequently arrested by the British authorities and their trial on a charge of attempted murder was begun here recently.

One of the grievances which led to the dispute was, according to the allegations of the Ratshosa brothers, that wto "Masawara servant girls" had been taken from them by order of Tshekedi; and it is in connection with these "Masawaras" that the trial has provided what is an extraordinary revelation.

Cross-examined by counsel for the Ratshosas, Chief Tshekedi stated that the Masawaras were a subject tribe. They were distributed among the headmen and looked after their cattle. All the Masawara in Serowe were servants of the Bamangwato; a Masawara child became a servant for life of the Bamangwato on whose property it was born. This went on from generation to generation. The majority of them were not paid for their services but lived on goat's milk and were sometimes allowed to eat a goat's carcass. He denied, however, that they were slaves; they were servants, though they were not free.

CHINA'S BOY EMPEROR NOW LIVING ON CHARITY

Dethroned Ruler Supported by Loyal Subjects, Former Tutor Reports.

HOLDS FORTUNE STOLEN

Tokyo, Sept. 18.—The boy emperor of China is broke and dependent upon gifts from former subjects who are still loyal for his daily living. So reports Dr. Johnson, for many years tutor to the former occupant of the dragon throne and his companions in exile in Tientsin, who has just reached Japan. He describes the situation of the boy emperor, his bride and his retinue as pitiful.

When the emperor was dethroned in the revolution he was promised a large annuity from the Chinese republican government, which was never paid in full and not at all during recent years. He had, however, his palace at Peking and his personal treasures, until the "christian general," after his coup d'etat at Pekin forced the emperor to flee for his life to the legation quarter, and then seized his palace and all his treasures. The excuse was that these belonged to the republic and needed inventorying.

Disguised as a student, the boy emperor escaped from Peking to Tientsin, where he is living almost in poverty. He desires to travel abroad, to see the world, later to return to China, but he has not the funds to permit this.

RAILS AND INDUSTRIALS LEAD IN BRISK ADVANCE

FEW STOCKS DO LITTLE

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Sept. 18.—The railroad and industrial stocks led a substantial advance in today's short session on the New York Stock Exchange. In fairly active dealings for a Saturday market, the turnover approximating three-quarter million shares, many issues which had declined sharply in the preceding session regained all their losses and more. General Motors attained a new high and closed at the top, and C. & O. furnished the fireworks with a sensational upward drive of more than 12 points, finishing 11⅞ net higher.

The rally got under way about the end of the first hour, following a dull, cautious and mildly reactionary opening, and brought the whole list distinctly higher. A few of the stocks that broke more severely in Friday's trading were still drooping, but this was decidedly not the rule, and Mack Trucks, with a 2½ point loss, was the only leading issue to show a recession on the day.

The rails, particularly the high-grade stocks, were well out in the van of the advance, with the Nickel Plate merger roads' shares the features. In addition to the C. & O. skyrocketing movement—in which, by the way, it boomed up more than 10 points in less than a half-hour and in so doing topped its previous high by 8 points or so—there was a gain of 3¾ points by Pere Marquette and one of 5¾ in Nickel Plate itself.

Other carrier shares showed marked strength, outstanding gains including Southern Railway's 3 points, Louisville & Nashville's 2¾, Norfolk & Western's 2¼ and from 1 to 2 points in all the Eries, New York Central, Lackawanna, Delaware & Hudson, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Atchison and numerous others.

The strongest of the industrials was the premier automobile stock, closely followed by Allied Chemical & Dye, American Smelting, American Locomotive, Bethlehem Steel, Hupp Motors, Youngstown Steel, DuPont, Commercial Solvents B., Worthington Pump, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and Owens Bottle, all of which scored gains ranging from 2 to 4 points.

Some sort of a technical rally following yesterday's break, the first since last spring, to combine impressive losses with impressive volume, was generally looked for, although some prognosticators expected that forced liquidation by individuals and pools might prolong the drop. Certain phases of today's move, however, seemed to be inspired by investment buying attracted by the reduced quotations at the close of Friday. There is doubt, though that an extremely large part of the buying today represented short covering.

It is probable that public participation will be light until the credit situation is further clarified. All fluctuations of the money market last week, except for the somewhat surprising rapidity with which call money jumped back to 5 per cent yesterday afternoon, followed expectations closely. Not until later in the month will it become apparent whether the Federal Reserve Board, by its operations in the open market, will increase or alleviate the normal seasonal stringency.

Among the stocks beside Mack Trucks, which were conspicuously weak yesterday and which failed to take an active part in the rally this morning, were Hudson Motors, Montgomery Ward and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

Foreign exchange dealings again were featured by the Japanese yen, which have been making new high records steadily in recent sessions. Except for Greek drachma, which edged higher, the European currencies were practically unchanged.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—An early decline in the cotton market today was followed by rallies on apprehensions that the tropical storm approaching Florida would cause rains in the south Atlantic States over Sunday, but the market broke again in late trading. December sold off from 16.42 to 16.25, new low ground for the movement and closed at that figure, the general market closing barely steady at a net decline of 9 to 17 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 2 points. Buying developed on the storm news, and relatively steady Liverpool cables, but Southern hedging was renewed while there was further commission house liquidating.

Prices soon showed net losses of some 10 to 15 points, but then rallied on reports that the storm approaching the coast of Florida was gaining in intensity and that it was likely to cause rains in east Gulf and south Atlantic States.

For a time the market showed considerable firmness, selling up to about yesterday's closing quotations, but at 16.24 for October and 16.52 for January, the advance was checked by renewed liquidation combined with Southern and local selling. On the whole, it seemed as if the storm threat was more than offset by the trend toward increased estimates of the crop, and there were rumors of some large private crop figures in the late trading.

One of these estimates was between 15,300,000 and 15,400,000 bales, while another was above 16,000,000, and while these rumors were not confirmed, they appeared to have a sentimental effect on the market. October sold off to 16.05 and January to 16.34 in late trading and the close was at the lowest figures of the day.

Private cables attributed the relatively steady showing of Liverpool to spinners calling with continental and Bombay buying and said hedge selling was lighter.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 79,000 bales, against 57,000 last year.

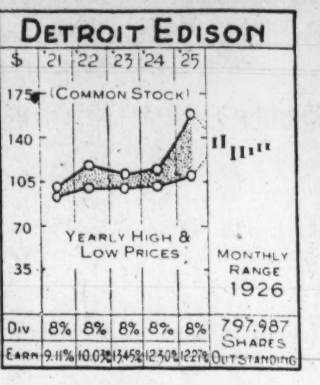
What's Behind Your Stock



Detroit Edison Company

The Detroit Edison Co. controls the entire commercial electric light and power business in Detroit and a number of neighboring towns. In all, it is estimated that a population of 1,800,000 people is served. This company's business has expanded considerably during the last nine years, the output of electricity growing from 680,000 kilowatt hours to 1,732,421 kilowatt hours, and the number of electric meters from 200,874 to 455,092. Of gross earnings, 83 per cent comes from the sale of electricity to private consumers and 10 per cent from commercial and other consumers.

During the ten years which ended in 1925 net income averaged $3,568,270 annually, this being equal to an average of 10.53 per cent on the capital stock. In 1925, earnings were equal to 12.27 per cent on the capital stock as compared with 12.30 per cent in 1924.

STEADIER TONE SHOWN IN MARKET FOR BONDS

French Issues Resume Advance; Many Prices Drift Aimlessly.

CARRIER GROUP IS FIRM

New York, Sept. 18 (By the Associated Press).—Bond prices drifted aimlessly in today's quiet trading, with the market developing a somewhat steadier tone after yesterday's relapse. Confidence was partly restored by the vigorous rally in stocks and the refusal of financial circles to take alarm over the maintenance of relatively stiff money rates.

French obligations resumed their advance as the recent spell of profit taking ran its course. Fractional gains were recorded by nearly all the government, railroad, municipal, and steamship issues on a moderate volume of buying. Belgian, Italian and German bonds, however, lost ground.

Trading in domestic liens was singularly lifeless, the observance of the religious holiday intensifying the usual Saturday dullness. Gains of 1 to 2 points were registered by Granby Mining 7s, Empire Gas & Fuel 7½s, American Writing Paper 6s and Continental Paper & Bag 6½s, but Skelly oil 6½s slumped nearly 3 points to 135.

Rail issues were firm, but they failed to keep pace with the vigorous upturn in the stocks of the carriers. Missouri Pacific first 6s and Oregon Short Line 5s were in demand.

Bank Clearings Less Than a Year Ago

Bank clearings at leading cities of the United States for the week ended September 16 aggregated $9,483,623,000, a gain of 32.9 per cent over last week, a holiday week, but a loss of 4.4 per cent from the like week of last year, according to Bradstreet's Journal. Outside of New York the total was $4,250,623,000, an increase of 35.9 per cent over last week, but a decrease of 3.8 per cent from this week a year ago. New York showed a drop of 4.9 per cent from last year. Twenty-eight cities reported decreases from last year, while 20 disclosed gains. Chicago reported a loss of 7.3 per cent; Philadelphia, 4.2 per cent; Detroit, 1 per cent; St. Louis, 6.3 per cent; Cleveland, 1.4 per cent; Baltimore, 18 per cent; Minneapolis, 14 per cent; Cincinnati, 2.6 per cent; Atlanta, 37.5 per cent and New Orleans, 14 per cent. Boston displayed a gain of 4 per cent; San Francisco, 1.7 per cent; Pittsburgh, 5.6 per cent; Los Angeles, 11.2 per cent and Kansas City, 3.2 per cent.

Ellsworth to Direct Acacia Conference

N. E. Ellsworth, superintendent of agents of the Acacia Mutual Life Association of this city, will direct a regional conference of branch managers and agents of the Middle Atlantic States, to be held at Philadelphia tomorrow.

Recent additions to the official staff of the Acacia Mutual Life Association, as announced at headquarters yesterday, include Dr. D. M. Shewbrooks, associate medical director, and C. L. Kirk, advertising manager. Dr. Shewbrooks was formerly with the Lincoln Life Insurance Co. Mr. Kirk is a Fort Wayne, Ind., man.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—All grain averaged lower in price today. Heavy selling of wheat, induced by more favorable weather conditions in the Canadian Northwest and a forecast of generally fair over the three provinces, revealed a lack of buying power in the pits, and values broke sharply. Corn and oats followed in the wake of wheat. At the finish wheat showed a net loss of ⅝ to 1⅛ cents; corn was down 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents; oats were off ¼@⅝ to ½ cents, and provisions 10 to 35 cents lower.

Although sentiment was bearish, traders failed to press the selling side on the declines. There was short covering and scattered buying at times, however, which acted as a check on the market. Little export demand was in evidence at the seaboard, but one report said charters had been let for about 2,000,000 bushels of wheat of which 400,000 bushels were at the gulf. The trade looks for a liberal reduction in the domestic visible supply of Monday, the figures probably reaching 2,000,000 bushels.

There was little general demand for corn, aside from week-end profit taking by shorts. Much long corn was unloaded on the decline. Warmer weather of the past few days has ripened corn rapidly in many sections.

Oats averaged somewhat lower with other grains, but failed to reflect the full decline scored in corn.

Provisions were lower in line with hog values and the weakness in grains.

WASHINGTON KIOSK REVEALS WEATHER FELT BY RESIDENTS

DIGRESSION BLAMED IN PART ON DEAD AIR

Some Cities Have Banished Them as Giving Places Bad Reputation.

If the weather kiosk at Pennsylvania avenue and E street northwest had been telling temperatures in some other city this summer, its days might be numbered now.

St. Louis, Mo., once had a weather kiosk. An irate group of business men had it torn down and banished forever. They were afraid that it would give the city a "bad name" from a weather standpoint. The same thing has been done in several other cities by booster organizations.

The crime which cost those kiosks their lives was recording a temperature higher than the so-called official temperature. But none of them was more guilty in that respect than the kiosk in this city.

Flouts the Forecaster.

During the several "heat waves" here this summer, the temperature registered in the kiosk has invariably been several degrees higher than the official temperature. There are instances on record, according to J. H. Jones, of the instrument division of the United States weather bureau, where the kiosk temperature has been as much as 10 degrees greater than the official temperature.

The reason for this variance is obvious. The thermometer which gives the official temperature for Washington is located on the roof of the weather bureau building, whereas the kiosk thermometer is located right on the street.

The official thermometer on the roof of the weather bureau is inclosed in a little shed-like structure and is sheltered from the rays of the sun. The temperature which it registers is the temperature in the air, free from all outside influences. Virtually all "official" thermometers are so elevated and sheltered.

Kiosk Made of Iron.

The Pennsylvania avenue kiosk is located at a spot that usually feels the full force of the heat's rays. The heat is reflected from the burning asphalt and has a strong influence on the thermometer within the kiosk. But that is not the only factor tending to boost the mercury. The kiosk is made of iron, a metal notorious for absorbing and retaining heat. Furthermore, a large amount of dead air gets inside the kiosk and helps to damage Washington's weather reputation.

So it is that the kiosk thermometer will show a temperature of 100, say, when the official temperature is announced as 95. But at that, the kiosk temperature probably comes nearer to the temperature experienced by the average Washingtonian than does the other. Mr. Jones, of the instrument division, admits this.

If the official thermometer were taken from its sheltered nook on the roof of the weather bureau and placed in the hands of a pedestrian in downtown Washington on a hot day, it might have a different story to tell.

However, it is almost certain, according to Mr. Jones, that the dead air that gathers in the kiosk, together with the heat rays from the iron, cause the thermometer there to soar a degree or two more than is called for.

The kiosk, which gets its name from Russia, was set up here in 1908. How many perspiring brows or frost-bitten noses have been pressed against its window, nobody has ever tried to estimate. It will continue to meet and raise the weather bureau's temperature unless the Chamber of Commerce or the Board of Trade complain. So far, these organizations have not taken it that seriously.

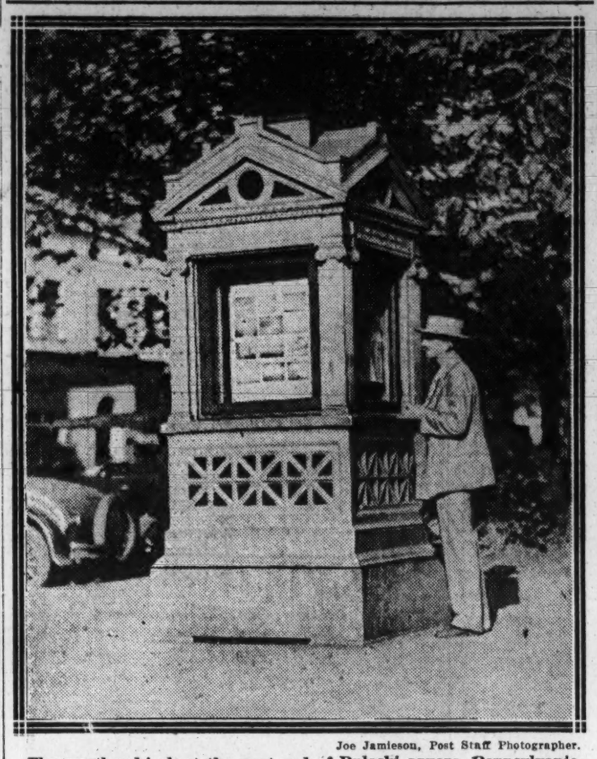
KIOSK REVEALS CITY'S WEATHER



Joe Jamieson, Post Staff Photographer.

The weather kiosk at the west end of Pulaski square, Pennsylvania avenue and E street. Records of the past few months show that its thermometer has little in common with the official thermometer at the weather bureau. Many cities have abolished kiosks similar to this one for that very reason.

LONDON SEEKS DEFENSE AGAINST WAR AIR RAIDS

URGE GAS PROOFROOMS

London, Sept. 18.—The defense of the city of London against raids from the air was discussed recently in the British parliament. The members of parliament devoted their time to studying measures necessary to protect the civilian population against death from bombs and especially from poison gas.

C. G. Ammon, the socialist member of parliament from Chamberwell, has a bill framed to provide every man, woman and child in London with a gas mask. He wants to train the entire citizenry to the use of masks, so that they will not be at the mercy of poison gas if war should break out against England without warning and London were besieged from the sky.

It also is in the scheme to require the householders of London to build "gas rooms" in their houses, the same as folks in the American cyclone States have special cellars where they may stay with safety during the great windstorms.

Every house will, if the bill goes through, be outfitted with sizable rooms, treated chemically at fixed intervals, so as to remain proof against the fumes from the poison gas shells.

The bill also would equip large public shelters which would not be used except in war time and would be bombproof, gasproof buildings, where hundreds of poor people could fine refuge from the attacks.

Blue Flying Costume Worn by Mrs. Lynn

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The young English flier, Mrs. Elliott Lynn, who made such a good showing at the "economic light plane" international meeting that has just closed at Orly, outside Paris, astonished the public by flying each day in a tailor-made costume, navy blue, with cloche-shaped beige felt hat and the fashionable flesh-colored silk stockings, instead of the usual aviation combinations, leather helmet and heavy goggles.

She was the only woman competitor and was first in three of the seven trials, but lost points during the speed trial by the cracking of a cylinder.

Mustapha Kemal Flouted When He Orders Harem Veil Discarded in Turkey.

SHORT-SKIRT WEARERS BRAVE JAIL IN GREECE

London, Sept. 13 (By A. P.). Dictators and kings the world over are trying to reform woman's dress by various methods. But skirts continue to shrink, sleeves get no longer and the edicts of man have not covered up the bare necks which various high-placed officials pretend to find objectionable.

Mustapha Kemal's press agents would have one believe Turkish women have cast aside the veil at his suggestion and altered their costumes to harmonize with the women of the West.

Kemal's Order Flouted.

Yet travelers who have been away from the great cities in Turkey say the Mohammedan women are clinging to their veils. Turkish men had to lay aside their fezzes, and some Turks were executed for clinging to them.

Pangalos tried to lengthen women's skirts by law in Greece, but had to abandon the attempt. Greek women went to jail rather than comply with the orders of the Athenian dictator.

King George let it be known in Cowes that he thought very short skirts were unattractive, and many of the women who associate with royalty donned longer gowns. But he was too wise to attempt any general reform in woman's dress. Both he and Queen Mary have done much to prevent extreme fashions from prevailing among women who are received at court.

Mussolini's Experiment Fails.

Mussolini's effort to standardize the dress of Italian women and lessen the cost of dress by having a uniform for women is creating much amusement among British officials who had to do with the effort made in England during the great war to provide a standard costume for women at a remarkably cheap price.

Even the humblest women showed themselves to be individualists and despised the cheap and unattractive costumes.

King Albert of Belgium may get the women of Belgium to help exchange by using only war bread. President Hindenburg may persuade German women to use only home-grown rye for bread, thus reducing the importation of wheat flour, and Mussolini may get Italy to eat more potatoes and less macaroni in the interest of national finances, but Englishmen who had a hand in trying to standardize female attire and reduce its cost to a minimum smile at the efforts of the Italian dictator to put Italy's artistic, color-loving women into drab uniforms.

FIGURED IN GREAT FIRE

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Eighteen-story apartments are now being erected where the great Chicago fire reached its limit in what was then almost open country along the lake. By chance, the building of the latest new skyscraper has served to bring to light one of the most curious incidents connected with the history of Chicago and yet reaching back centuries ago across the Atlantic.

Right in the middle of what is now Roslyn place, a charming bit of street at the edge of Lincoln park, within a few hundred feet of some of Chicago's tallest apartments, is the precise point at which the great fire burnt itself out. And it is just here that the story begins, for the present street center of Roslyn place was at the time of the fire the lot line between the suburban homes of two Chicagoans who had ancestral associations with the neighborhood of Roslyn castle in Scotland. One of these Chicago Scots was William C. Gawdy, general counsel of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, and the other was David Goodwillie, a leading manufacturer, of this city.

Neither of these hardheaded, practical Chicagoans was much given to poetry, but the fact remains that when years after the big fire the two men came to agree on the name of the new street which was to take the place of their lot line they selected the name of the castle referred to in Sir Walter Scott's famous "Ballad of Lovely Rosabell." The ballad narrates the "wondrous blaze" that "glared on Roslyn's castled rock" and especially on the "chapel proud" that contained "20 of Roslyn's barons bold"—the "lordly line of high Saint Clair."

This celebrated medieval chapel is the one in which is the beautiful "apprentice pillar," differing from all the other chapel pillars, and richly carved in secret by an apprentice. Who the apprentice was that carved the pillar is to this day unknown, but the fame of Roslyn castle is remembered here thousands of miles from Scotland, and irrevocably has become linked with one of the biggest of all events in the history of Chicago.

Baseball Is Leading In Philippine Sports

Honolulu, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Baseball easily ranks as the most popular game in Hawaii, which is as cosmopolitan in sports as in population. A survey just made estimated that 5,500 men and boys on organized teams took part in the national game in the Territory this year.

The story is going around of a teacher who asked where New York was, and whose class of young American citizens of Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, Filipino, and Korean ancestry thereupon informed her New York was in both the "big leagues."

STINNES' DAUGHTER WINS AUTO CONTEST

Girl Drives Car 500 Miles, Defeating 50 Others, in Germany.

Berlin, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Clairenore Stinnes, 29-year-old daughter of the late Hugo Stinnes, is turning her energies to sports now that she has been deprived of a business career by the collapse of the far-flung Stinnes fortune.

Driving her own sport racer, Fraulein Stinnes recently won the South-German reliability automobile tour of 500 miles against 50 men and women competitors. She is the foremost woman automobile driver in Germany.

The story is told of how her father entrusted her at an early age with a share of the management of his industries. Sent to South America to reorganize a branch office, she amazed her father by firing a half-dozen executives. She directed the South American branch until new executives arrived from home. Like her three brothers and a younger sister, her middle name is Hugo.

AFRICAN TRIBE HELD IN SERFDOM, TRIAL OF PRINCES REVEALS

Brothers, Held for Attempted Murder, Tell of Natives Born in Slavery.

BOTH NABBED AFTER BATTLE WITH CHIEFS

Palapye Road, Beuchuanaland, Sept. 18.—A life of serfdom is still led by a whole tribe of African natives in the British protectorate of Bechuanaland. Bechuanaland was visited by the Prince of Wales when he made his tour of the union.

At that time Sekgoma was chief of the Bechuanaland natives, called the Bamangwato. He was the successor of Khama, the greatest of all the native chiefs South Africa has seen. But since Khama's days the rule of the Bamangwato has steadily degenerated. Factions have arisen and been steadily growing in strength.

Trouble came to a head when Sekgoma was succeeded by Tshekedi, who is acting as chief during the infancy of Sekgoma's son. Tshekedi, who is only 21 years old, was educated at the native college at Lovedale and was summoned there last December to succeed Sekgoma. Almost at once friction arose between Tshekedi and Simon and Obeditse Ratshosa, grandsons of Chief Khama and princes of the royal blood.

The trouble came to a head last April. On April 4, a message was sent to the Ratshosa brothers telling them to attend a khotla (native council) on Easter Monday. They sent back an insolent message, saying that they were attending a wedding. In the afternoon, the khotla sat again and the brothers were again told to appear. This time they did attend.

The chief said he would treat them as others who disobeyed him and ordered them to be thrashed. The Ratshosas said that they were princes of the royal blood and could not be flogged.

A fight ensued. Simon and Obeditse got away and later returned armed and, it is alleged, deliberately fired at the khotla. Four shots were fired; three by Obeditse and one by Simon. All went wide. Then Obeditse went further forward and fired again. The chief, Kgosidintski, and Copole were wounded. After this the members of the tribe retaliated. The accused fled and sought shelter, one at the magistrate's and one at a storekeeper's.

The Ratshosas were subsequently arrested by the British authorities and their trial on a charge of attempted murder was begun here recently.

One of the grievances which led to the dispute was, according to the allegations of the Ratshosa brothers, that wto "Masawara servant girls" had been taken from them by order of Tshekedi; and it is in connection with these "Masawaras" that the trial has provided what is an extraordinary revelation.

Cross-examined by counsel for the Ratshosas, Chief Tshekedi stated that the Masawaras were a subject tribe. They were distributed among the headmen and looked after their cattle. All the Masawara in Serowe were servants of the Bamangwato; a Masawara child became a servant for life of the Bamangwato on whose property it was born. This went on from generation to generation. The majority of them were not paid for their services but lived on goat's milk and were sometimes allowed to eat a goat's carcass. He denied, however, that they were slaves; they were servants, though they were not free.

CHINA'S BOY EMPEROR NOW LIVING ON CHARITY

Dethroned Ruler Supported by Loyal Subjects, Former Tutor Reports.

HOLDS FORTUNE STOLEN

Tokyo, Sept. 18.—The boy emperor of China is broke and dependent upon gifts from former subjects who are still loyal for his daily living. So reports Dr. Johnson, for many years tutor to the former occupant of the dragon throne and his companions in exile in Tientsin, who has just reached Japan. He describes the situation of the boy emperor, his bride and his retinue as pitiful.

When the emperor was dethroned in the revolution he was promised a large annuity from the Chinese republican government, which was never paid in full and not at all during recent years. He had, however, his palace at Peking and his personal treasures, until the "christian general," after his coup d'etat at Pekin forced the emperor to flee for his life to the legation quarter, and then seized his palace and all his treasures. The excuse was that these belonged to the republic and needed inventorying.

Disguised as a student, the boy emperor escaped from Peking to Tientsin, where he is living almost in poverty. He desires to travel abroad, to see the world, later to return to China, but he has not the funds to permit this.

An old friend comes anew!

FIFTY-ODD YEARS have seen the Loffler name emblazoned on the horizon—representative of better meat products always. But time has wrought countless changes—the automobile of today outstrips its horseless ancestor—the glow of a Mazda bulb easily dims the glory of the old carbon electric light—and meat products offer no exception on the path to progress.

Today—new thoughts, new machinery and new sanitation methods combine to modernize the meat product, too. Meats are essentially the same, to be sure, but ways and means of preparing them are vastly different in this day.

Loffler's, after a most exhaustive research in meat product formulas, plus the installation of the latest design equipment—offers the public meat products that are better than ever.

HOME AGAIN.

Washington cordially welcomes President and Mrs. Coolidge to their home at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. The White House has been made fresh and clean, the grounds are still fragrant with summer and the air at this season is delightful. The President will find every facility provided for the comfortable exercise of his tasks; and among the pleasures of home he will find quiet and repose.

Mr. Coolidge may not have found every detail to his liking in his retreat at White Pine camp, but with his usual equanimity he adapted himself to his surroundings. Very sensibly, he seized upon the opportunity to go afishing. His first strategic moves in dealing with the wary pike having been successful, he enlarged his field of operations and firmly established his reputation as an angler of superior skill. At the same time he refreshed mind and body with nature's lore and nature's balm. The grooves worn by long application to official duties disappeared as his brain grappled with the novel problems that constantly confront a fisherman. He took delight in hunger that was appeased by food captured by himself and prepared for him by his helpmate.

Now the President comes home to resume his burden. The country rejoices in his safe return and in his freshened strength. All men feel reassured when they know that Mr. Coolidge is again "on the job." Millions and millions, scattered over the vast continent, are affected directly or indirectly by the brain and hand that guide the ship of state. They have learned to place full confidence in the steadfastness of the President. They are now taking comfort in the thought that his strength is more than equal to the demands of duty.

A RECORD FOR RETICENCE.

Secretary Mellon has returned to Washington after having made a remarkable record. He visited France, Italy, Switzerland and England, and was beset by hundreds if not thousands of reporters, and yet he ran the gantlet without giving his inquisitors a single sentence upon which to peg an interview. It is true that a British newspaper reported that he had made a remark to the effect that he had seen nothing but signs of prosperity in Europe; but even this remark was not verified, and it remains to be proved that Mr. Mellon said a word for publication while abroad.

Mr. Mellon was somewhat more communicative to New York ship reporters. He went to the length of saying that he had not discussed official matters with anybody while abroad. This sets at rest all speculation on that score, and forestalls any belated sensational "interviews" that may be sprung from the other side.

Considering the misunderstanding and uneasiness that might have resulted from any statements by the American minister of finance while abroad, however carefully they might have been prepared, it is fortunate that Mr. Mellon adopted the rule of absolute silence—a rule that he would have preferred to follow in any event. He has had a pleasant vacation, and has seen and learned much, while communicating nothing. His success proves that other men could avoid committing themselves in public print, if they really wished to do so. But vanity is almost always an accompaniment of the possession of important information or influence, and men who pretend that they are averse to newspaper attention are often pleased when they see their names and opinions in print. Mr. Mellon has made a record for reticence that is brilliant enough to arouse the admiration of even President Coolidge.

TWO MEN MEET.

A Frenchman and a German enjoyed a cozy luncheon together on Friday, at an inn on the slope of the Jura mountains, from which they had a glorious view of Mont Blanc. They leisurely consumed mountain trout, chicken browned to a turn, fresh peas, fruit, and a cobwebby bottle of Swiss wine. In the four hours during which they fraternized they discussed the adjustments of French and German political and economic relations, and reached many points of agreement. The Frenchman, M. Briand, has gained first rank among his countrymen and among statesmen by the exercise of wonderful powers of improvisation in dealing with seemingly insoluble problems of statecraft. The German, Herr Stresemann, is coming to the front as a statesman possessing similar gifts. One man is French to the core. The other is nothing but German.

Face to face, armed with authority and responsible to their countries and to the world for any agreements they might make, the Frenchman and the German found it perfectly easy to open their minds to each other. They discussed questions bristling with contentious points, which afforded abundant opportunity for recrimination. Each could have demonstrated to his own satisfaction that his country had been wronged and was entitled to more than generous concessions. With interests which could be proved to be diametrically opposed and incapable of being harmonized, and with all hereditary influences conspiring to prevent any closing of the breach between them, Briand and Stresemann succeeded in reaching agreements which, if approved by their governments, will rapidly improve conditions in both of their countries and powerfully conduce to permanent peace.

They talked of the presence of French troops in Germany—a ticklish question, if ever there was one. They reached an agreement, which, whatever its details may be, is astonishing by reason of the fact that it is an agreement. They went over the economic situation, the need of collaboration between French and German resources and energies; and they reached agreements of far-reaching importance. France and Germany, habitual and implacable enemies, found a way to join in teamwork for their mutual good.

The way was simple. It was merely the friendly and frank meeting of two men who incarnated the new spirit of France and Germany.

Briand and Stresemann are deserving of the highest praise for their practical agreements, but they could not have reached them unless the ground had been prepared. Their highest accomplishment has been in cultivating a new spirit in their countrymen, and in their courage for breaking into the No Man's Land of peace and clasping friendly hands. Briand and Stresemann may encounter difficulties in obtaining approval of all their tentative agreements, but they will discover ingenious ways to surmount their difficulties. Germany and France will not turn backward. Germans and Frenchmen will see the light that Briand and Stresemann have seen.

The world can not fail to note that the Franco-German rapprochement is the outcome of direct dealings. No vast and complicated machinery was necessary to bring about an accord. When Stresemann and Briand stole away from Geneva and the swarm of big and little politicians who make up the babel of the league of nations, they may have remarked, as they smilingly divided a plump chicken and a cheerful bottle, that "Too many cooks spoil the broth."

FOREIGN MONOPOLY SCHEMES.

The success of British rubber interests in obtaining legislation which restricts shipments and boosts prices at the expense of American consumers has inspired the British managing director of a Chilean nitrate concern to propose the same plan for his industry.

At a recent meeting of the British and South Pacific Trading Company, in London, the year's business was reviewed by T. Tertius Aikman, managing director, and his remarks were published in the London Times. He spoke of the deadly competition of synthetic nitrogen companies, particularly the gigantic Interessen-Gemeinschaft Farben-Industrie, whose shares on the market represent a capital of $750,000,000. This concern has absorbed the Stickstoff syndicate, which produced last year 865,000 tons of synthetic nitrogen, as against a world's consumption in terms of nitrogen, of 325,000 tons of Chilean nitrate.

Mr. Aikman's proposed solution of the problem facing the Chilean nitrate industry is to form a combine with the Germans for the control of the world's supply of nitrogen, and then to restrict output and boost prices "on lines more or less analogous to the Stevenson rubber scheme." His words were:

> I believe that there is only one satisfactory solution to the present nitrogen situation, and that is an agreement between the German synthetic nitrogen combine and the Chilean nitrate industry, by which the sales of nitrogen by each party would be regulated by the world's demands and which also covered an extensive scheme of joint propaganda. Restriction of shipments on lines more or less analogous to the Stevenson rubber scheme would, I think, form the basis for an understanding between the Chilean producers and the German synthetic nitrogen combine. I believe that if such an agreement could be reached on the lines suggested by me, the consumption of nitrogen could be greatly increased and a fair margin of profit obtained by all producers.
> If, on the other hand, the present situation is allowed to drift on, with no endeavor on either side for an understanding, I foresee a price war which will eventually cripple both industries.

The question that interests Americans is whether there is to be an extension of the policy of governmental aid to commercial monopolies in foreign countries. Americans as producers are finding themselves in competition with governments as well as foreign corporations, and as consumers they are the victims of price extortions sanctioned and legalized by foreign governments. It behooves Americans to produce everything they consume, if possible; and when they must import foreign monopolized articles they should seek means of discouraging the foreign producers from exacting extortionate prices. There are ways of accomplishing this result.

THE PATENT OFFICE.

While the public buildings commission is considering sites for departmental buildings it might well take heed of the suggestion that the old patent office site should be sold and the proceeds devoted to the acquisition of property along Pennsylvania avenue.

The patent office building is regarded by some individuals as worthy of preservation on account of its architectural features; but the structure has outlived its usefulness and is an obstruction to progress. The ground upon which it stands encroaches upon F and G streets, two of the most crowded thoroughfares of Washington, and traffic is badly congested on Ninth, F and G streets in consequence. The building was outgrown long ago by the business of the patent office. The corridors, basements, attic and all other nooks and corners are choked with papers; the air in the overcrowded and low-ceilinged rooms is musty and moldy; the health of the office forces is impaired by long confinement in a building that is not suitably planned for this climate.

The ground is very valuable. It should be sold and the streets should be widened. The money derived from the sale would acquire more ground elsewhere upon which a patent office adequate to present and future requirements could be constructed.

WHAT THE HENS ARE DOING.

It is estimated that American hens produce approximately 2,000,000,000 dozens of eggs every year. The value is estimated at approximately $900,000,000. More than 500,000,000 chickens are raised every year, valued at approximately $500,000,000. Some industry!

In the first six months of 1926 about 16,500,000 dozens of eggs were exported, or at the rate of about 33,000,000 dozens a year. Thus the American people consumed approximately 1,967,000,000 dozen eggs in twelve months, and had some to spare.

Cuba takes most of the American eggs, or about 45 per cent; Mexico, Argentina, Canada and Panama coming next in order. Exports of dressed chickens and fowl during the first six months of 1926 were valued at $1,890,000. The American people consumed practically 99 per cent of the domestic production.

At the same time the United States imported egg products from Hongkong and China, valued at more than $8,824,000. No fresh eggs enter the United States in any considerable volume, except from Canada along the northern border. The frozen and preserved eggs from the Orient compete with American producers of eggs in the confectionery and bakery trade.

Welcome Home!

THE BRITISH COAL CRISIS.

Premier Baldwin has outlined a new plan for the settlement of the British coal strike. He proposes that parliament shall set up a national arbitration tribunal, provided that the miners shall first return to work; that either side may refer to the tribunal any provisional settlement for working more than seven hours a day, if the question involved was considered on a national basis prior to July, 1925; that the national tribunal may confirm or modify any such settlement, and that the miners shall be entitled by law to receive excess wages granted by the tribunal.

The prime minister's proposal is to be considered by the executives of the miners' federation tomorrow. They are now consulting the miners.

The first criticism of Mr. Baldwin's proposal has been leveled against the stipulation that the miners shall return to work before any further move is made. As the men have made a stand against district settlements, insisting upon a national settlement, it is contended that Mr. Baldwin's plan is a victory for the operators, inasmuch as the men in returning to work would be under the old conditions against which they struck. But against this contention it is pointed out that the national arbitration tribunal would have power to grant excess wages if the old arrangements should be set aside.

Mr. Baldwin has accompanied his proposal by a hint that "legislation will be introduced if the miners still are unwilling to face economic facts." What this legislation would be, and what the economic facts are that compel the prime minister to make this veiled threat, are not disclosed, but they may be imagined. The coal strike has cost Great Britain over $2,100,000,000 to date, and the country's industrial ruin is threatened. Shipbuilding, steel manufacture, cotton spinning, the woolen industry, railroad earnings and foreign commerce have all suffered disastrously from the stoppage of coal mining. Unemployment, not counting the idle coal miners themselves, has increased on account of the inability of the industries to obtain fuel. England has been compelled to purchase foreign fuel and supplies on a vast scale to make up for domestic deficiencies, and this outgo of wealth has had a further paralyzing effect upon enterprises of all kinds, including building, transportation and production. The entire fabric that knits together the workers of England has been torn to shreds by the collapse of the basic industry which kept the home fires burning.

Thus the government is forced to intervene for the preservation of the country. If the miners should refuse to return to work after having been assured that their grievances will be considered and adjusted by a national arbitration tribunal, it would appear that the government would then be forced to enact legislation that would reopen the mines. It is easier to recognize such a necessity than to devise a workable plan. Will the mines be taken over by the government? Apparently that course would be unavoidable. The substitution of the government for the operators might induce the miners to return to work; but the operators are strongly entrenched in the government itself, and they would not relinquish their property without a battle royal in which they would be supported by tradition and all the elements that abhor socialism and fear its expansion into other fields.

PENSIONS AND PENSIONERS.

On August 31 there were 501,298 pensioners on the government rolls, a reduction of 452 in 30 days. In one month 1,260 civil war veterans died.

Of the number on the rolls on August 1, 13,197 were in the regular establishment, 105,424 on the civil war list, and 124,478 on the Spanish war list. More than 225,500 widows of veterans are receiving pensions from Uncle Sam; likewise many nurses. Nine veterans of the Mexican war and nineteen widows of veterans of the war of 1812, are receiving pensions.

The government paid these pensioners $18,584,585 in the month of August. This does not include the millions paid the veterans of the world war in the form of adjusted compensation and insurance to dependents.

A CONGRESSMAN'S DREAM.

Representative Hull, of Tennessee, says he favors a "permanent international trade corporation to study all methods, practices and policies in international trade, finance and commerce which in their effects are discriminatory, unjust, injurious or unfair to other nations, or which may be reasonably calculated to create dangerous and destructive commercial controversies, bitter trade rivalry or serious economic wars; and would at the same time establish fair, equal and friendly trade and commercial relations among the nations of the world."

This sounds glorious. It has all the splendor of a dream. It disposes of nearly all the causes of war. It insures the prosperity of all nations. It makes the Golden Rule the fixed policy of all nations in their daily trade. No nation can overreach another; neither shall there be monopolies any more.

Mr. Hull has had a splendid dream, and doubtless he still revels in it. The world may never be the same to him hereafter by reason of his dream.

> I have had a dream, past the wit of man to say what dream it was: man is but an ass if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was—and methought I had—but man is but a patched fool if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive nor his heart to report what my dream was.

But other men have had the dream, before. It is found embodied in the covenant of the league of nations, like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear. It is a project which, if it could be brought from cloudland to earth, would bring to a level all nations of the earth and equalize the standards of living between coolies and Americans. Every Lascar would have a bathroom or every American would sleep in a serape and eat off the ground, according to the trend of the leveling process.

The control of nations and the equal distribution of wealth by means of an international authority is such stuff as dreams are made of. It belongs among apparitions—"hydras and gorgons and chimeras dire." It has its birth in indigestion, and it meets its death when reality touches it.

How pleasant the world would remain if people could keep on feeling as they do just after a war.

Caste means little. Numerous obscure and lowly men are fathers of youths who will be football stars.

Among the poor that are with us always are poor magazine stories.

About all you can say for a majority is that most of its members are conformists.

VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON INTERESTING TOPICS OF THE DAY

Correspondent Urges Speed in Adjudication of Increases of Annuities to Retired Government Employes and Analyzes Figures as to Need of 3½ Per Cent Assessment Against Salaries Earned by Active Workers in the Federal Departments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read Secretary Work's statement in an evening paper regarding the delay in paying the increase in annuities to retired civil service employes; also a number of letters complaining bitterly and somewhat unreasonably of the same delay. There should be some happy medium between the fault-finding criticism of the pension office clerks for not making all the adjudications in ten days (as one correspondent is confident could be done), and Secretary Work's calm assertion that there is no delay. According to his statement, which is doubtless correct, 1,300 cases have been adjudicated, although only about 1,100 checks for increases have been sent out. The same statement gives the total number of annuitants at about 13,000. If in two months and ten days one-tenth of the cases have been adjudicated (and there are the figures showing that ratio), it is an easy matter to calculate how long it will take to dispose of the last one—more than 23 months, to say nothing of the new cases arising almost every day.

Now, it is to be presumed that the pension office clerks have about all they can do under ordinary circumstances to keep up with their routine work and that the progress aleady made has been at the expense of extra effort, working overtime, &c. No one wishes them to do more than they have. But while the government is discharging employes for the sake of so-called economy it certainly seems that some of those so discharged might be retained long enough to do this work and so prevent old and retired men and women from waiting from 1 to 23 months (some of them for eternity), for the pittance that Congress granted them in the way of increases to meager annuities, especially in view of the fact that these annuities and the increases are to be paid from the pockets of the employes on the active roll—"for many years," Secretary Work says; for all time, I maintain.

Of course, we all know that the government actuaries furnished figures well calculated to scare the President and Congress into believing that the government would eventually be called on for vast sums to pay the annuities. We also know that they had little or nothing on which to base their calculations—knew nothing of the number of employes who would ask and receive extensions or the number who would die before reaching the age of expectancy after being thrown out of their groove of work and routine by retirement (it is becoming evident that this number will be large); in fact, with the rest of mankind, they knew very little of the subject, but furnished their so-called statistics just the same as if they did know.

Long before the government has acquired the data for a scientific calculation of the cost of retirement some of these gentlemen will have gone where statistics will be the least of their troubles or joys, as the case may be.

Let us examine their estimate in one particular. They tell us to meet the employes' half of the cost it will be necessary to assess their earnings 3½ per cent, and this rate is provided for in the present law. The average government employe's salary is about $2,000 (this is from an official report), so that an average assessment will be $70 a year. To this is to be added ultimately (according to the calculations made) an equal amount by the government (the actuarial experts wanted an appropriation made at once for this, but Secretary Work, who doubtless saw the fallacy of their figures, advised against it). These two sums would make $140 for each person, on an average.

Now, the average annuity under the new law will be not far from $700 (it was about $540 under the old law), so that the combined assessment and government contribution for five persons would provide one average annuity; in other words, ultimately, 1 would be on the retirement roll for each 5 on the active roll. Does any one believe this? At the present time, after six years, the ratio is about 1 to 32. I have seen a certificate issued in 1923 which is numbered 11,482, and we are told there are now about 13,000 on the roll, an increase of possibly 500 a year. You can figure for yourself how long it would be, even if this rate of increase should continue, which, of course, it will not, before there would be upward of 75,000, the number that would be required to meet a ratio of 1 to 5, even with no increase in the active roll, now about 390,000.

I make no claim for absolute accuracy, and all this is more or less conjectural. Anybody can believe the actuaries' guess if he wishes. I do not. But whatever may be thought of the above reductio ad absurdum argument, here are some concrete figures from the experience of a nation-wide labor organization bearing on the subject of cost of retirement:

The International Typographical union has for about 20 years paid pensions to superannuated members. It proceeded cautiously, first paying about $200 a year to members of 20 years' standing, over 60 years old, who could not secure or were unable to perform sustaining labor. This was increased to $300 and then to $416, at which figure it has stood for a number of years. Last year a group of actuaries scared the executive officers, predicting an enormous increase in numbers on the pension roll, just as our own group scared the administration and Congress; but beyond a little tightening of the lines as to getting on the roll and increasing by five years the age limit (to 65) nothing was done, and the pension situation is satisfactory.

You will naturally ask what is the cost of this. The history of the matter is interesting. Remember, the union pension is more than half as much as the average government annuity ($416-$700). An assessment of only 1 per cent was laid on earnings of working members, which was divided between the pensions and a mortuary benefit of $500. It was found after a while that the mortuary benefit fund would not need all of its ½ per cent and that the pension fund would require a little more, so a new division was ordered—¾ per cent for pensions and ¼ per cent for the other, where it has stood for some years, with surpluses now of $2,500,000 and $1,300,000 and both increasing monthly. In a recent month the deaths just equaled the accessions to the pension roll, so the "peak" seems to have been reached after 20 years, with the ratio of pensioners to workers about 1 to 30.

Of course the cases are not exactly parallel; but it would seem if a ¾ per cent of 1 per cent assessment carries a pension of $416, 1¼ per cent will carry an average annuity of $700; but double this (and surely that will be margin enough), and we would have the government annuity taken care of by an assessment of 2½ per cent on employes—and we are assessing them 3½ per cent for their half only of the cost.

What a farce, then, is the pretense of generosity on the part of the government in its retirement legislation. It could well afford to be really generous in a number of particulars, seeing that the employes are bearing the whole cost, present and prospective. Its attitude is like that of Artemas Ward, who in a furor of patriotism in 1861 "was willing to sacrifice all his wife's relations."

Checks for Increased Annuities Sent Out to More Than 1,600 Retired Federal Employes Since July 1—Delay Due, in Many Cases to Failure of Departments to Forward Information Required by Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Regarding payment of increase in annuities for retired Federal employes it is learned from official records that since July 1, 1926, more than 1,600 annuitants have received the increase voted by the act of July 3, 1926. Delay in payments to others has been caused by a clause in the new law which makes it imperative for the various departments to make a return as to excessive leaves of absence granted to employes during their period of service. Under this clause the retirement division of the pension bureau must await reports on the subject from each separate department in which service has been given. Two weeks after the passage of the law of July 3, 1926, letters from the retirement division were addressed to the appointment or personnel division of each department, requesting information as to excess or not of leave for each annuitant now on the rolls.

Responses have been made by some of those addressed, but others have not been so prompt, and consequently increases have been delayed until the desired information is given. It is essential to have this data in making allowances in keeping with the provisions of the latest legislation on retirements in the civil service, and as fast as possible checks for the accrued increases are being made out and sent to beneficiaries. These checks are not always ready to be sent with the check for the regular monthly payment, but are made out separately the first time for the increase from July 1, 1926. After that annuitants will receive the full amount due each month, the old rate and the increase being included. As already indicated, about one-twelfth of the beneficiaries are now in receipt of increased annuities up to the maximum, $1,000 per annum.

As an annuitant I have visited the pension bureau and learned personally that the retirement division of that office is doing all that is possible to expedite payment of the increase due former employes of Uncle Sam. Patience must be exercised in the meanwhile.

Figures on Popular and Electoral Vote and Pluralities in 1924, Presidential Fight Involving Coolidge, Davis and La Follette Analyzed to Show Necessity for Strenuous Efforts by the Republican Party to Retain Control of White House in Coming Election.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A partial analysis of the 1924 presidential election reveals: In the beginning a plurality is where one has received more votes than the next highest in a contest in which there are three or more candidates, although he did not receive a majority, that is, more than one-half of all of the votes polled. Coolidge carried 22 States by majorities and 13 by pluralities. Davis carried 11 States by majorities and 1 by a plurality. La Follette carried 1 State by a majority. Coolidge received 382; Davis, 136, and La Follette 13 electoral votes. Coolidge lost Oklahoma, Tennessee and Wisconsin, with 35 electoral votes, which were carried by Harding in 1920.

Had Coolidge lost the 13 States, with 86 electoral votes, which he carried by pluralities instead of majorities, and in which he ran 431,508 behind Harding in 1920, and lost the 5 States, with 30 electoral votes, in which he ran 532,731 behind Harding in 1920, he would have received only 266 electoral votes, or the exact number required to elect him to the Presidency.

The thirteen States referred to above were Arizona, Idaho, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Utah, west of the Mississippi, and Kentucky, Maryland, and West Virginia, east of the Mississippi. The five states referred to above were Delaware, Minnesota, Oregon, Washington, and Wyoming. Coolidge's and Harding's vote in the above referred to thirteen States is exclusive of Kentucky.

Coolidge's total plurality in the above-referred to thirteen States, except Kentucky, was 306,292. Harding's total vote in 1920 over Cox in the same States, except Kentucky, was 737,800. Coolidge's combined majority in the above referred to five States was 76,731. Harding's total vote in 1920 over Cox in the same States was 609,462. Harding's total vote in 1920 over Coolidge's vote in 1924 in the above referred to eighteen States was 964,239.

Had Davis carried the above referred to eighteen States, in addition to the twelve States that he did carry, he would have received 252 electoral votes, or 14 less than the required 266. Thus, assuming that Davis carried the above referred to eighteen States, with 116 electoral votes, the 252 electoral votes plus La Follette's 13 would have been 265 electoral votes, or 1 less than enough to have defeated Coolidge and thrown the election into the Congress.

Coolidge's total popular vote in the 48 States was 15,718,789. In 35 States it was only 4,165,151. In the remaining thirteen States it was 11,553,638. The thirteen States are: California, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Notwithstanding, Coolidge's large popular vote and his unprecedented plurality, his majority over Davis' and La Follette's combined vote was only 2,517,508. The above thirteen States have 264 electoral votes, or 2 less than the required 266.

Coolidge's total plurality in 48 States with 531 electoral votes was 7,339,827. In 35 States with 284 electoral votes it was only 1,087,343. In the remaining 13 States with 247 electoral votes it was 6,252,484. The States are: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The great surprise of the 1924 presidential election was La Follette's strength. He received 696,299 more votes than the 4,126,020 polled by Roosevelt in 1912, although Roosevelt carried 6 States with 88 electoral votes; La Follette only carried 1 State with 13 electoral votes. La Follette only carrying 1 State and receiving 75 less electoral votes than Roosevelt, was due to the distribution of La Follette's votes.

Thus, it will be seen that La Follette polled a tremendous vote in the revolting West, Ohio, mid-West and Connecticut and New York.

In view of the above partial analysis of the 1924 presidential election, the Republican party must take off its coat and fight like a beaver to win the 1926 and 1928 elections.

Nothing Alarming in Helm's Article on Growth of Big Corporations, Says G. McK. Williams, While Larger Number of Investors Draw Profits From Giant Concerns; Greater Success of Highly Capitalized Firms Termed Natural and Not Dangerous.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post recently appeared an article by William P. Helm, jr., which at first reading appears alarming. It is headlined: "Single Group Rules Prosperity, Taking Half of All Profit; 1,200 Concerns Expected to Spit Five Billion This Year; Similar Sum Remains for 398,000 Others; Government Report Shows Inner Circle Controls Huge Gains; Many Forced Out."

We find, however, that although 168 "highly successful concerns" made 28 per cent of the profit earned by all corporations in 1923, they also did about 28 per cent of the gross business, namely, $25,000,000,000 out of $97,000,000,000. In other words, they were no more or less profitable than the remaining corporations with the average volume of business and presumable capital invested considered.

We find also in the chief corporations there are 3,000,000 investors. They are owned by more persons than are the smaller corporations, despite the vast number of the latter. It also is evident policyholders in insurance companies who receive dividends on their policies, and whose insurance payments are investments, are not included, since they number several times 3,000,000.

Many economists believe concentration of industry has reached its peak; that there is a point beyond which concentration does not pay. Statistics show that in the steel industry, well managed independent companies are making larger dividends than the United States Steel Corporation.

If we could have the figures for 1920, as well as 1923, they probably would show a pronounced decline in the percentage of profits taken by the larger corporations, since the income tax statistics show a great decline in the number of persons receiving huge incomes during that three-year period and a large increase in the number receiving smaller incomes within the taxation limit.

There are many undertakings, such as insurance, motor manufacture and transportation, which only can be carried on by corporations with larger capitalization and volume of business.

If the mere number of corporations is significant, it may be remarked that in the city of Washington more than half the retail business is done by an insignificant number of establishments, yet it is doubtful if the average return on the investment has been greater in the larger than in the smaller corporations. It is true that two or more out of five business enterprises fail. We do not expect every man who goes into business will make a success of it. This is expected, though vainly, only in farming, which requires for success as much skill, effort and thrift as any other business.

It always will be true that corporations employing half the labor and half the capital, and doing half the business of the country, will make half the profits. If these corporations have more owners than the larger number of small corporations, there does not seem to be anything alarming in the situation.

Charge That No Catholic Fought in the American Revolutionary Army Is Refuted by a Woman Who Names Men Prominent in Service. Says Patriots Battled Regardless of Creed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A member of the Ku Klux Klan has said, among many other questionable things in his recent talk at the Washington auditorium, that "there had been no Catholics in the revolutionary army.

As a loyal Catholic and one apparently more familiar with American history than this unnamed speaker, I should like to mention the following facts, all of which are, of course, historically true and may be verified at the Library of Congress:

At the beginning of the American Revolution there were 25,000 Catholics in the American colonies. The head of Gen. George Washington's commissary was a Catholic Pole, Count Pulaski, and his successor was Stephan Moylan, also a Catholic. Gen. Washington's aid was a Catholic named John Fitzgerald. Shoulder to shoulder with their Protestant neighbors many Catholics fought for their liberty in the American Revolution and in the terrible winter of 1780, when famine, fever and mutiny threatened to disrupt the army of Washington, it was a Catholic, Commodore John Barry, who, after having swept the seas of the British fleet, marched through the streets of Philadelphia seeking recruits and soliciting subscriptions. The very first and largest donation he received was over half a million dollars from the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, and a Catholic, Thomas Fitzsimmons, of Philadelphia, gave him $25,000.

And shall we ever dare to forget the glorious Lafayette who braved his country's displeasure to offer his services, his money and the risk of his life for the struggling colonies in their desperate fight against the English crown? A major general in the Continental army, Lafayette became Washington's close friend and his name is forever linked with those of America's greatest patriots; Lafayette, a Catholic and an alien!

This proves that the Catholic contribution toward the establishment of our independence was so extraordinarily great that George Washington could do no more appropriate thing than write a famous and immortal letter to his Catholic fellow citizens to thank them for the aid which they had rendered to the cause of American independence.

And while I am about it I should like to refresh the mind of this masked speaker with two more significant items.

The first American soldier to fall in the great world war was a Catholic, Thomas Enright. Likewise, the first sailor to give his life for his country in the world war was a Catholic named Joseph Lavelle. Not only are Catholics first to spring to the defense of their country, but they are the last to leave the line of danger. The very last officer to lay down his life for his flag in the great war was a Catholic priest, Father Wil... F. Davitt, who, a few minutes before the armistice, was killed by a German shell.

The bravery, the courage, the glorious patriotism of the Catholic soldiers, sailors, marines, in fact Catholics in every arm of the service, is so well known by the people of America that it is quite unnecessary to go into further details.

Hatred of America, as Expressed in Europe, Declared Combination of Hoodooism and Blackmail—"When Did They Ever Love Us?" Writer Asks—Americans Shown Paying Interest on Europe's War Debt to U. S.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This propaganda of hatred which Europe is fostering toward America is a combination of hoodooism and blackmail. If persisted in, it will lead to the contempt for Europe by America. When did they ever love us? We have always liked France because she helped us during the Revolution. But she came to our assistance as a result of the surrender of Burgoyne's army, and then she did not break with a friend, but with a bitter enemy. We who lived at the time of the Spanish-American war came to have a very friendly feeling for England because she, alone in Europe, was our friend. Yet even then England and Germany had no more interests in common than they have today.

They tell us it would lower her standards of living for Europe to pay her debts, and so Italy pays us 12½ cents a year per person on her obligations. Where in France or Belgium or England are the people housed so meanly as they are housed along the Washington and Baltimore interurban electric road? And are the principal streets of Paris or Brussels or London as much in need of rebuilding as is lower Pennsylvania avenue? This country has subdued a wilderness and built great cities in the last 100 years. This was modern Europe's inheritance. What have they been doing—these Europeans of the last 50 years?

A certain Wall street financial journal, edited by an English army officer and published by an Anglophile, made the interesting statement, after the English debt settlement, that Premier Baldwin had set aside $250,000,000 for annual payments to the United States, and it seemed to gloat over the fact that he had made a very good bargain in the final terms. But the people of England seem to forget that the people of America are now every year paying $50,000,000 interest on their debt. And the English people are the best Europe has to offer.

Do the French people try to remember or deliberately forget that the people of America are paying $180,000,000 to $190,000,000 interest every year on moneys the French people received from America? The French people should recall the fact the war President of the United States pledged the French Minister, then in Washington, that we would not quit until Alsace and Lorraine were restored to France. The people of the United States understood then and they understand now that our war was primarily to save the French and the Belgians.

Fort McHenry Shrine Advocate Finds Little Improvement at Famous Old Army Station Despite Post Story Urging Parks to Commemorate Spot Where Key Wrote the "Star-Spangled Banner;" Finds Tourists Seek Guides to Learn History of Place.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Some time ago, at my suggestion, you investigated the condition of Fort McHenry, very kindly and patriotically sending a member of your staff and a photographer to Baltimore, and the result of their visit was a very interesting description of conditions at the place of inspiration of Francis Scott Key's "Star-Spangled Banner."

In the article (Sunday issue dated January 28, 1923), your reporter suggested that the fort be turned into a national park, which I was recently informed had been partially done, but on Sunday last I went down to Baltimore and found little improvement in the condition of the fort, except that the world war temporary buildings have disappeared. Shocking dilapidation exists. Thinking my visit without the authority of the War Department might be objected to, I took with me the following paper, and asked the single representative of the United States government at his residence, within and near the fort entrance, if it would admit me. This is a copy of the paper:

"Headquarters Department of Pennsylvania, Fort McHenry, Md., August 28, 1861:

"Pass and repass Private Rastall, employed as clerk at these headquarters until further notice.

"By command of Gen. Dix,
"D. T. VAN BUREN,
"Ast. Adjt. Gen'l."

"Admit you? Well, I should say it would!" said the retired regular soldier, smiling, after examining the date of the paper a second time. So I went into the fort grounds, a 45-acre tract, in Baltimore city, on the Patapsco river. This solitary custodian seems comfortably housed and well informed, telling me the national government was in absolute control, notwithstanding the fort had been turned over to Baltimore for park purposes.

To be brief, I found the old fort as much of a ruin as ever, entirely neglected and dilapidated. Everything wide open. The nude statue of Francis Scott Key is still there, and some big cannon balls fired by British warships are on pedestals. Some tourists rambling about asked about a guide. There was none. I helped from memory all I could; but I returned to Washington feeling that we are neglecting this old fort (where "The Star-Spangled Banner" was inspired). Can't something be done by somebody to restore the old fort?

Gift of $6,000,000 by Clergy of France to Colonies Here in Revolutionary Days Is Portrayed at the Sesqui. Answer to the Klan Seen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On September 14, the day a klan speaker, whose modesty would not permit his name to be used, was assailing Catholics for not taking part in the American Revolution, an elaborate pageant was performed in Philadelphia as part of the Sesquicentennial celebration. The pageant depicted an epochal incident thus described by Manager F. X. Wastl, president of the American Catholic Historical Society of Philadelphia:

"In 1778, Franklin, as plenipotentiary of the colonies at the court of France, received substantial aid from Louis XVI. Two years later, when this sum was exhausted and the colonial cause seemed in doubt, Franklin again appealed to the French allies for aid. At this time, in 1780, the French clergy were holding their quinquennial synod in the Augustinian monastery in Paris. Archbishops, bishops and priests from the twenty-one provinces of France were present. The king sent special commissioners to the meeting, and they laid Franklin's letter before the clergy. Favorable to the cause of the colonists, the clergy voted a free gift through the king, of $6,000,000. It was a gratuitous act "don gratuit" being the phrase used. The minutes of the meeting were inaccessible in this country until recently, when special investigators representing the Historical society went to France and secured photostatic copies of the originals which are now in Philadelphia.

Under the patronage of Cardinal Dougherty the scene and proceedings of the synod of 1780 were reproduced by a company that required a cast of 1,000 principals and extras in a series of picturesque tableaux.

Grave or gay, in street clothes or in evening dress, in the quiet of her home or at some important social function, Mrs. Coolidge is ever charming. Her return to the White House with the President is a welcome event in the National Capital.

THE official and social world of Washington welcomes home the President and Mrs. Coolidge, whose summer sojourn at White Pine Camp was ended last week.

When the flag is up on the White House flagstaff it also means that the social season in Washington has begun, for the National Capital without presidential occupants in the White House resembles Hamlet played without the melancholy Dane. The President and Mrs. Coolidge have proven themselves genial hosts in the historic mansion, which has witnessed the coming and going of so many administrations in the 100 years and more of its history.

Judging from their smiling countenances and general air of well being the President and Mrs. Coolidge have profited, physically at least, by their vacation days. They appear "fit" and the President returns to the Capital with a new gained reputation as a fisherman which puts the piscatory records of some of the Cabinet anglers to shame.

Contrary to general expectation, the home comers were not accompanied by young Mr. Coolidge. He has gone to Northampton, Mass., to be the house guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Andrew Goodhue, until Amherst college reopens and he enters the junior class of that institution. Mrs. Goodhue, who had been a guest at White Pine Camp for the last few weeks, made the trip from New York with her grandson. Northampton is a favorite city with all the Coolidges and Mr. John Coolidge will have an opportunity to meet many of his old school chums and playmates in the pretty little New England town.

THE next question of Washington society is "When will the White House official dates be given out?" This list of formal functions at the executive mansion for the season 1926-1927 is always eagerly awaited, for upon it is built the whole fabric of the social round of the winter.

These functions, of course, will include the usual state dinners and state receptions. For several years it has been the practice to hold the cabinet dinner before Christmas which gives a good start to the social program for the new year.

As soon as the official dates of the White House affairs are announced Washington hostesses begin their own programs for the season, taking extreme care always not to conflict with presidential entertainments in any way.

IT is interesting to observe how the formal affairs of the White House have come into existence. The first President and Mrs. Martha Washington introduced the presidential levee both in New York and Philadelphia and the early Presidents followed suit, except that love for democratic simplicity led to the doing away with formal dinner parties to a large extent and substitute almost daily informal repasts for ten or twelve official or personal friends in place of what many called "dreary" state banquets of former administrations.

Yet little by little the idea of state dinners for the cabinet, the diplomatic corps, the judiciary, the army and the navy and in late years the Speaker, grew in popular favor with Presidents and the chatelaines of their households. In the first place, the state dinners and receptions take care of all set formal entertainment, so far as the President and his wife are concerned, save when garden parties are part of the spring programs or when celebrities or special guests are given the tribute of White House dinners in their honor.

THAT this is to be a gay social season here is forecast by the early return of so many social leaders and, after many uncertainties, the positive appearance of Queen Marie and three of her interesting children here in October.

Now that the social leaders of the Capital and the other American cities which will be visited by the queen and her family know that she really is coming, invitations are swamping the staff of the Roumanian legation from cities, organizations and private individuals eager to entertain the royal visitors.

While not coming in her official role of queen, yet a Department of State official will meet her boat and every facility of the government will be placed at her disposal to make her stay in this country most enjoyable.

It is certain that she will be presented to the President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House. It is not known as yet whether or not there will be any White House entertainment under the circumstances of her coming to this country in a private capacity.

During her stay in Washington the queen, the Princess Ileana and her brother, Prince Michael, and the Infanta Beatrice, of Spain, will occupy the Roumanian legation. The date now set for the queen's sailing is October 12.

The last queen to visit America was the gracious Elisabeth of the Belgians, who had endeared herself to the American people in advance by her heroic stand with her husband, King Albert, during the world war. Queen Marie has a reputation for graciousness, artistic and literary ability which will win her a welcome from our achievement loving people.

MANY households pivot about the beginning of school year just now and those parents who would have liked to linger at seashore and mountains a little longer are hastening home nevertheless in order to have their children ready for school.

Perhaps in no other city in the country do as many children of distinguished people attend the public schools, not only including those of men and women of affairs, but the children of the foreign representatives to this country. In fact, at every debutante season there is apt to be a reunion of the girls who went to the Force, Adams or Western High schools, the schools within the district of the smart residential circle of the National Capital.

So the first days of school will see the opening of many congressional and official households, which, if it were not for the children, would not be opened before the opening of Congress.

It is not only the children, however, who take advantage of the educational opportunities in the National Capital, but it has become quite the order of the season for the debutantes and their older sisters to enroll in some of the universities or special classes in music, art or literature. There is a decided tendency to have some serious occupation or vocation among the young girls of Washington society and few indeed will acknowledge that they have nothing to do but "frivol."

Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

FROM the days when Mrs. Cave Dweller walked in her bare feet over the moss-grown rocks adjacent to her rocky home to those ages when the progress toward civilization made it necessary to bind some protection on the feet, on through the Grecian sandal age to the days when man, the civilized animal, began to don shoes of some kind, and still on to the days of tiny shoes of court ladies and the flapping boots of the courtier, we have come to the present era which the acme of perfection and elegance where shoes for men and women are concerned. That, of course, is what we now think, but our descendants may regard our footwear as primitive when a hundred or more years have rolled by.

Be that as it may be, the woman who wants to lead in the march of fashion will look to her feet and feel herself poor indeed if she lacks a goodly supply of pairs of shoes of every conceivable material and for every conceivable occasion. The modern woman, however, will lack the thrill that came to children a generation or two ago, when "new shoes" marked red letter days in their lives and each pair was handmade by the shoemaker around the corner.

True, the last on which such shoes were made was more substantial than artistic, but the leather was good and true and the shoes lasted years and years. Those who trod the paths of adventure and service in the early days of this country, contributed not only to its annals not only because of the deeds they accomplished but what they wore in accomplishing them.

Wore Wooden Shoes.

The brave women and children who struggled onward by the sides of the men to bring about the realization of vision which has resulted in our great nation trod the verdant fields, the rough unpaved streets and the pathways through the woods, shod either in patents of clogs with thick wooden soles and fastened on with straps either worn as protection to the very thin soled shoes made of thin materials or directly over the stockings, or frequently, especially in the case of the children, over their bare feet in the summer time.

The daintily shod in soft kid or satin wife or daughter of a prosperous colonial wore her patents or clogs as protection to her shoes as she walked about. While some of these were ugly and unbecoming, others were really works of art. A pair of tiny patents found in a pocket of an old coach were made of heavy wood polished like black ebony and conforming in shade to the graceful outline of the soles of a beauty's foot. The straps were hand-stitched and fastened with buckles of brass, while the brass nail heads were arranged in a decorative fashion. The iron pieces underneath to hold the wearer safe and dry out of the mud were also ornately pretty brass ones.

All through the early years of this country dainty shoes, sometimes heelless sandal-like ones and at other times those we associate more particularly with the Victorian age, very high tip-tilted as to heels, were to be seen now and then.

Made Their Own Shoes.

Fathers and husbands would welcome with joy the return of the fashions of the early part of the eighteenth century when it was one of the favorite pastimes of women of fashion to make their own shoes. These were simple affairs of brocade or satin or soft kid, heelless and soft of sole. These proved quite inadequate for the winter, so the women of that day much, as they do today, turned to the natives, the Indians, for suggestions and adopted as a variety of overshoes the fur-trimmed moccasins of the Indians.

In corresponding with their people in England the colonials frequently filled their letters with orders for clothes. From a perusal of old letters it is learned that one of the favorite importation for the use of the women were Turkish and other Oriental slippers.

While the Puritans left behind them in England many of the vanities and pomps of this wicked world they could not entirely forego their joy in great boots, then at the height of their enormous proportions, worn by gentlemen of fashion.

The dandies of that day wore ruffles of lace inside the flapping tops of their boots and they were all embroidered or embellished in some way.

The elegance in shoes of colonial and revolutionary days was at its height when the low shoes with enormous buckles for men came into vogue and the women wore slippers of elaborate materials with buckles which are the envy of the belles of today.

Jefferson Laced Ankles.

Thomas Jefferson, who seems to have been one of the pathfinders of liberty in dress, followed his adoption of the straight long trousers by lacing his shoes about the ankles with a neat leather strap, thus abandoning the shoe buckle of that day, an action which caused much comment, both adverse and complimentary.

In the old editions of newspapers appear such advertisements as would be very interesting if compared with the shoe advertisements of today. In many things they are very alike. In an edition of 1740 there appears advertisements of fine silk shoes; black shoes; girls' flowered russet shoes; shoes of black velvet; white damask; red Morocco, and red everlasting.

Silk stockings were also an issue in the early part of the nineteenth century. Reformers waged war upon the mas being foolish and extravagant, much as they do today. As far as can be learned, those women able to procure these stockings wore them, despite the attacks on them, even as do the maidens and matrons of today.

We are not even original in the ornate heels we are wearing. In 1790 a pair of shoes which had done duty at the French court, were brought to this country. They were of satin, and embroidered down the back seams were paste jewels, while these jewels were also sewed on the heels. The coquettes of that day wore colored, preferably red heels, with their black shoes.

HARRIS-EWING

sister of the Minister from Panama to Colombia, who is now living in Washington, in a period evening gown of taffeta with a loosely fitted bodice and full skirt. The skirt has a deep flounce of lace bordered with tiny hand-made French flowers. The French flowers also outline the oval neckline and the sleeveless armholes.

Small Shoes Worn.

Whether or not women's feet are getting larger, it is hard to say. It is a self-evident fact that all pairs of slippers and shoes saved for posterity by the women of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries are very tiny. This may be accounted for by the fact that it is well known that women used to wear their shoes small, whether their feet were small or not.

There is no doubt that many a long-suffering damsel at colonial balls would have been grateful for the skill of a modern bootmaker. We have discovered the art of beauty and comfort combined, and no woman need now wear shoes too small for her, with the many shoes on sale with a decidedly foreshortened and narrow effect.

This is to be a winter of glitter if the lavish use of sequins and rhinestones on the evening and afternoon gowns is to be taken as an indication.

The sequin of today is a work of art; it really scintilates and shines and is durable. No modiste or manufacturer would be guilty of putting them on so they would leave a trail of broken threads and beads in their wake as the wearer walks around. The sequins are in the softest shades and are put on in designs most effectively. While some of them are used on the old-time silk net, most of them are applied to chiffon or georgette or even velvet.

Crystals on Black Romaine.

One of the smartest evening gowns being shown is of black crepe romaine, heavily incrusted in crystal beads and silver sequins in design to about the hip line. The skirt is cut to form narrow panels following over a cloth of silver underslip. The bodice is made of the panels also. The neckline in back is unique in that it is cut down very low with a panel falling over the V.

In this same shop was a gown of gold lace made over a crinkled gold foundation, long of line and with the bottom of the skirt in flounces.

Most of the evening gowns have wide low-placed soft girdles of metal cloth or velvet or have a girdle effectively worked out in the embroidery.

One afternoon gown which is attracting much attention as the perfection of the winter's mode is of black chiffon so heavily embroidered in sequin and beads in deep colors that, at a short distance, it has the appearance of a brilliant Turkish fabric. This effect is obtained to the knees, when a short, very full shirred-on flounce of lovely black velvet is used. The sleeves are of the shirred-on black velvet. The hanging panels from the shoulder without which no self-respecting afternoon gown of 1926-27 would appear are also lined with velvet.

The popularity of the three-piece velvet suit with the brocaded-over blouse of last year gives promise to endure this winter. Many of the best dressed women have provided themselves with at least one of these costumes.

Sequin Fad Hits Hats.

Even the hats have not escaped the sequin fad and many of them will have the glittering bands or ornate sequins high in front or at the side. These are used not only on velvets, satins and brocades, but on felts.

There is a decided evidence of the return of the fur hat—in fact, it is a wonder it has not come back into general use before, since the high crowns of today lend themselves so well to fur.

Miss Helen Robinson, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, who will be one of the new debutantes, wore recently at Newport a dancing frock of white taffeta made with a full skirt and tightly fitted bodice faced with flame-colored chiffon. Miss Robinson is an ardent horsewoman and wears riding coats and breeches of heavy cream linen with a soft felt hat pulled well down over her hair.

Miss Georginia Joyes, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. J. W. Joyes, is wearing an afternoon gown of white chiffon made with a tailored collar and elongated shoulders in lieu of sleeves. Her hat is a small white felt.

Tam Effect to Hat.

Mrs. Clyde B. Aitchison, wife of the interstate commerce commissioner, is wearing a fall gown of black chiffon and satin, with a coat to match trimmed with fur. Her hat is a small black satin with a tam effect.

Miss Beatrict Aitchison, who will be one of the debutantes of the season, has a two-piece sport dress of silk, with bands of pastel colors around the bottom of the slip-on overblouse and skirt. Her hat is small and of white felt.

Mrs. Lewis C. Clephane is wearing a dinner gown of white chiffon, made with a long bodice and flared skirt. This has a cape drapery in the back.

Mrs. Joseph C. Grew, wife of the Undersecretary of State, is wearing a sport costume of beige crepe with a coat of beige flannel made on plain tailored lines. Her hat is of beige felt with a band of black grosgrained ribbon.

Mrs. William North Sturtevant wore at a party recently a white brocaded chiffon gown of simple girlish lines. It had a round neckline and no sleeves. Mrs. Sturtevant has a becoming boyish suit of blue, with which she wears a soft felt hat and a multicolored scarf.

Mrs. Gilbert Grosevenor has an orchid chiffon costume with a flared side effect to the skirt. The sleeves are long and caught in at the wrists with embroidered bands. Her hat is a wide brimmed orchid straw.

Small Hat the Thing.

Mrs. William M. Jardine, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was shopping in F street one of the warm days last week in a white dress of heavy crepe. Her felt hat was medium sized.

Mrs. C. C. Calhoun has a coat dress of black satin trimmed with gray fur, with which she wears a small gray felt hat trimmed with varicolored velvet flowers.

Mrs. George Leonard Smith has a coat dress of blue cloth embroidered in rich colors. Her hat is small and of blue felt with a high crushed crown.

Smaller hats and larger sleeves is the war cry of the arbiters of fashion. Many conferences for arbitration between the extremely large hat and the extremely small one, and the tight sleeves and the larger ones are being held on the neutral grounds of tea rooms and fashion salons.

After all, just what will be worn has to be taken to the supreme court of womankind. A real justice could not be more impressive in handing down a decision than some of the world fashion leaders.

Those fortunate enough to obtain a peek into the wardrobes of the fashion leaders note milady is going to wear her hats small of brim and high of crown—in fact, quite variable of crown, with a dent here and a crease there—and often a decided tam for daytime events.

Dolman Sleeve Popular.

However, there are hats of such wide proportions we wonder how they will go through doorways. There are many medium-brimmed hats as well. One woman well known for her taste explained that if she had only had a few hats they would be small ones, with perhaps a medium wide-brimmed one to break the monotony. The very wide ones, she explained, are very formal and dressy for afternoon occasions and for no other time.

In the array of coats and wraps, suits and coat dresses in some of the wardrobes for the winter, every note in the scale of sleeves evidently has been struck. The dolman sleeve very much is in evidence—the dolman armhole, with the sleeves gradually conforming to the shape of the arm—and, again, there is evidence the leg-o'-mutton sleeve and the bishop sleeve will be among those present at formal gatherings in the Capital this winter.

Of course, with the continued popularity of the strictly tailored or the semitailored coats, suits and coat dresses, it is not surprising that the plain sleeve well fitted to the arm is utilized.

Some of the prettiest afternoon gowns are without sleeves, but they all have little cape-like scarfs which form cape-like sleeves. They often are fastened to the wrists by a band of beading or embroidery or fur.

Sometimes the cape-like sleeves are of lace and are most effective on a chiffon or velvet gown. They give the gown a butterfly appearance which sleeves made of the material of the gown often fail to do.

Crystal Embroidery on Gown.

Mrs. Frederick Harris has a dinner gown of dull and brilliant sequins in designs on crepe romaine. There are American beauty roses in sequins down the front and back of the skirt, and one rose marks the low waistline. The bodice is cut with a low U-neckline. With this Mrs. Harris wears a dull pink shawl embroidered in rhinestones.

Mrs. James M. Thomson, who is in Washington for a visit, is wearing an afternoon gown of gray crepe romaine embroidered in narrow gray panels. Her hat is of gray kash trimmed with gray fur.

Mrs. C. Phillips Hill, who has been spending the summer at Bay Head, N. J., wore at a dinner there a white chiffon gown with crystal embroidery.

Miss Frances Hill, her subdebutante daughter, is wearing a sports costume consisting of a silky white knitted slip-on sweater finished with a turnover collar and tie and a white flannel skirt pleated in front. Miss Hill also has a white evening dress of chiffon made with hanging panels in the back.

Mrs. Dawes Wears Gray Lace.

Miss Barrine Drake, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Drake, is wearing a suit of dark blue made with a short straight coat and a plain skirt. Her hat is high-crowned, of rough felt, the same shade as her suit. Miss Drake also is wearing a white lace evening gown.

Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte wore at a dinner she gave in New York recently, a gown of white chiffon with an all-over design in sequins and rhinestones. The sequins and rhinestones formed a pointed girdle at the low waistline. Her slippers matched the design on her dress, picked out in sequins and rhinestones.

Mrs. Dawes, wife of the vice president, wore for a dinner in her Chicago home recently, a gown of gray lace combined with gray chiffon, outlined in sequins. Mrs. Dawes also is wearing a gray chiffon ensemble for afternoon.

Mrs. John Philip Hill wore at one of the recent political meetings in Maryland, a becoming costume of beige chiffon, made with hanging panels from the back. Her hat was wide-brimmed, of beige felt, and her slippers and hose also were beige.

Countess di Villanova, wife of the first secretary of the Italian embassy, has a gown of black crepe romaine, elaborately sequined, and with rhinestones. This is made with a deep V in the back and hanging panels down the back.

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

WASHINGTON women are preparing to answer "here" at the rallying call of the District officials to have real District representation at the District of Columbia day at the Sesquicentennial in Philadelphia on October 6.

Led by Mrs. Virginia White Speel, the president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, who has been appointed by the commissioners of the District chairman of the women's committee for District day, the representatives of many clubs will attend that event.

The civic and patriotic organizations of women who are working for the various projects for women and children feel that this will be a splendid opportunity to present the needs of the District to the nation and to make them understand that the National Capital is really progressive in its ambitions, from a civic point of view.

Perhaps the District of Columbia League of Women Voters will seize the opportunity to bring home to the voters of the country the fact that the District of Columbia women in their voteless state are dependent upon other States' interest for the legislation passed for the District. Their picturesque banner "Voteless Washington" always attracts a good deal of attention.

However, District day will be nonpartisan and nonpolitical in aspect, and every citizen is invited to participate and to make it one of the gala days at the great exposition which celebrates the 150th anniversary of the signing of America's great document of independance.

Washington women engaged in various lines of constructive and educational work have acquired the habit of attending lectures and exhibits and congressional hearings to get expert opinions and discussions related to their activities. Therefore, it is not surprising that this summer and this fall especially a path has been beaten to the exhibits at the Sesquicentennial to hear special authorities on the subjects of which they speak, not only from a national but international standpoint.

The women who are active in the parent-teacher associations and other school organizations have been heeding the words of the United States bureau of education on the question of correct posture for children and the effect school furniture and conditions often have on it. Many of the women who have been taking active part in the surveys of the conditions and kinds of school desks used in the Washington schools took the opportunity last Tuesday to attend the opening of the first group demonstration work and posture exercises in the United States children's bureau exhibit at the Sesquicentennial. Boys and girls from the public schools were used to demonstrate the exercises and the tests and instructions were given by Miss Leah Thomas, instructor in hygiene and physical education department of Smith college of Northampton, Mass., who came to Washington several times last winter.

This expert in public schools places great stress on the value of proper physical posture of children as an asset in the achievements of men and women. The posture exercises as planned by Dr. Armin Klein, of the United States children's bureau, attracted much attention.

In talking to the Washington visitors Miss Thomas advocated the thorough teaching of posture work in the public schools.

"If posture work were taught more thoroughly in the public schools," she said, "there would be fewer students of college age, to say nothing of mature men and women, slouching through life with heads drooping forward above rounded shoulders, with sunken chests, with relaxed and protuberant abdomens, and with exaggerated back curves."

Beginning this week first fall meetings of clubs and organizations, national and local, will be the order of the day. These meetings are always fraught with pleasure for they are usually in the form of get-together gatherings, and the returning travelers and those who have remained at the helm here all summer have many experiences to relate.

There is always a spirit of great enthusiasm at these first meetings and a great desire to begin work and to accomplish much in the coming season. Therefore, the meetings for the rest of September and October will be of social nature combined with earnest discussion of plans and programs, policies and speakers for the season.

Not the least interesting feature of these meetings are the brand-new yearbooks, for even the small clubs realize the feasibility of some kind of printed year pamphlet to be used as a guide to the membership, the officers' list and often the annual reports of officers and the resolutions passed at the meetings.

The first meeting of the season for the District Federation of Women's Clubs will be at the Hotel Roosevelt October 25, and by that time the new yearbook with the greetings of the president and the reports of the officers and committee members will be ready for distribution.

The District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations will meet the first Tuesday after the opening of the public schools. They also will discuss and plan for their winter's program and consider the surveys made by chairmen of the committees during the summer.

One of the high spots of the events of the club and organization world for this winter will be the formal opening of the Y. W. C. A.'s new building, which will take place probably in January or February. Mrs. Coolidge will, without doubt, be present at this occasion, for she was one of the chief figures at the opening of the project when she laid the corner stone last spring.

The braille classes of the staff assistants corps of the District chapter of the American Red Cross will reopen for the season on Tuesday, September 28, at 8 o'clock, in District chapter headquarters, 16 Jackson place northwest. Miss Anna C. Koerper, chairman of the corps, has issued an invitation for more women workers to volunteer for this work which is for the benefit of the overseas soldiers blinded in the war. No previous experience is necessary for enrollment in the classes and all hours given to the work will be counted on the 18 hours required yearly for membership in the registered volunteer service of the District chapter.

District chapter workers are busy with the task of filling the Christmas bags which are to be sent to the service men on duty in the Canal Zone. The sum needed for the 500 bags which are the quota of the District chapter has not yet been raised and contributions marked "For Christmas bags," will be received until October 1. One dollar twenty-five cents fills a bag with the comforts and little conveniences which mean so much to the men on foreign service for Uncle Sam.

Contributions of cigarettes, pencils, paper, playing cards, penknives and memorandum books will also be received for the bags at the headquarters on Jackson place northwest.

The last rehearsal of the water pageants to open the fall season at the Manor club on Saturday was held yesterday. The day's program starts with a golf foursome tournament and in the evening the pageant in the swimming pool for members and guests will be put on. H. F. Enslow, director of life-saving for the American Red Cross, has had the actors in rehearsal for two weeks. He arranged to put on the program in cooperation with Stanley Willis, Dr. J. W. Bird and C. M. Wright, of the Manor club.

The pageant in costume will be done by Florence Skadding, Commodore W. R. Longfellow, Capt. Guy Winkjer, Mrs. A. Grier, American Red Cross; H. Miller, Washington Canoe club; Marshall Gray, Loretta Umstead, Capitol Canoe club; W. J. Stevenson, Washington Canoe club; Bud Havens, Josephine Godbold, Raymond Edmonston, Belmar Shepley, Sam Nichols, Boyd Hind, Dean Longfellow, O. Meyer, Hazel Davis, Olive O'Hern, Elizabeth Whaler, Claudia Kyle, D'Arcy Bonnett, Helen Streeks, Carl Knight, Bob Darnell, Ione Whaler, Cliff Sanford, Betty Friedman, and Albert Lyman.

Characters of various nationalities, including Cassius and Caesar of the Romans, then the Assyrians, the Greeks, the Japanese and the Hawaiians are worked into the story. All sorts of diving and fancy strokes will be demonstrated as well as rescue work.

Mrs. J. Garfield Riley, president of the Women's City club and the chairmen of the various committees and sections of the club are engaged in outlining the program of the club's activities for the coming season. The Charter members of the club are to be guests of honor at a series of teas which will be given each day at the club beginning tomorrow from 3 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Edgar T. Brown will be hostess and assisting will be Miss Virginia S. Benjamin, Mrs. Frank E. Mack, Mrs. Anna Brown, Mrs. W. J. La Varra, Mrs. John Allen Munson, Mrs. Elma Saul and Mrs. Gratten Kerans.

Many of the members who attend the free and easy auction section regularly on Tuesday evenings who have been away, have returned from vacationing and were among the players at the meeting last week. Those playing for the first time this season were Miss Julia E. Coonan, Miss Josephine O. Willis and Mrs. S. S. Martin.

Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, chairman of the music section, has in preparation a program which will be given in October and Mrs. Patrick Gallagher, chairman of the drama unit, is assigning parts for a play to be given in the early autumn.

The Sixteenth Street Heights Woman's club will open the season with a luncheon at the home of Mrs. O. H. Beuson, 5320 Moreland avenue, Edgemoor, Md., Tuesday, September 28.

The executive board of the Washington district council of the National Council of Catholic Women met Wednesday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. Charles P. Neill. A plea for representation at the national convention in Milwaukee on October 10 was made by Mrs. Neill.

The record of the remarkable work done in the six mission schools maintained by the council during the summer was read by the chairman of the rural schools, Miss Rebecca Shanley. The council is very proud of the work accomplished and Miss Shanley was congratulated.

Various local activities for the winter were planned, the first of which is a luncheon to be held at the Mayflower hotel in the latter part of October. The arrangements are in charge of Mrs. E. T. Kilkoff.

The fall meeting of the council will take place on Sunday, October 3, at 3 o'clock at the National School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth street northwest. Many plans of interest to the council will be discussed.

Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Woman's Guild of Sibley Memorial hospital, presided at the first meeting of the guild officers in the new office and sewing room on the fourth floor of the recently completed addition to Sibley Memorial hospital last week. Mrs. H. S. France is in charge of headquarters. All communications regarding the work of the guild, contributions, membership, &c., may be addressed to "The Woman's Guild, Sibley Memorial hospital, 1150 North Capitol street."

The present membership of the guild is about 1,500. It was unanimously voted to make a steady effort toward doubling this membership and plans were made to launch a forward movement to include the many friends of Sibley gained through the recent drive. Friday, November 5, was designated "Hospital night," which is the annual roll call for guild dues and will be held in Rust hall chapel.

The first regular meeting of the guild will be held Thursday morning at 10:45 o'clock in Rust hall chapel. Every one interested in hospital work is cordially invited.

The officers are: President, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan; vice president-at-large, Mrs. Henry S. France; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles S. Cole; treasurer, Mrs. G. W. R. Stokes; membership secretary, Miss Mary H. France; vice presidents, Mrs. G. W. Nairn, Mrs. R. E. Chapin, Mrs. N. E. Webb, Mrs. J. Phelps Hand, Mrs. B. T. Hynson, Mrs. W. L. Hibble and Mrs. A. S. Henderson.

The Abigail Hartman Rice chapter, D. A. R., met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Ralph Endicott, 4221 Thirteenth street northeast. Plans for the annual ball to be held in November were discussed. Mrs. Frank Morrison, regent of the chapter, presided. The founder of the chapter, Mrs. Clayton E. Emig, led the prayer. The members stood in respect to Miss Virginia Nicholls, recording secretary, whose absence was due to the recent death of her father. Mrs. Jasper Marion Beall acted as recording secretary. The ways and means committee of the chapter report was read by Mrs. William Dougal Leetch, chairman of the committee. November 16 was set as the date for the eighth centennial ball at the L'Aiglon club, Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest. The following new members were elected: Miss Mildred Brashears, Mrs. Dorothy Burns, Miss Annie Laura Clark, Miss Rosemary Cockerille, Miss Mabel Ellsworth, Mrs. George W. Ford, and Miss Mark K. Holmes. A number of guests were presented to the members by Mrs. Emig, which included Miss Alberta Warren, Miss Helen Noyes, Miss Mary Edith Mulhall, and Miss Mary Lewis Beard, all of whom were C. A. R. girls.

The regent, Mrs. Morrison, had Mrs. Beall read a most interesting and detailed letter she had received from a member of the chapter, Mrs. Emory Ozabal, who has been for quite some time located in China with her husband. The chairman of features, Mrs. Ralph Endicott, introduced the guest of honor of the evening, Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley, acting president of the League of American Pen Women.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sears, of Jersey City; Miss Elizabeth Barrett and Miss Kathryn Barrett, cousins of the bride, from Greenwood, S. C., and Mrs. T. H. Smoot, of New York City, sister of the bridegroom. The church was decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers and the nuptial music was rendered by Miss Nan Seay.

Afternoon Ceremony.

The marriage of Miss Ruth N. Boyer, daughter of Mr. G. T. Boyer and the late Mrs. Boyer, to Mr. Clarence C. Davison, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Davison, of Newton, N. J., was solemnized Wednesday at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon at the Brookland Methodist church. The officiating clergymen were the Rev. A. S. Mowbray and the Rev. Walter G. McNeil.

The church was attractively decorated, with delicate ferns forming a background of greenery for the wedding party. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a brown traveling dress, with a large tan hat trimmed with flowers. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. C. H. Collier acted as best man for the bridegroom and the ushers were Mr. Roy Boyer and Mr. Gardner M. French.

Mrs. Arthur H. Fast sang two solos and the wedding march was played by Mr. John Thomas.

Following the ceremony there was a dinner at 6 o'clock at the bride's home, after which Mr. and Mrs. Davison left for a motor trip through northern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Upon their return they will make their future home at the residence of the bride's father, 1032 Newton street.

Wedding at Woodside.

Grace Episcopal church, Woodside, Md., was the scene of an attractive wedding Wednesday, when, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, Miss Burnetta Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Neville Black, of Silver Spring, Md., became the bride of Mr. Orland E. Way, of Sheffield, Ala. The chancel was beautifully decorated with flowers, which formed a charming background for the wedding party.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of sand-colored georgette, paneled in lace, with a picture hat to match, and carried Queen Beatrice roses. Her sole attendant, the matron of honor, was her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Tilghman Everett, of Merrifield, Va., who was costumed in pale green chiffon and carried golden roses. Mr. William C. Black, brother of the bride, was best man, and the Rev. William B. Everett, of Marshall, Va., was the officiating rector. The music was furnished by Miss Elizabeth Benedict, of Woodside, Md.

The bride's family has been prominent in Alexandria, Va., for several generations, her maternal grandfather having been the late Maj. Edgar L. Brockett, of that city, while her paternal grandfather, Capt. William Caywood Black, although a native of Alexandria, was better identified with New Orleans, La., being one of the founders of the National Cotton Exchange.

Miss Lucy Polito, maid of honor for her sister, was also in orchid, with hat to match and carried a bouquet of orchids.

The best man was Mr. Jerry Maiatico, of Washington, D. C. Special music at the church was conducted by Leon Brusiloff.

A dinner for the immediate families of the bride and groom was given at the home of the bride, 6308 Ninth street northwest, followed by a reception, where the decorations followed the same lines as at the church.

The couple departed for points in Canada, after which they will be guests of Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Vestola, uncle of the bride, and of Mr. and Mrs. Peppe, of Waterbury, Conn. The bride's going away frock was a blue suit, cut on tailored lines, with velour hat and other accessories to correspond.

The couple will be at home after October 1, at the Gorgas apartments. Dr. De Mino is a graduate of Flower hospital, of New York, and was resident physician at the Boston City hospital and Yonkers hospital before coming to this city, where he has been practicing his profession for four years.

The marriage of Miss Mary Eilleen Duffy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Duffy, to Mr. William A. Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Fitzgerald, took place Wednesday morning at St. Stephen's Catholic church, where nuptial high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Arthur W. Murphy.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a costume of white crepe de chine trimmed with satin and Irish lace, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses. Miss Coeline Lynch was maid of honor and was dressed in a gown of black lace over orchid satin. Mr. Henry J. Fitzgerald, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The ceremony was followed by a reception, after which Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald left for a wedding trip. They will motor to Philadelphia, New York and through the Berkshires, and will be at home after October at 1920 Kearney street northwest.

Added Beauty In an Hour
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I use a hair dressing which great experts made especially for me. It keeps my hair curly, gives it a sheen. I never go to a hairdresser, never have a Marcel wave. Yet everyone who sees me on the stage or off marvels at my curly, glowing hair.

Now I have placed this dressing at every woman's call. All toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c. My guarantee comes with each bottle. If it doesn't delight you, doesn't double the beauty of your hair at once, ask for your money back.

Go try it now. It is one of the best helps I ever found for women, especially for those with bobbed hair.

Truly the Most Important Week of the Season Begins Tomorrow

With the Madelon Fashion Event
To Fittingly Mark
The Second Anniversary of Madelon MODES

ALL next week you may enjoy the rich beauty of the new Autumn modes—the panorama of glorious colors, lovely, graceful lines, gorgeous fabrics as interpreted in Madelon frocks and coats!

---And displayed informally by mannequins in the Individual Dress and Coat Shops!

MADELON Modes, always at the top of the list of style favorites, achieve a great triumph this time in the magnificent collection of frocks, gowns, and millinery, planned for months to celebrate the occasion—a greater and more glorious collection than we have ever had before.

NEW frocks and coats that fully express the new Paris Entente—that frocks, gowns, wraps, coats and millinery shall follow a new road to chic. More feminine lines in dresses—more expressive hats—more elaborate coats—gorgeous, rich autumn colorings, and a predominating vogue for black—a slight trend to longer skirts—higher waistlines—great stress on draperies—and a decided emphasis on decoration.

FIFTY-TWO style experts from fifty-two great stores meet in New York once a month at a Style Review. From hundreds of things by foremost designers, these experts make their choice. A frock, a hat, a coat here and there—catches their eye. They select those things to be honored by the label of Madelon.

AND then to give you values that are beyond compare, the needs of these great stores are pooled, orders are placed and prices come down and down. Meet Madelon this week, her clothes are charming!

Paris Again Relents in Favor of New Handkerchiefs Felts!
Because She Found That She Could Not Divorce the Smart Americaine From the Felt Hat!

BUT she makes no concession to habit when it comes to deciding the style treatments of these hats, for Paris never did like routine, and, therefore, felts they are—these charming new bonnets—but an entirely different treatment of felts. A softer and more pliable felt that is combined cleverly with bands of belting ribbon—draped and supple treatments—that pattern after the very smartest models in the recent collections brought out by Madame Agnes and Caroline Reboux. Of course, this means that these new felt hats are all small and snug, and that a great many of them affect the beret silhouette. All the tawny shades of autumn—black and the very smart new Petunia colorings.... 16.50

Economical Heat For Fall Time

Lifting the Smoke Screen

Frederick Winsor, "the madman who thought to light a city with burning vapor" was the speaker. He stood in his laboratory, surrounded by a group of London bankers. Patiently he tried to explain to them his experiments with gas, to gain their financial backing for a great enterprise, the formation of the first gas company in the world.

Today, Winsor's century-old prophecy is beginning to be fulfilled. Dr. J. S. Owens, superintendent of the London advisory committee on atmospheric pollution, in a recent address before the Royal Society of Arts, said that, thanks to the smokeless qualities of gas and coke, the soot deposited upon London last year was only 59 per cent of the total deposited ten years ago, and that the clean air and sunshine in the city were by that much increased.

When Fall comes, chilly uncertain weather comes, too. Chills and coughs and colds come. That is why Fall is such a good season to install Radiantfire, the new gas heating invention. It warms rooms instantly, dustlessly, noiselessly, cheaply. It sends 90% of its glowing, radiant rays directly into the room—not up the chimney. It renders Fall furnace heat and Fall coal bills unnecessary.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1926. R

SEATTLE SELECTED FOR 1927 SESSIONS OF REALTY BOARDS

Dealers Will Meet in Annual Convention August 9 to 12, Directors Report.

TO CONDUCT BUSINESS AT MIAMI IN JANUARY

Summer Schedule Is Moved Back So as Not to Interfere With Season.

Seattle, Wash., has been chosen as the place of holding the next annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Date of the convention has tentatively been set for August 9-12, inclusive.

Date of the annual business meeting of the association, which will be held in Miami, Fla., was placed as January 12, 13 and 14.

Choice of a convention city was made by the directors of the association at their quarterly meeting just held in Chicago. The August date is a departure from the association's practice of some years to hold its annual convention in June.

The change was made with the idea that an August meeting would be favorable to the business plans of the largest proportion of the membership, and with the further idea that it would be advisable to decrease the present half year's overlapping between the period of election of officers for any year and the period of their taking office.

By-Laws Are Changed.

Change in the by-laws of the association expected to result in a greater consolidation of the work carried on by real estate boards in advancing standards of practice in the business of real estate and in protecting the interests of real estate as a commodity, was effected by the directors in an amendment increasing the dues payable for member boards from $5 to $7 per active member for the year 1927, $8 for the year 1928, $9 for the year 1929 and $10 for the year 1930. The payment was changed from an annual to a semiannual plan.

Closer communication between local boards and the national association through addition of field men to the national staff will be the first purpose to be accomplished in the coming year as made possible through the new budget plan, according to notices which have been sent out this week to member boards. In additon it is proposed to link the individual realtor up more closely with the professional information of practical use to him which is constantly being gathered through the machinery of the national association.

An important effect of the new financing plan is expected to be a solidification of the work already initiated by the national association through its member boards in the development of real estate professional education and the strengthening of the efforts of the association and its member boards in the advancement of Federal and State legislation which will further home ownership, the substantial building of communities and the protection of the public in real estate investment.

Virginia Association Of Realtors to Meet

The Virginia Real Estate association, composed of real estate boards throughout the State, will hold its annual meeting at Alexandria, October 7 to 9, inclusive.

The Washington Real Estate board will entertain the members of this association and their wives at the Wardman Park hotel on the evening of October 8. This entertainment will take the form of music and stunts which will be followed by a buffet supper and dance. The wives of the Virginia realtors as well as the members of the Washington board will be invited to this function. One of the features of the annual meeting of the Virginia association is the 5-minute speaking contest by men from different parts of the State. This contest will likely take place in connection with the entertainment by the Washington board.

HOMES EXPOSITION OF PROFIT TO WIVES AND HOUSE OWNERS

Realty Board Show, October 18 to 23, to Include Aid to Living Conditions.

OPPORTUNITY TO DELVE INTO COLOR MYSTERIES

Drapery Arrangement, Cleaning Methods, Repair and Painting to Be Features.

The Washington Real Estate Board has announced that its Better Homes and Building exposition, to be held in the Washington auditorium, October 18 to 23, will not be merely interesting to real estate men and builders, but will be of practical value to house owners and housewives.

Demonstrations to aid home conditions will be presented. Demonstrations in landscape planning, gardening, interior decorating and the use of modern household appliances will be given every day. Housewives will be given an opportunity to study color effects, arrangements of draperies, the latest methods of cleaning and caring for the home, and the man of the house will be given an opportunity to study proper methods of painting and household repair together.

It is the opinion of the Real Estate Board that the exposition may prove an annual affair of benefit to the general public.

The exposition is being conducted by Clarence F. Donohoe, president of the Washington Real Estate Board; James P. Schick, executive secretary and treasurer; John F. Maury, W. C. Miller, Ben T. Webster, Jesse H. Hedges, Theodore M. Judd and A. E. Landvoight.

England Has College Of Managing Estates

How far real estate professional education is now available in England was pointed out by Francis H. Rex, president of the Auctioneers and Real Estate Agents Institute of the United Kingdom, in his presidential address delivered at the recent annual provincial meeting of the institute.

A college of estate management, established by the institute, makes such professional training available. In the administration of the college the institute is now joined by the Surveyors institute, the Land Agents society and the University of London. The University of London issues a degree in estate management.

THINKING NECESSARY, DECLARES WHITAKER

Sanctity, the Needed Human Element, Is Lacking, He Asserts.

Science unaided can not solve the problems of the cities, Charles Harris Whitaker, editor of the Journal of the American Institute of Architects, asserts in a symposium of the institute, "Cities Old and New."

Much thinking is necessary to remedy existing evils of large cities, says Mr. Whitaker, although such an effort might be pure waste. Human life, he adds, may be a parasite, destined to consume its inheritance of natural resources and pass on.

Science is expected to cure all ills, he declares, but it has begun at the wrong end and lacks "sanctity," the one human element capable of making it man's servant.

Architecture should have control over communal order and serenity, he says. It should have something very vital to do with the planning and building of a city, but under present conditions, how much of what it has to offer can be made available, or is wanted?

Gives Case of New York.

"Serving the caprices of the business needs of a clinet is not the way to establish communal order and serenity," he says. The present plight and appearance of every big city indicates no sensible architect would dispute the assertion that if a modern city were to be laid out anew, not one of the enforced limitations under which he now works and which serve to aggravate the menacing problems of urban growth, would be tolerated.

"Let us state the case of New York. What physical design it has came largely from the T-square and triangle. Along the street lines thus squared off or, worse still, along the lines of those streets that grew about the wanderings of cattle or about the simple needs and applied knowledge of the settlers, there has arisen an unrelated network of divisions called party lines.

"They are the most unreasonable things in a city, and yet the most sacred. They not only induce the most ridiculous of monstrosities, in which the art and process of architecture are reduced to jugglery, but they are adamant in their resistance to order and serenity the while they breed congestion and chaos.

"If this island city were replanned with street areas proportioned properly and then covered with five-story buildings without regard for the present arbitrary party lines, it would have available more floor area than it now has and no congestion.

"Do these physical and dominating factors underlying the building of cities rest on science? Indeed, nothing could be farther removed. They rest originally on the polite historical phrases of 'taking possession,' 'grants,' 'founding,' and so on.

"Yet we proceed to the task of city planning, which in the case of our cities can imply nothing more than some pills and a lotion.

"We zone and restrict; we borrow and elevate. We solemnly announce double or triple decks for streets, and the mad remedy is choired by the proletariat, orchestrated by the newspapers, and likely will come to pass, just as the mad remedies of subways, tunnels and high buildings also have prevailed.

"Shall we still admit, despite the sieve in which we sail and through the jigsawed party lines and street layouts of which all our work efforts filter out, that architecture has domain over the process of city building? All we can say is that it ought to have; that it is the one qualified art for the purpose, which means architecture in its complete sense and not the marked-off area of human activity supposedly in the possession of architects.

Much Thinking Needed.

"How can it be made effective? There is no way at present. Much thinking will have to be done. Many persons first must submit to the rigors of intellectual integrity. It may be such an effort is waste. It may be human life is a parasite, destined to consume its inheritance of natural resources and pass on. It may be that it merely awaits the rebellion of the one force of which every living organism save man is aware, the force of which man's science has told him nothing.

"One easily could make out a plausible case for such a view. The recent report on the decline of soil vitality in the United States would startle a less confident race. The present big cities and their passion for becoming bigger, historically in-

The building contains eleven stories and will be operated as a strictly first-class commercial hotel, with special facilities and garage service for motorists. All of the rooms have private baths, and each room has electric fan and running ice water. One of the features of the management will be a special business men's luncheon.

The Provident Hotel Corpoation was organized by Augustus Gumpert, who was elected president of the corporation. Thomas E. Jarrell is vice president and William Henry White is secretary-treasurer and general counsel. The board of directors consists of the above officers with L. Whiting Estes, James C. Hoyle, A. H. Plugge and Leonard P. Steuart.

The management of the hotel will be under the direct supervision of Augustus Gumpert, who has been associated with local hostelries for the past 22 years, and was manager of the old Ebbitt hotel for nearly 10 years.

Natural Golf Course In Fernandina Park

Fernandina, Fla., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Fore!

On property deeded by the government to the city as a park, Fernandina golfers tee off and onto natural fairways, bunkers, traps, &c., fashioned by the beautiful sand dunes of Amelia island.

It is the only natural ocean-side golf course in Florida. The park property fronts for nearly a mile on the Atlantic ocean.

Par for the course is a 78, but the best score so far is an 80. There are no green fees and usually a good crowd is wending its way over the intricate plot of ground.

15 New Real Estate Boards.

Fifteen new boards were elected to membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards by action of the board of directors at a quarterly meeting just closed in Chicago. One board was dropped from the association's membership as disorganized and not functioning, one former member board was reinstated. Consolidation of two member boards was provided for. Three additional boards were elected subject to technical conditions. The action brings the membership of the association to 661 boards.

America's Smartest Colony of Group Homes

A Community Without a Rival

THIS is the thought so often expressed by those who come to see and stay to admire the quaint dwellings of FOXHALL, where Old World charm and New World comfort are so skillfully blended. There is no other community that can be regarded as a competitor of the VILLAGE, for there is none other quite like it—the individual homes, the wooded setting of Glover Park, the inimitable beauty of the community as a whole are without a peer in the Nation's Capital!

Three weeks ago we announced the latest group of dwellings to be completed—seven delightful residences at the very gateway of the VILLAGE, approached by walled terraces of a character found nowhere else in Washington. Five of these homes have already been purchased by people of discernment; the two remaining are considered equal in architecture, construction and detail of fitments to houses selling elsewhere as high as $18,500, and you cannot fail to appreciate their unusual value at—

COLONIAL TYPE HOMES CONTINUE IN DEMAND

MODERN CONDITIONS MET

No other architectural style has come into such quick favor in so short a time as the colonial, or modified colonial, states an authority. Washingtonians have long been familiar with stately mansions interlinked with the history of the country, located not so many miles from the Capital, and they have cultivated a taste for the colonial style of home, toned down, of course, to suit modern conditions.

For instance, in the olden days, fireplaces were more or less looked upon with a practical eye. Then great feasts were the rule, rather than the exception, and it required quite a bit of space to prepare the trophies of the chase.

Today the fireplace, while more or less a replica of those days, is now prized for its beauty and the charm and contentment it suggests.

Electrical fixtures, too, while retaining some suggestion of early American illumination, lose none of today's magic. The white and mahogany trim, however, which characterized the homes of the early settlers, has not been "modified" to any appreciable extent.

An interesting new group of homes, typifying the modified colonial style, have recently been placed on the market by the R. E. Latimer Land Co. They are located in Bellevue Terrace, Cathedral Highlands, and are attracting favorable comment because of their faithful delineation of this early period of architecture in America.

British Clergymen Lead in Longevity

Treasury Ruling on Realty Tax Returns Incomplete

Language on Nonmarketable Obligations Called Unsatisfactory—Statements by Syndicate Trusts Not Touched—Analysis by Board's Counsel

Administrative interpretation of the income tax law asked for by the National Association of Real Estate Boards to make requirements as to tax returns equitably consonant with actual business practice in certain accepted types of real estate selling is included only in part in a ruling of the Treasury Department just issued providing new regulations in regard to reporting income received from sales of personal and real estate property on the installment plan.

Complete regulations of the bureau of internal revenue under the revenue acts of 1926 are in the hands of the government printer but have not yet been issued.

The ruling just released, known as Treasury decision 3921, complies substantially with the recommendation of the association regarding deferred payment sales of real estate not on an installment plan, but is unsatisfactory in its language in the matter of nonmarketable obligations or evidences of indebtednes which may be received in payment.

Further, the ruling does not touch on the matter of tax returns by members of syndicate trusts or other joint investment organizations engaged in subdividing and selling real estate, and by failing to make the provision asked for by the national association in regard to this phase of the tax law, leaves a situation in which, unless something further is done, the taxable profits of such syndicates must be computed with the syndicate itself rather than the beneficiary as the profit-earning entity. The result will be that in many cases members of syndicates will be taxed on their proportionate share of the syndicates' profits before they have received or can receive any part of such profits, or even before the return of any portion of their capital investment.

Difficulties in the provisions of the 1926 revenue act affecting real estate sales which may involve the immediate accruement to the government of millions of dollars in taxes are pointed out in an analysis of the present ruling and of the whole income-tax situation in respect to real estate sales which has just been submitted to the board of directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in a joint brief by Nathan William MacChesney, its general counsel, and by George P. Ellis, C. P. A., and Paul W. Pinkerton, C. P. A., its consulting accountants.

The act provides that income from installment sales of real estate may be reported on the installment plan if the initial payments do not exceed one-fourth of the contract price. It defines "initial payments" as "the payments received * * * during the taxable period in which the sale or other disposition is made."

Under the law as adopted, therefore, a subdivider can never know until the close of his taxable year how many or which ones of his sales during the year will, under the provisions of the law, be considered as installment sales, since the test is the amount of the payments actually received during his taxable year.

So trivial a circumstance as the payment by a customer on December 31 of an installment not due under his contract till the following day, January 1, may under the present law determine whether the seller may return the sale as made on an installment basis.

Following study of the text of the new ruling the association is preparing to take what further action may be advisable to bring about the adjustments held necessary in the act or in the administrative regulations to accompany it.

In the syndicate form of enlisting capital for real estate development, because of the nature of the organization, it is impossible to determine whether or not there is any profit accruing to an individual member until such time as the original capital paid in shall have been returned to the participants, the national association has pointed out.

Practice has varied in the various district offices of the internal revenue bureau as to whether syndicate trusts subdividing and selling real estate should, therefore, be permitted to return no taxable gain until such time as an actual gain had been received—in other words, until such time as the invested capital should have been returned—or as to whether such trusts should be treated as partnerships or associations.

The national association in its memorandum to the Treasury Department asked that the principles as to joint adventures suggested in article 1507 of regulations 65 be applied specifically to real estate syndicate trusts.

Unless this question is treated separately in the forthcoming regulations of the Treasury Department or unless something further is done, the practices of the bureau may, however, be expected eventually to become standardized along the lines of immediate taxation of profits earned by such syndicates, the joint brief presented to the association points out.

The association, in resolutions passed at its annual convention held in Tulsa, Okla., in June, pointed out that the Federal income tax law has not adequately provided for the return for taxation of deferred payment sales of real property when such sales are not on an installment basis, though such a basis is a well-recognized and sound plan and the only one by which a majority of the people may purchase homes. In a memorandum subsequently addressed to the solicitor of internal revenue it asked that the fullest possible provision be inserted in the expected Treasury regulations in regard to this plan of sales.

The effort was successful to the extent that Treasury decision 3921 has continued to recognize the so-called "deferred payment plan." It prescribes that in such cases "the obligations of the purchaser received by the vender are to be considered as the equivalent of cash to the amount of their fair market value in ascertaining the profit or less from the transaction."

"If the obligations received by the vender have no fair market value, the payments in cash or other property having a fair market value shall be applied against and reduce the basis of the property sold, and if in excess of such basis shall be taxable to the extent of the excess. Gain or loss is realized when the obligations are disposed of or satisfied, the amount being the difference between the reduced basis as provided above and the amount realized therefor.

While the provision does not limit its application in regard to obligations received by the vender to "evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser," but is so broad as to include any obligations, it is unsatisfactory in that it continues the

REALTY MEN PROJECT NEW BOWLING LEAGUE

Eight Teams to Compete in Schedule of Games Over 23-Week Period.

Plans have been completed for the organization of a new league in bowling circles. This league will be composed of teams from the offices of eight members of the Real Estate board. The plans contemplate a schedule covering a period of 23 weeks, each team in the league meeting all other teams on three different occasions.

Prizes have been arranged so that each team will receive a prize at the end of the season. Prizes will also be awarded to the player maintaining the highest individual average for the high game and for high set. It is expected that the Real Estate board, which is sponsoring the league, will award a prize to the winning team.

The offices who will have teams in this league are Boss & Phelps, Shannon & Luchs, Hedges & Middleton, Cafritz Co., Douglas & Phillips, Stone & Fairfax, J. Dallas Grady and N. L. Sansbury Co. The league has been organized and the following officers have been elected. Alfred H. Gaddis, of Cafritz Co., president; William M. Throckmorton, Douglass & Phillips, treasurer; W. C. Wedding, Boss & Phelps, secretary, and Charles P. Knapp, of J. Dallas Grady, official scorer. The schedule contemplates contests every Wednesday night at King Pin alleys, Fourteenth and Park road.

Quartz, Inch Square, New Radio Control

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Broadcasting stations can be made to keep absolutely to their allotted wave length and avoid interference with other stations, by means of a piece of quartz no bigger than a postage stamp, which will be on view at the National Radio exhibition at Olympia next month.

This, at least, is the claim of the exhibitor, who declares that a piece of the quartz one inch square and an eighth of an inch thick, placed between plates connected to grid and filament of a valve, will control the wave length of a mighty broadcasting station.

Franco-German Pact Disappoints French

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Twenty months of negotiations, often interrupted, but resumed at the last minute, have resulted in a Franco-German commercial treaty, which the French are now declaring to be a very small mouse indeed as the outcome of such mountainous labors.

The defects found in it are that it only lasts six months and that it only deals with secondary products. With the exception of automobiles, the leading products of the contracting countries are not to be found in the treaty. There is no mention of German machinery, chemical or metallurgical goods and very little of French wines.

Rare Homes!

One Block West of Sixteenth and Irving

On the Edge of Rock Creek Park

WHEN you think of home, you think of accessibility—and beautiful surroundings. You wonder how long it will take you to get downtown. How far you will be from a car line and bus service. How near you will be to places of amusement. How close you are to shops, markets, grocery stores. You want an in-town location—because, after all, what is home if you must be hidden away far from everything, inconvenient to you and inaccessible to your friends.

Beyond that, your home must be in beautiful surroundings. THAT, you MUST have. And—we don't blame you.

Here on Irving Street are a few homes that offer you all that—and much more. Close to everything. 12 to 15 minutes from the heart of the downtown section—less by auto. Little over a block from 16th Street—less than that to the Mt. Pleasant car line. Three blocks to 14th Street with its varied shops, its movies, and Arcade Market. Three public schools nearby. A short stroll west leads you into Rock Creek Park, with its winding roadways and rolling hills.

These homes offer you beauty also—the most unusual kind of beauty, both inside and out. A type of architecture that will win you—at first glance. A type of room arrangement that will strike you as being most practical.

All this—at a price within average reach. A price that keen observers of values say is LOW.

terpreted, would support the contention that we were making good progress to our parasitical end. But few wish to believe such a theory.

"Most men believe we have the power to achieve something better in the way of life. What they mean by better varies a great deal, but the effort in that direction is a popular one.

Two City Groups.

"As for the cities, there are two groups: The big cityists and the little cityists. The first believes the city is inevitable and that we must make the best of it; or, that is is desirable and wonderful and should be stimulated and boosted.

"The second believes the big city means a recurrence of the cycles that have written the word 'oblivion' over the graves of innumerable big cities that once flourished.

"Both intend to utilize science either in making the city bigger or smaller, as the case may be. One or another of the so-called sciences is to be invoked, and the general acquiescence in this proposal shows how largely science has come to preside over our destiny.

"By and large, the world believes pretty generally that out of the ministrations of science all ills eventually will disappear. Yet science has not only begun at the wrong end, but has been isolated from the one human element that can make it truly the servant of men. What name can we give to that element? Suppose for the moment we call it 'sancity.'

"But what chance has sanctity today? Do the courses in city planning mention it? Is it heard in the halls of the schools of architecture? No. Science has usurped the throne. Science has come to be regarded as both the realm and the kingship of life. Things have been put before people until to many it now seems science ultimately may extinguish all that value that man really has won from his experience.

"To those who so think, the one problem in all problems is to bring sancity to the rescue of science."

use of the words "fair market value" rather than the phrase "readily realizable market value," recommended by the association, and it fails to include any definition of what shall be considered as standard of fair market value, as the association had requested.

The association had proposed that obligations received by a vender should not be considered to have a fair market value unless they can be ordinarily disposed of by the taxpayer under ordinary commercial usage at a discount not in excess of 10 per cent. The term "fair market value," lacking explicit definition, remains a vague, intangible property of certain classes of evidence of indebtedness, often totally impossible of determination, and nearly always, in the final analysis, representing no more than a haphazard opinion.

Two types of cases of deferred payment sales will fall into the class here discussed, those in which the first payment is in excess of 25 per cent of the sales price, and those in which the "initial payments," that is the total payments received within the taxable year in which the transaction occurs, exceed 25 per cent of the sale price.

The new regulations further provide that in the sale of land subdivided into lots there shall be reported the measure of profit on the sale of each lot from the time sales begin. The language incorporated into the newly promulgated ruling is as follows:

"Where a tract of land is purchased with a view to dividing it into lots or parcels of ground to be sold as such, the cost or other basis shall be equitably apportioned to the several lots or parcels and made a matter of record on the books of the taxpayer, to the end that any gain derived from the sale of any such lots or parcels which constitute taxable income may be returned as income for the year in which the sale is made. This rule contemplates that there will be a measure of gain or loss on every lot or parcel sold, and not that the capital in the entire tract shall be extinguished before any taxable income shall be returned.

"The sale of each lot or parcel will be treated as a separate transaction, and gain or loss computed accordingly."

Entry of the National Association of Real Estate Boards into active work for modification of income tax regulations was occasioned by the crisis which appeared to be precipitated in the business of real estate sale on a time payment basis by a decision of the United States board of tax appeals in the case of B. B. Todd, Inc., (I. B. T. A. 762) in a decision laid down shortly before the present law was framed, in which it was held that there was no authority in the revenue act of 1918 for reporting income on the installment plan. The acts of 1921 and 1924 negatively permitted the use of such an installment plan.

Gains made in the situation in regard to subdivision and sale of real estate as affected by the 1926 income tax law and the ruling so far laid down by the Treasury Department for its administration are summarized by Gen. MacChesney as follows:

1. The installment plan of reporting income has now been affirmatively and retroactively recognized in the statute, thus nullifying the effect of the decision of the board of tax appeals in the case above mentioned.

2. The deferred payment plan in the selling of real estate not on an installment basis continues to be recognized by the Treasury regulations.

Handicaps remaining in the adjustment of tax returns to actual time and amount of receipt of gains he points out as follows:

1. The arbitrary rule in the law that all payments received in the first year following a sale are to be considered as part of the initial payment.

2. Failure to be explicit in the language of the new ruling in regard to the circumstances under which the obligations of purchasers will be considered as having no fair market value.

Difficulties and dangers found in the present wording of the 1926 revenue act itself are pointed out in detail in the joint brief through citations illustrating the trivial circumstances which now determine whether a given sale is entitled to be classified for purposes of tax return as an installment sale.

Examples are as follows:

A lot sold on the very common basis of 20 per cent down and 1 per cent monthly, if sold in July, would be treated as an installment sale if no more was paid thereon prior to the close of the year than called for by the contract, since the total paid would be 25 per cent. Should the customer, however, decide to pay two months' installments in December, the total payment within the year would be 26 per cent, and the sale could not be reported on the installment plan.

Sales made on the same terms prior to July could not be treated as installment sales if all payments had been made as called for by the contracts. If a customer closed a contract on June 30 and made all payments when due, the total received during the year would be 26 per cent, and not entitled to installment classification. If the same customer delayed his last payment one day, making it on January 2, his action would reduce the amount received by the seller in the term of the taxable year so as to throw the sale into the installment classification.

If the plan of sale is such that monthly payments, instead of being applied entirely to the reduction of principal, as in the foregoing examples, are applied first to the payment of interest and then to the reduction of principal, a plan which is in perhaps more general use than the one from which the examples are drawn, the further complications which arise in determining the status of individual sales are self-evident.

The association's counsel points out that the only course open to a subdivider in order that he may be certain of coming within the provisions for reporting his income on the installment plan is to make sales on such terms that the payments called for within the taxable year of sale do not exceed 25 per cent of the selling price, either varying the terms according to the month in which the sale is made or making all sales on terms so low that sales made in the first month of the taxable year will fall within the limit, and then to refuse to accept payment not due. Such a course is manifestly impracticable.

"But of more immediate importance, the brief states, is the fact that the provisions of the 1926 act are retroactive to January 1, 1916, and that the subdividor who has sold property on the installment plan during the past several years is a helpless victim. He has no remedy so far as those years are concerned—not even an impractical one. We are not prepared to express an opinion at this time regarding the right of the commissioner to reopen the cases of taxpayers for years which have been examined and ostensibly closed, but any other tax payer must file amended returns for all years affected. The payments on each contract must be analyzed to determine which contracts are to be treated as installment sales and which are not. The amount of work involved in making such an analysis and classification will in many cases be staggering, and there will immediately accrue to the government millions of dollars of taxes.

"This liability will come about, first, because many sales which

"Am I Not Always His Subordinate?" American General Asks.

TAILOR-MADE STYLES ARE DECREED BY PARIS

British Coal Strike Sends the Cost of Living Upward in French Capital.

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Gen. Pershing, on his visit to Paris, called at the city residence of Marshal Foch, only to find the former commander-in-chief of the allied armies was at his country home, the chateau de Morlaix, in Brittany.

"By Jove," Pershing is quoted as having exclaimed, "it won't ever be said that I came to France and failed to see Marshal Foch."

"The marshal might be informed of your desire," Foch's aid-de-camp suggested to Pershing.

"Yes, and perhaps bother the marshal and have him come to Paris," interrupted Pershing. "I shall not permit that. It is up to me to call on Marshal Foch. Am I not always his subordinate?"

Gen. Pershing took the next train for Brittany, where he passed two days with the marshal before sailing from Cherboug.

* * * *

The coal miners' strike in England has contributed to the increase in the cost of living in Paris, partly because the British have had to import coal from the continent to keep their chimney-pots smoking. French coal has risen 43 per cent in price since the first of January. Higher coal has meant higher prices for everything else, for it has increased the cost of manufacturing aand of transportation.

With the coming of September the price of gas, which almost every Paris household utilizes for cooking or lighting, or both, was boosted 13 per cent. The gas companies blamed it on the cost of coal.

* * * *

Dresses in heavy tweed and cloth for autumn wear and winter ensembles trimmed with fur are to be seen in the windows of dressmakers. Straight tailor-mades rule again this year with velvet predominating as material used. The skirts are a little longer than in 1925.

"Slim as you like, but a little more length on the skirts," seems to have been the motto of the designers.

An attempt is being made to bring back the picture hat, not quite as large and decorative as formerly, but still a picture hat. It is generally made of velvet or felt and is trimmed with feathers, flowers or ribbon. Small felt hats with draped and ribbon-trimmed crowns are worn with tailormades. A felt hat, designers say, is at home with any dress.

Spanish matadors dodging empty wine bottles instead of the sharp horns of bulls furnished entertainment at the Frejus arena, near St. Rafael, to a large number of spectators, who had gone there to witness what had been advertised as a bull fight.

Neitther bulls nor matadors seemed to know anything about the game.

Finally, some of the spectators attempted to get some amusement for their money and sent a fusillade of bottles at the fighters, and the bulls.

Springfield Armory Makes Progress in Changes on 1903 Bolt and Barrel.

Progress is being made at Springfield Armory, Mass., in the experimental modification of the bolt and barrel of the model 1903 service rifle. In the model bolt recently completed the extractor tongue groove has been made shallower and has been moved back from the face of the bolt.

It now is proposed to build up the breechface of the barrel to form two sections of truncated cones with a view to giving better support to the base of the cartridge.

Experiments with set triggers also are being continued. Two types are under consideration, the Swiss, and a device submitted by First Lieut. George A. Woody, ordnance department.

The device of Lieut. Woody has many advantages and appears promising. The chief disadvantage with the present design is that cocking will not release the set trigger mechanism if it is set before cocking.

Manufacture of 12 improved bolts of an experimental type for the United States rifle, caliber .22, model 1922, is nearing completion. The new bolts are believed to be more positive in functioning and should be easier to make.

Experiments with stainless steel in the manufacture of certain parts of small arms show considerable progress. Three barrels for the United States rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and six for the United States rifle, caliber .22, made of stainless steel, now are undergoing tests.

The rifles were fired and set aside without cleaning. After two weeks there was no evidence of corrosion.

Many experiments with various types of steel also are being made with machine-gun and pistol barrels. As in the case of certain parts of artillery, manufacture of rifle and pistol barrels of such material offers problems that will have to be overcome.

Aside from the consideration of availability in quantities in times of emergency, stainless steel is more difficult to machine than ordinary steel.

LAWS TO COMMAND SCOUT BATTLESHIPS

Rear Admiral George W. Laws, who has been on duty at the Navy Department in the operations office since his return some time ago from duty as commandant at Cavite, P. I., will be assigned to command the battleships of the scouting fleet, a place that has been vacant since the transfer of Rear Admiral Carl T. Vogelgesang to command of the light cruiser divisions of that fleet.

Capt. Roscoe C. Davis, now on duty in bureau of engineering, Navy Department, will be assigned to duty as inspector of engineering material at Philadelphia. Commander John M. Schelling has been ordered detached from navy yard, Mare Island, Calif., and to duty as executive officer of the U. S. S. Medusa, relieving Comdr. Allis Lando, who will go to duty at that yard.

Commander Ezra G. Allen, who goes to duty as executive officer of the U. S. S. Pittsburgh, has been relieved in the planning division of the bureau of navigation by Commander Ralph A. Koch, formerly in command of destroyer division 36.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS' SONS ELECT COMMANDER

Maj. J. F. Johnson Is Chosen Head of Camp 305; Other Officers Named.

The Sons of Confederate Veterans, camp 305, Washington, meeting Tuesday at the Confederate Memorial home, elected Maj. J. F. Johnson, commander, and these other officers: John A. Chumbley, adjutant; Hugh Brewster, treasurer; J. E. Jones, first lieutenant; Henton Gordon, second lieutenant; W. L. Wilkerson, quartermaster; C. P. Clark, surgeon; Dr. W. T. Thom, historian; R. L. Rogers, color sergeant, and the Rev. John E. Briggs, chaplain.

Past Commander E. O. Pillow notified the camp he had received his commission from the commander in chief designating him as divisional commander for the division of the District of Columbia and Maryland. Commander Pillow will endeavor to organize several camps throughout Maryland during the coming year.

Maj. E. W. R. Ewing, historian in chief of the S. C. V., spoke of the progress made at the battlefield at Manassas. An association is endeavoring to preserve this historic field and to have suitable markers erected designating the position of the Union and Confederate armies, and showing the spot that Stonewall Jackson was standing on when he received his title as "Stonewall."

John A. Chumbley, the judge advocate in chief of the S. C. V., spoke about the work he expects to carry on, and outlined the plans of the next reunion which will be held in Tampa, Fla., on April 5 to 7, 1927. The camp expects to have some enjoyable entertainments during the winter and is planning a large delegation to go to Florida next spring.

TEST OF PLANES IN SHIP LANDINGS HELD SUCCESS

DESCEND IN RECORD TIME

Reports have been received by the naval bureau of aeronautics, of practices carried on in the battle fleet on the Pacific coast, to determine at what speed a squadron of planes could be operated from the aircraft-carrier Langley and to ascertain the average maximum speed of landings to be expected on board.

On the morning of the day the operations were conducted, one division of VF planes made 68 landings on the Langley, and in the afternoon a second division made 59 landings, a total of 127 for the day. In spite of the fact that there was much pitch to the ship on account of heavy seas, the landings, with few exceptions, were very accurate, and the percentage of injuries to material was lower than at any time since the squadron has operated from the Langley.

The Curtiss Hawk was used also in these operations, and Lieuts. John D. Price and George L. Compo made five landings on board the ship. This is the first time this plane has been used under strictly service conditions, and it is reported that it was remarkably easy to maneuver in reaching the ship's landing-deck.

As a result of these practices, VF squadron 1, composed of 12 planes, later was enabled to land on the Langley with great rapidity when heavy mist prevailed. The mist was almost equal to a fog, and the radio plane of the squadron was notified to direct all planes to return to the ship. The landing-deck was very slippery, but, in spite of these conditions, all planes landed in excellent condition, except one, which damaged its landing-gear. The landings all were made within a period of 21 minutes.

A Home Beautiful at

4407 Sixteenth Street N.W.

(Between Webster and Allison)

THE sturdiness of Gibralter. As artistic as your most beautiful dream castle.

The very last word in home construction of ultra-modern design. Not one point was overlooked to insure life-long stability. When this home was built, it was to be our ideal of perfect workmanship and it was superintended with supreme conscientiousness, brick by brick. The result speaks for itself. For this is a near-mansion of which anyone might well be proud.

A few facts will be interesting. It is completely detached, situated on a lot 50 feet by 139 feet. All-brick construction. Exterior architecture which fairly speaks dignity, stateliness, and rare beauty. Spacious center entrance hall. Large living room with large open fireplace. Library or music conservatory adjoining. Guests' cloak room and lavatory on first floor. Handsome dining and breakfast rooms. One of the brightest kitchens you have ever seen, fully equipped with fixtures of newest design. Up-stairs are five bedrooms (four of them are corner rooms giving exposure on two sides) all large—all with over-sized clothes closets with an average of three windows to the room. Two tiled baths, both with showers, equipped with Standard Sanitary fixtures. Full attic, containing six windows—can be made into an ideal play-place for the kiddies or a delightful den or billiard room.

The beauty of this home extends into the many-windowed basement which is reached by an attractively decorated staircase leading to A MAGNIFICENT BALLROOM! with specially selected maple floor. This room can accomodate many couples—or it can be used nicely for card parties. Adjoining it is a buffet-kitchen, pantry, and ladies' dressing room. And in the basement, away from the ballroom, are the maid's bed and bath rooms and wash room with laundry trays. Fifteen rooms and attic, in all. Deep back yard leading to two-car brick garage on wide alley.

The interior finish is what should be expected in a home such as this. All walls are Sanitas-covered, hand-tinted and decorated most pleasingly. Quartered-oak floors. Tastefully designed electric fixtures. Front porch, extending across front of house and part-way around both sides. Back porch, too.

The woman who will preside over this home will find that, in spite of its size, the rooms are so wisely planned and conveniently arranged that it will require less supervision and domestics than most any home of this proportion.

This is THE home of homes. It is detail-perfect and considered a model of beauty. It's location is ideal and it is completely surrounded by homes of the same price and higher—thus insuring its investment possibilities. It will be to your decided advantage to arrange an inspection at your earliest opportunity for this may be the very home you've sought—and there are no more like it.

PERSONNEL CHANGED AT GUANTANAMO BAY

In accordance with the policy of changing the personnel of the marine force about every six months at naval station, Guantanamo bay, Cuba, the First battalion of the Fifth regiment consisting of headquarters, Seventeenth, Twenty-third, Forty-ninth and Sixty-sixth companies, under command of Maj. H. C. Pierce, left that place September 14 on board the U. S. S. Chaumont for station at Quantico. The headquarters, Eighteenth, Fifty-first and Seventy-seventh companies of the Second battalion of that regiment, under command of Maj. H. G. Bartlett, is under orders to proceed from Quantico about September 27 to Guantanamo for duty. The Forty-third company of the Second battalion will remain on duty at the Sesquicentennial exposition at Philadelphia.

First Lieut. Francis B. Reed, who has been on leave in Massachusetts and under orders to marine corps base, San Diego, Calif., has tendered his resignation to take effect October 1, and it will be accepted.

Second Lieut. John C. Donohue, jr., became due for promotion as a result of the death of First Lieut. H. J. Norton, September 13.

DUNBAR WILL ATTEND MEDICAL CONVENTION

Capt. Arthur W. Dunbar, medical corps, assistant chief of bureau of medicine and surgery, will represent the medical department of the navy at the annual meeting of the American Hospital association in Atlantic City, September 26, 27 and 28.

Lieut. Harrison L. Wyatt, medical corps, attached to the Naval hospital at Mare island, California, has been directed to take a course at the University of California medical school, San Francisco.

Lieut. (junior grade) James F. Hays has qualified for promotion to the rank of lientenant in the navy medical corps; Lieut. Fred D. Heegler, recently attached to the naval training station at San Diego, Calif., has resigned from the navy medical corps.

Changes in stations and duties of medical officers will be made as follows: Commander James A. Randall, from naval supply depot, Brooklyn, to Naval hospital, Annapolis; Commander Richard A. Warner, from that hospital to duty with the American naval mission in Brazil, and Commander Percival S. Rossiter, from that mission to the supply depot at Brooklyn.

WAR OFFICE STUDIES WARRANT DIRECTORY

Efforts to Be Made to Have Names Written Into the Registers.

Consideration has been given for some time in the War Department to the matter of including the names of warrant officers to the Army List and Directory and in the Army Register. The names of warrant officers of the navy are given in the corresponding navy publications. The acute shortage of funds allotted for printing has prevented, up to now, the listing of army warrant officers. It is understood, however, efforts will be made to get the names into the publications.

The need for including warrant officers became apparent when in February, 1923, and July, 1925, they published a list and directory at their own expense and copies were requested by and sent to virtually all army organizations.

Warrant officers have a status somewhat similar to that of commissioned officers. They rank next below second lieutenants, have the allowances of officers of that grade and are governed by the same retirement laws.

26 ARMY ENLISTED MEN ARE MADE LIEUTENANTS

Accept Commissions Upon Showing Qualifications in Examinations.

PROMOTIONS IN GRADES

Of the enlisted men examined some time ago and found qualified for appointment as second lieutenants in the army, 26 have accepted appointments and have been commissioned. This leaves a total of 178 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant.

The following have been promoted in the army to the next higher grades, respectively: Lieut. Col. Lucius C. Bennett, infantry; Maj. Joseph M. Cummings, infantry, and Capt. Robert R. Neyland, jr., corps of engineers.

These promotions leave the following as senior in their grades and next due for promotion on occurrence of vacancies: Lieut. Col. John E. Morris, infantry; Maj. Thomas C. Musgrave, infantry, and Capt. William M. Hoge, jr., corps of engineers.

There are two vacancies in the grade of captain, to which First Lieuts. Russell R. Meredith, air corps, and James I. Wilson, ordnance department, are entitled. When these vacancies are filled, First Lieut. Harold A. Cooney, field artillery, will be senior in his grade.

Second Lieuts. Edward J. Walsh, infantry, and Haydn P. Roberts, signal corps, have been promoted to first lieutenant. Three vacancies remain in the latter grade, to which Second Lieuts. Alan R. Rush, infantry, and Clifford C. Duell and Lauren B. Hitchcock, field artillery, are entitled. When they are promoted, Second Lieut. Thomas A. Bottomley, infantry, will remain as senior in his grade.

ARMY WILL REPLACE WAR PERIOD MOTORS

Steps have been initiated by the quartermaster general of the army looking eventually to complete replacement of all old passenger-carrying motor vehicles of the 1917-1918 models now in service, and instructions have been issued to depot storage centers and operating units in the field to make at once a mechanical inspection of all wartime motor equipment and to prepare an itemized statement indicating the approximate cost of repairs considered necessary.

Army replacement schedules call for new cars at the rate of 33 1-3 per cent for the fiscal years 1927, 1928 and 1929, while for 1930 and thereafter the replacement percentage is 16 2-3.

Makes You the Owner

$500 puts you in possession of this attractive little home, and from then on you make very low monthly payments. Less, probably, than the rent you're paying now.

Naturally, we can't begin to do justice to the house itself in a picture. It's exterior is really most attractive when you see it first hand. And it's interior is nothing short of delightful. It has handsome fittings throughout—walls in living and dining rooms are stippled in very high-class fashion—light, cheerful bedrooms, tile bath—big porch and good sized back yard—and many other attractive features.

Our terms on this house are exceedingly low—within easy reach of the average purse—and the total price is much lower than you'd expect, too.

In a new section that's growing fast. One that offers wonderful possibilities from an investment standpoint. The house you buy here today will be worth considerably more a year from today. Public school, good neighborhood, stores and car and bus service are all handy.

The sample house is ready for inspection now. Before buying any medium sized home of similar construction—be sure to see these. A comparison with other values will convince you that you want to live here.

Location: 18th St. N.E., between Newton and Otis Sts.

Go out Michigan Ave. past Catholic University to Monroe St. and turn left at 18th, one block to Newton. Or take Brookland car to 12th and Newton and walk east. Sample house open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Brookland bus runs to 18th and Monroe Sts. N.E.—one block from house.

have been treated as installment sales heretofore are now put outside of that category, with a consequent immediate taxation of the entire profit; and second, because the tax rates have since 1918 been on a constantly decreasing scale, so that profits which are now to be considered as being earned in earlier years will be taxed at higher rates than if they were to be considered as realized in later years.

"As to the first of these points, the effect is only that the taxpayer will be forced to pay the tax sooner than he otherwise would—but that will be considered a sufficient objection. As to the second point, however, the effect is that the tax is to be computed at higher rates than would otherwise apply—and this means an absolute and irretrievable outlay of money by the taxpayer.

"In addition to the tax liability there will be a large interest burden."

DOUGHERTY'S HOME GOES DOWN IN MUSIC

Society Note in Post Interests Commissioner's Relatives to Write Song.

A note in the society column of a recent issue of The Post described Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty, wife of the commissioner, as esconced "quiet as a mouse" in a modest home in Jenifer street. And then came the newspaper stories about the commissioner's Sunday morning excursions about his neighborhood, rounding up trash and stowing it in rubbish containers.

Mr. Dougherty last week received by mail a song, by his brother-in-law, Geoffrey O'Hara. It was illustrated with a drawing by Charles M. Cogswell, his cousin, a Boston architect. The words were as follows:

In Jenifer street,
Where commissioners meet;
There's a modest little house to rest weary feet
When the day's work is done.

It's quiet as a mouse in Jenifer street;
And, Oh! what a treat
When relatives meet;
And the garbage on the street
Is always kept so neat
In Jenifer street, Washington.

U. S. WEATHER JOBS FOR HIGH SCHOOL BOYS

Youths With Year in Physics Eligible for Tests Leading to Posts.

High school boys may become weather wizards, according to announcement of United States civil service commission officials.

Youths at least 18 years old, who have had a minimum of one year in high school physics or one semester in college, are offered an opportunity by the commission to be examined for positions of junior observers in meteorology for employment in weather stations throughout the country.

Commission officials state there is urgent need for eligibles and that those who qualify have excellent opportunities for appointment. In addition to appointments for the usual weather bureau service, it is expected there will be many appointments in connection with furnishing weather reports and warnings for aviators. Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the commission.

Honor for Youngest Veteran of Civil War

An appropriation of $25 was voted to the District police and firemen's relief fund. Those received as members of the post were James H. Rees, who served in the 312th machine gun battalion during the world war, and Frank M. Smith, who served in Cuba with the First D. C. volunteers, and in the Philippines with the Eighth field artillery. The post will hold its fall banquet October 25.

American Legion

The installation of officers of George Washington Post No. 1, the American Legion, will take place Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the post headquarters 1829 I street northwest. Retiring Commander J. J. Murphy, is returning from the West to preside at the meeting and relinquish the office to his successor.

The following officers will be installed: Commander Gilbert T. Rude; first vice commander, Henry W. Longfellow; second vice commander, James P. Cromwell; third vice commander, Bernard C. McGee; quartermaster, H. J. Rath; sergeant-at-arms, J. W. Brasheare, jr.; master-at-arms, J. J. Owen; surgeon Dr. H. M. Darnall; historian, Past Commander Howard S. Fisk; color bearers, H. J. Rath and William Lawler.

The Philadelphia convention committee of the post has adopted the official American cap and members attending the convention will wear this type of head gear in the big parade Tuesday, October 12 in the Quaker City. Orders for the caps are being filed with Past Commander Howard S. Fisk, chairman of the committee. The other members of the committee are Past Commander Wallace Streater and Nathan J. Cosel. The committee is "rounding up" members of the post and hopes to have a large representation from the pioneer post march behind the post colors in the parade.

Vincent B. Costello Post.

Plans for a barbecue at Giesboro point, September 30, will be discussed at a meeting Tuesday night of the Vincent B. Costello post of the American Legion, in the board room of the District building. Commander William Mitchell also will tell of his plans to raise the membership of the post from 511 to 1,000.

New committees announced by Commander Mitchell follow: Resolutions, Daniel J. Donovan, chairman, Jacob N. Hapler, Irving C. Moller, Richard A. O'Brien and M. C. Strahorn; entertainment, Kin Carroll, chairman, Rev. Francis J. Hurney, Thomas J. Murray, Frank L. Gibson and John C. Chevalier; athletics, Harvey L. Miller, chairman, Harold F. Robley R. Evans Post.

The regular semimonthly meeting of the Robley D. Evans Post No. 4 was held in the clubrooms on Thursday evening. The business transacted was largely routine, but the meeting was made especially interesting by the presence of our members from the U. S. S. Mayflower, which recently returned from New England.

A Hallowe'en masquerade and dance will be given jointly by the post and the Eight and Forty club in the ballroom of the Raleigh hotel on October 30, 1926. Elaborate preparations are under way.

GEORGETOWN OPENS WITH NEW FACILITIES AND FULL CLASSES

Added Senior Dormitory and Remodeled North Hall Make Room for Students.

TERM BEGINS WEDNESDAY; ENROLLMENT INCREASES

Cardinal O'Connell Guest at College—Many Changes in Faculty Are Registered.

Georgetown college will begin its fall term Wednesday under auspicious circumstances, all registration records at the Hilltop having been broken during the past week.

Walter J. O'Connor, registrar at the college, stated that an enrollment of 850 students is expected before the opening date. Of this number, 350 are already registered as freshmen, or 150 in excess of last year's class. It is possible that the incoming class will approximate 375 members before the registrations close.

This year's banner crop of students was made possible by the new senior dormitory, which, with the remodeling of the old North building, adds eight lecture halls to relieve the congested condition at the Hilltop. It was necessary to delay the opening of the term a week to complete the renovation of the older building. Except for a few minor details, this work has been completed and the building will be ready for occupancy Wednesday without interruption to classes. It contains four lecture halls, the same number as the new structure.

President Charles W. Lyons, S. J., is arranging formal dedicatory exercises to which the public will be invited. The date will be set soon. Meanwhile, alumni are showing considerable interest in the new building, which is one of the finest educational structures in the city. Its cost was approximately $500,000.

A number of new faces will be seen among the Hilltop faculty, most of whom already have returned for the new term. New faculty members, with their subjects are: Rev. Joseph S. Dinneen, S. J., professor of philosophy and spiritual counsellor; Rev. Hugh A. Gaynor, S. J., professor of humanities; Rev. Robert H. Johnson, S. J., professor of rhetoric; Rev. James I. Moakley, S. J., professor of sociology and ethics; Rev. Richard R. Ranken, S. J., lecturer in the graduate school; Rev. Edward T. Farrell, S. J., professor of psychology; Rev. Thomas D. Barry, S. J., professor of mathematics; Rev. Laurence C. Gorman, S. J., professor of chemistry; Rev. Gustavus J. Dumas, S. J., professor of French and humanities; Rev. Thomas Murray, S. J., professor of mathematics. A recent arrival was Rev. Peter V. Masterson, S. J., head of the history department, who has been absent a year pursuing studies at Prague.

While the authorities at the college have been busily engaged in preparing for the opening, two important events occurred during the past week. William Cardinel O'Connell, of Boston, who was here attending the annual meeting of the Catholic hierarchy, was a guest at the college Tuesday afternoon. The following day about 250 members of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry, who have been holding their convention in Washington, were guests of the Georgetown faculty at luncheon. The Rev. George L. Coyle, S. J., head of the department of chemistry at Georgetown has been taking an active part in the convention proceedings.

The selection of the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., of Georgetown, to head the welfare work of the Catholic Church in Russia and the Near East, made at the sessions of the Catholic hierarchy, entails upon him a vast amount of work. His former services in Russia under the American relief mission and later as director of papal relief fits Father Walsh to get the utmost out of his extensive program which calls for the consolidation of all Catholic societies doing such work into the Catholic Near East Welfare association.

AMERICAN U. DEAN AND REGISTRAR

DR. EDWARD T. DEVINE

New dean of the graduate school of American university, and his daughter, Miss Ruth Devine, who is registrar of the Graduate School and School of Political Sciences.

American U. to Open All Departments This Week

Dr. Devine, New Dean, to Have Charge of Graduate School—Freshman Class of 60 Expected in College—Chancellor to Hold Reception.

With a new dean, Dr. Edward T. Devine, of New York city, in charge of the reorganized graduate school, and registration increased in all departments, American university will open its scholastic year tomorrow, both on the campus, Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues, and the downtown school, 1901-1907 F street. During the week several receptions and college functions will take place, opening the term and bringing together the faculty and student body.

At the college of liberal arts early registration pointed to a group of new students numbering between 80 and 90, with a freshman class of 60, and the graduate school and school of political sciences at the downtown location gave promise of exceeding enrollment of last year, which was more than 200.

Opening exercises for the college will be held Wednesday morning at 10:15 o'clock in Hurst hall on the campus, when the principal address will be delivered by David A. Robertson, associate director of the American council on education.

Dr. Devine, formerly a member of the United States coal commission, professor of social economy at Columbia university, director of the New York school of philanthropy and lecturer of nation-wide experience, arrived during the week to take charge of the graduate school, of which he is the new dean. With him came his daughter, Miss Ruth Devine, who is to be associated with him, as registrar of the graduate school and school of political sciences. She will also teach languages in the latter school.

Registration opens formally at the college tomorrow afternoon, and will continue through Tuesday.

Tuesday night, Dr. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of the university, and Mrs. Clark will hold a reception for the faculty at the chancellor's home on the campus.

Opening exercises Wednesday morning will start with the academic procession. The Rev. George L. Farnham, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational church will deliver the invocation. Scripture reading and prayer will be by the Rev. Dr. William A. Lambeth, Mt. Vernon Place M. E. Church South. An address of welcome to the student body and faculty will be by Chancellor Clark. Dean George B. Woods, of the college, will read the responsive reading, and later present the new students of the college. Music will be by Mrs. Roland H. Rowe, vocal solo, and Herman R. Hoffman, of the United States Marine band, violin solo. The benediction will be by the Rev. Joseph T. Herson, pastor of Hamline M. E. church.

The students will join in a college "student frolic" Wednesday night in the women's residence hall.

Friday night has been scheduled for the college reception for both students and faculty, and on Saturday night there will be held a "big brother and big sister" party by the students, the program for which is in charge of Jacob Snyder and Miss Helen Roher.

The students will all undergo psychological examinations beginning Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and class work will start Thursday morning at 8 o'clock.

Football practice opened Wednesday in charge of Coach G. B. Springston, who hopes for a much stronger team this year, with return of the entire team last year, and addition of several promising new players of experience. Temporary quarters are provided for the team in Hurst hall, but work on the new gymnasium is being rushed, and it is expected the shower rooms and lockers will be ready for use sometime this week.

The women's guild of the university has presented a new set of rugs for the large parlor floor in the Women's Residence hall, which is the social center for the university.

FRANKLIN UNIVERSITY LECTURE TOMORROW

Tomorrow at 5:30 p. m. Edwin C. Bosworth, dean of the school of accountancy and business administration, will give the opening lecture to the first section of the freshman class at Benjamin Franklin university. In the new class are five scholarship students from Washington High schools: Benjamin A. P. Doerher, Central; Rose Flotkick, Business; Norman C. Homiller, Eastern; Augusta Freeman, McKinley Manual Training, and Edward A. Aaronson, Western.

The selections were made in accordance with the provisions of the Pace Scholarship foundation, the purpose of which is to encourage sound academic and technical preparation for the practice of accountancy and for executive responsibilities in the administration of organized business. In presenting the scholarships, character, scholarship and aptitude were the factors considered.

Announcement also is made of the opening of the second section of the freshman class, evening department, October 4. On this date the day department also will open. Many applications for matriculation are being received from Southern States.

CATHOLIC U. BEGINS NEW TERM TUESDAY WITH ENROLLMENT

HIGH MASS TO MARK FORMAL 1926 OPENING

Improvements to Greet Men as They Go to Their First Classes Wednesday.

The Catholic university will open for registration Tuesday at 8 a. m. Classes will begin Wednesday. It is expected adoption of a new plan, which obliged all old students to make out their courses of study before departing in June, will serve to a great extent to eliminate confusion usual the opening day.

The plan was facilitated further by bringing to the university last week all new students to permit them to register and select their courses ahead of registration day.

There is an increase in students this year. The undergraduate registration already has reached 500. Graduate students will number 300. In Trinity college and Sisters college more than 500 students have registered. A considerable increase in enrollment also is reported in the twenty religious houses of study connected with the university. The latest addition to these houses is that of the Carmelite fathers, of Englewood, N. J.

The formal opening of the academic year will be next Sunday, when solemn high mass of the Holy Ghost will be celebrated in the university gymnasium at 10:30 a. m. by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. George A. Dougherty, D. D., vice rector.

All to Take Part.

The academic procession, in which all students and the faculty will take part, will leave Caldwell hall at 10:15 and move to the gymnasium. The discourse will be delivered by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward A. Pace, D. D., vice rector in academics.

During the summer months many improvements have been made. Caldwell hall has been repointed and painted, the campus roads resurfaced and trees, flowers and shrubbery trimmed.

Accommodations have been prepared for 85 additional students and the total of 400 available rooms have been taken. Four new large classrooms have been opened and generous space has been provided in the new auditorium basement for graduate work in chemistry.

The quarters of the department of electrical engineering, the school of architecture and the department of civil engineering have been enlarged and improved.

The teaching staff numbers 115. Among the new appointments are Dr. Fulton J. Sheen, apologetics; Dr. Francesco Lucidi, moral theology; Dr. Joseph T. Barron, philosophy; Brendan Browne, civil law; Mr. Francis L. Talbott, physics; Eugene R. Mittinger, English literature, and the Rev. August Bolduc, Semitic languages.

Maloney Building Ready.

The new Maloney chemical auditorium is ready. It will serve as a hall for public lectures and conferences. It seats 600 and is equipped for film and stereopticon exhibitions. Exteriorly the building measures 90 by 50 feet, an excellent specimen of Collegiate Gothic, and completes the chemical laboratory. It is the gift of Martin Maloney, of Philadelphia.

The new library, erected through the munificence of John K. Mullen, of Denver, is under roof and the exterior completed. It will be finished in a few months. This building will have stackage for 1,000,000 volumes and its main reading room will accommodate 300 persons. The main corridor on the first floor will be ornamented with 28 columns of Italian marble.

The crypt of the national shrine of the Immaculate Conception now is ready for use, although some ornament still is lacking. Recently the first of the fifteen larger Venetian mosaics was set in place over the chapel in the tabernacle. It represents the Good Shepherd, seated between lambs, while angels devoutly offer Him adoration.

Three fine paintings recently have been acquired by the university. They are a life-size portrait of the late Archbishop Williams, of Boston, by De Henwood; a large Saint Jerome by an unknown master of the Bologna school, and a valuable copy of Tintorretto painting his dead daughter, obtained in South America, and donated by Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia.

Dr. Romain Butin, S. M., professor of Hebrew and custodian of the museum, has leave of absence for a year to act as director of the American School of Oriental Research, Jerusalem. His classes will be conducted by the Rev. August Bolduc.

15th Century Books In New York Library

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Books which vie with the finest paintings as gems of art are included in the Spencer collection now in the public library here.

They date from the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, being principally the work of Italian and French craftsmen.

Profusely illustrated and illumined, the volumes contain paintings in miniature with a blend of coloring that makes the present popular style of book appear a very degenerate offspring.

Nymph Is Sought For Kennedy Play

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Margaret Kennedy is having a hard time finding the nymph for her dramatization of her novel, "The Constant Nymph," which is to be produced in London this autumn. More than 200 actresses who want to play the role of Tessa have been interviewed by Miss Kennedy.

K. C. LAW FACULTY DIVIDES FRESHMAN CLASS FOR COURSE

Enrollment Increase Prompts Move to Provide Smaller Groups for Lectures.

NEW HARMONY COURSE FOR EVENING CLASSES

Alexander Henneman, Director of Music at Sisters' College, to Head Department.

The September meeting of the educational committee of the Knights of Columbus of the District of Columbia was held last Monday night. New members of the committee who appeared for the first time were State Deputy Charles W. Darr and State Treasurer John B. McGinley.

At its meeting on Wednesday night the law faculty decided, in view of the very satisfactory enrollment, to start a new section of the freshman law class, to begin after 6 o'clock. It was announced as the policy of the school to divide the classes up into sections rather than to lecture to large classes.

Prof. William D. Harris has just returned to Washington after a honeymoon motor trip through New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. The bride was Miss Mary Louise McBride, of Washington, formerly of Texas. The happy couple made a short visit at the home of Mr. Harris' parents in Dayton, Ohio. The couple will live at 1901 Nineteenth street.

New Course in Harmony.

Alexander Henneman, director of the department of music at the Sisters college, Catholic university, will give a course in harmony in the evening school this year. This course will begin with the rudiments, and by progressive training and development of hearing, will train the student to express himself through musical composition. This course, based on musical hearing, will be of value to instrumentalists and to singers. Miss Dorothy Henneman will also teach in the music department. Miss Henneman holds a certificate in the progressive series of piano lessons.

Mrs. J. B. Waters, who organized and conducted the Glee club last year, will give classes in violin, piano and voice in the evening school this year.

The Santa Maria club met for a social evening last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. O'Hara in Brookland. Plans were discussed for the activities of the coming year.

A recent addition to the faculty is William McKee, who will teach English history. Mr. McKee holds a degree from Wooster college and was formerly a first lieutenant in the marine corps. Mr. McKee comes with teaching experience gained at the Staunton Military academy.

Law Classes Opened.

Late afternoon classes at the school of law opened last Wednesday. Fully 600 students have been enrolled in both morning and afternoon courses to date, and the assistant dean, Hugh J. Fegan, believes the registration eventually will total approximately 700. With the reopening of the morning classes next Wednesday the law school will be in full swing.

Law students took a personal interest in at least one congressional primary fight last week, regardless of politics. Representative William P. Connery, jr., who graduated last June from Georgetown, was renominated in the Eleventh district of Massachusetts. Mr. Connery entered Georgetown the same year he entered Congress, two terms ago. As a former member of musical comedy shows and a comedian in vaudeville, he was always a "star" at various class celebrations. Spanish Becoming Popular Language

That Spanish is becoming one of the most important languages is evident from the fact that nearly all educational institutions have improved their courses in this language. The Spanish School of Washington has improved its curriculum and now offers nearly every desirable subject in Spanish literature, conversation, commerce and stenography.

Special courses have been prepared for beginners that have proved exceptionally successful. Many students have learned to speak Spanish fluently in less than five months by using the conversational methods perfected by the school.

The school will open its doors tomorrow for its sixteenth year. Government clerks constituted a large quota of applicants for entrance last week.

SUPREME COURT UNIQUE IN DISTRICT, SAYS JURIST

Functions as State and Federal Unit, Siddons Writes in Law Review.

GIVES HISTORY OF CASES

An article of unusual interest to members of the bar and to the public, "The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Its Jurisdiction and Powers," by Justice Frederick L. Siddons, is featured this month in the forthcoming number of the National University Law Review. The work is regarded as important from an historical, as well as a legal standpoint.

It shows the Supreme court not only is one of original jurisdiction, but is unique in that it possesses the normal and usual jurisdiction and powers of a State court as well as those of the Federal district courts. In addition, Justice Siddons points out, the court is intrusted with and exercises powers that are not possessed by any other trial court in the country.

The court is clothed with executive power in granting extradition and has powers that are, in their essence, legislative. In making this point the author points to the power conferred on the court to review the findings and determinations of the public utilities commission of the District of Columbia, and in doing so, to establish rates which the public utilities may be permitted to charge for services of various kinds.

Copies to Attorneys.

The article, furthermore, gives a survey of important and historical cases that have come before the court for trial and disposal.

Justice Siddons is professor of the law of negotiable instruments and evidence in the National University Law school.

As part of its program of general public service, it is the plan of the school to place a copy of the forthcoming review in the hands of every member of the local bar association.

An event of interest is the announcement by Charles F. Carusi, chancellor of the university, of a series of six lectures on public utilities by N. T. Guernsey, vice president of the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. They will be held in the university auditorium and will be open to the public. The lectures will be held October 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16.

With little more than two weeks before the law school and the school of economics and government open, enrollment forecasts a record attendance.

Dean Charles Pergler, of the school of economics and government, announces the appointment of Bernard Mayo as instructor in English and history.

ODD FELLOWS

This week promises to be an exceptionally big one for the order in this jurisdiction as well as in the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania.

The annual session of the sovereign grand lodge, the head organization with a membership of between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000, will be held in Philadelphia beginning tomorrow morning and continuing until Friday evening. Of unusual interest to Washington members, it is said, will be elevation of Ernest W. Bradford, of this city, to the office of grand sire, an honor which has only come to this jurisdiction three times before, those thus honored being James Gettys, who was grand sire in 1833-35; W. W. Moore, who was grand sire in 1851-53, and Fred D. Stuart, who was grand sire in 1870-72. This jurisdiction for months past has been actively engaged in preparing a welcome to the new grand sire when he returns from the sessions of the sovereign grand lodge and accordingly, a tri-State welcome committee has been organized comprising the jurisdictions of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. The grand officers of the three jurisdictions with the numerous subcommittees have been in conference from time to time on this matter and have completed plans for a great tri-State welcome to the grand sire, which will occur Saturday afternoon. The plans include a great parade on Pennsylvania avenue beginning at 2 o'clock, starting from the Peace monument west of Fifteenth street, thence north on Fifteenth street to New York avenue, thence west on Pennsylvania avenue to Nineteenth street, thence south on Nineteenth street to the Washington auditorium. At 1:25 p. m. the grand sire will arrive at Union station and be received by the reception committee, composed of the grand masters of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, and other high officials and escorted to the Peace monument and placed at the head of the parade.

The parade will consist of six divisions headed by various bands. There will be special features, including floats, &c. The paraders will enter the auditorium where at 4 o'clock a public reception and welcome will be tendered to Grand Sire Bradford. Grand Representative William T. Galliher is to be the master of ceremonies and the program will be as follows: Band, "America;" invocation, the Rev. Hugh T. Stevenson, past grand chaplain of the grand lodge of the District of Columbia; city's welcome to the grand sire, the Hon. Cuno H. Rudolph, chairman, board of commissioners; the order's welcome to the grand sire, by Dr. Henry W. Tippett, grand master of the grand lodge of the District of Columbia; selections by the Washington quartet; address of Grand Master Charles B. Schone, of Maryland; address by Grand Master Edmund H. Allen, of Virginia; vocal selection by a member of the Washington quartet; address by Grand Representative H. Dorsey Etchison, of Maryland; address, the Hon. Ernest W. Bradford; selections by the Washington quartet; benediction. Following the public reception and welcome, a band concert will be given until 6 p. m. by Mithras band, of this city. Followed by a concert by Sol. Minster's orchestra from 6 to 9 o'clock. From 8 to 9 a formal reception will be tendered the grand sire in the Washington auditorium. Beginning at 9 o'clock and lasting until midnight a public ball will be given in the auditorium.

Many delegations are arranging to enter in the parade. Word has been received of acceptance of invitations issued to the high officials of the sovereign grand lodge and of the four living past grand sires, three are expected to be present—Past Grand Sires Lucian J. Eastin, Herbert A. Thompson and John B. Cockrum. Washington lodge, No. 1, of Baltimore, the first and oldest lodge of Odd Fellows, is coming direct from Philadelphia and is expected to prove a sensation in the parade, as it has a corps of 200 members especially costumed in unique dress. Virginia and Maryland plan to show many surprises from their lodges, both subordinate and Rebekah, it is announced.

The District of Columbia hopes to have a large delegation in the parade in Philadelphia on Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Past Grand Master Wilfred E. Lawson has arranged for his Odd Fellows band to leave Wednesday morning at 7:15 o'clock in special cars. Members are urged to go on this trip, especially those who intend to go only for one day.

Identification certificates must be secured in order to obtain the special train for the round-trip to Philadelphia. Certificates may be obtained from Past Grand Master Lawson or the grand secretary, it is stated.

Federal City lodge, No. 20, one of the large lodges of this city, has been preparing to enter a degree team in the contest at the session of the sovereign grand lodge and will exemplify the second degree on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in Lulu temple, at Broad and Spring Garden streets, Philadelphia. Federal City lodge degree team and their officers will leave Union station tomorrow afternoon at 12:50 o'clock. The lodge expects over 100 members to attend session.

Grand Master Henry W. Tippett and Mrs. Tippett and Grand Secretary Harry L. Andersen and Mrs. Andersen expect to leave for the Philadelphia session tomorrow morning, returning to this city Thursday. Virtually all the officers of the grand lodge of the District of Columbia will attend the session, it is announced. Commandant Lemuel H. Windsor, of Canton Washington, No. 1, patriarchs militant, states that he will take a large number of the chevaliers to Philadelphia and that the Washington Canton will make a big showing in the parade. His entire staff of officers will accompany him.

The grand master has called a special meeting of all ushers appointed by the various lodges for the auditorium reception to meet with him on Thursday evening, when he will assign the special work for that evening. Subordinate lodges are requested to notify all appointees from their respective lodges to meet with the grand master on Thursday evening, in I. O. O. F. temple at 8 o'clock.

Grand Representative John H. Wood has issued a call for a meeting of all subordinate lodge instructors on Wednesday evening, September 29.

Word has been received from the Philadelphia committee on arrangements that changes in the week's program has been necessitated on account of conditions incident to the Dempsey-Tunney fight. The grand decoration of chivalry will be conferred and the grand military and general ball held in the American Academy of Music, Broad and Locust streets, on Thursday, instead of at the auditorium of the Sesquicentennial exposition.

Members of the order in the District of Columbia are advised that Washington headquarters in Philadelphia during the session of the sovereign grand lodge will be at Central Odd Fellows hall, room B, Sixteenth and Oxford streets. All members participating in the parade are requested to report at these headquarters Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

THE REBEKAHS.

Much interest is being manifested, it is said, by members of Martha Washington lodge, No. 3, in arranging their share in the homecoming parade in honor of the grand sire. The committee reports that an official float carrying "Martha Washington" in costume and accompanied by some of her friends, also in costume, will be specially attractive. There will also be a float bearing "Columbia" and the American flag, and announcement is made that there will be ample room on this float for all ladies of this lodge who desire to be a part of the great event.

The degree staff of Dorcas lodge, No. 4, under the direction of S. N. Mallory, degree director, will leave for Philadelphia on the 12:50 train tomorrow afternoon over the Pennsylvania railroad. This staff is scheduled to exemplify the Rebekah degree at 3 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, in Lulu temple, Spring, Garden and North Broad streets. The staff will also take part in the grand parade on Wednesday afternoon and return to Washington in time to participate in the parade in this city on Saturday afternoon in honor of Gen. Ernest W. Bradford, who is a member of Dorcas lodge.

WOMAN'S BENEFIT ASSOCIATION

Liberty union, No. 6, will hold its meeting tomorrow evening at 8, Pythian temple. Mrs. Helen Luckett, commander, will preside. This is the beginning of the season's activities and all members are urged to be present. Plans will be discussed for the entertainment of the supreme commander, Miss Bina M. West, when she visits the city.

The Alpha Beta Chi Girls club will begin its fall program by meeting on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the W. B. A. office, McGill building. Miss Muriel Evans, president, will preside. Reports will be presented on the recent theater party and other summer activities. Plans for dramatic work will be completed. All members of the Women's Benefit association, not over 30 years old, are eligible for membership in this club, it is stated, and are invited to be present Wednesday evening.

National review, No. 1, Mrs. Della Edmonds, commander, will be hostess to the reviews of the city, on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Odd Fellows hall, when a class of approximately 25 candidates will be initiated. The floor work will be put on by the Union Guard team under Mrs. Hattie Palmer, captain. The candidates will be instructed in the secret work by Mrs. Della Edmonds, assisted by the officers of other reviews. Mrs. Lillie Hall, who is in charge of the program to be presented by the W. B. A. at the Sesquicentennial in Philadelphia in November, will begin a drill in the new campaign songs, and will outline her plans. A report will be given from the supreme office by Mrs. M. S. McMahon, who has recently returned from Fort Huron. After the program a reception will be extended to the new members by National review.

Boy Scout Notes

Patrol leaders of Troop 8, All Souls, P. E. church, met Wednesday and formulated plans for the winter. This troop has been quite active all summer.

Troop 25, Church of the Covenant, announces its first fall meeting for September 24.

Maj. Moorman, former scoutmaster of Troop 33, Takoma Park Presbyterian church, has returned to Washington and is welcomed with open arms by local scouting. Troop 36 at the Takoma Park Baptist church, has made an early start and will stand watching.

Troop 44, meeting at the Washington Heights Presbyterian church, reports a most interesting eight-day trip down the river in their 30-foot launch. This is only the second year of the existence of Troop 44's crew, but they handle their ship like veteran seamen, and in the 250 mile trip just completed there was ample opportunity to demonstrate their seamanship ability. Frequent squalls were encountered and some of them seriously menaced the little craft and its crew. The most severe squall came up on the afternoon of Labor day, while the ship was off Marshall Hall, and it was only by the strenuous efforts and coolness of the crew, led by Quartermaster Richard Schmidman, that the craft was saved, first from swamping in the heavy sea, and later from running aground.

Troop 49, the Drum and Bugle troop, has had an active and successful summer, having produced the buglers for both Boy Scout camps, Everett Lank at Camp Roosevelt, and Jack Sargeant at Camp Wilson.

Troop 50 will soon be assigned to a new troop in Brightwood, which will be led by W. F. Allen, known to many young people as a leader in the Red Triangle Hiking club. Mr. Allen took the special scoutmastership training course at Camp Roosevelt this summer and will undoubtedly develop a strong troop.

Troop 51 at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church is to be congratulated this year on producing the honor scout at Camp Wilson. Broadway Frazier, familiarly known as "Big Gyp" brings this honor to his troop. Scout Frazier puts all his enemies to rout and wins all his laurels with an irresistible grin that covers the entire space between his ears. He deserves his distinction.

Troop 53, meeting at Wesleyan M. E. church, is starting its first winter in scouting and will be watched with interest.

Troop 61 at the Emmanuel P. E. church in Anacostia, is another new troop registered in August. Hollis D. Champlain has been one of the dominating influences in the organization of this troop.

Sam McGlathery, of Troop 63, sends a greeting from the shores of Loch Lomond in far away Scotland.

Troop 73, meeting at the Jewish Community house, has taken a new lease of life and with a new scoutmaster, Abraham S. Greenberg, it promises to be one of the leading troops of the city.

Troop 90 at the Blessed Sacrament school, Chevy Chase, has recently been reorganized under the leadership of John S. Egan. Reorganization of old Troop 95 is also under way at St. Theresa's church.

Troop 124 of Olney, Md., has had a phenomenal rise in scouting during the summer and it enters the fall work with a head start on some of the troops that suspend meetings during the summer. The Rev. Guy E. Kagey, scoutmaster of Troop 124, was awarded a certificate at the scout leaders' training course, and his interest and devotion to the troop, together with his wise administration are great factors in the success of the troop.

Troop 145 of the Methodist Episcopal church at Rockville, Md., is another recently formed troop with more than an ordinary growth. The troop, with its scoutmaster, the Rev. B. W. John, spent two weeks at Camp Roosevelt and entered whole-heartedly in the camp activities. Another new troop is starting in Riverdale, Md., under the leadership of the Rev. R. A. Winger.

When a blind Spanish-American veteran came to Washington last week to get his pension adjusted, he called on the Boy Scouts for assistance, and for his four days' stay he had each day a Boy Scout to lead him around. Walter Gillman, Troop 20; Roger Bearce, Troop 57; Denny Harris and Wallace Bloyer, Troop 8; Joe Fiegley and others of Troop 25 furnished the escort and were highly praised by the blind man.

During the yacht races Friday and yesterday afternoons for the President's cup a picked group of Boy Scouts from all parts of the city was enlisted to assist the Red Cross by acting as life guards along the river. Twenty other scouts furnished by the Fourth division were on duty at the Corinthian Yacht club.

On Thursday afternoon a tea will be given at 614 E street for girls employed in homes, at which Miss Saida L. Hartman, industrial secretary, will be hostess.

"Food, Fellowship and Fun" is the slogan of the rally announced by the young business and professional women's department of the Y. W. C. A. It is to take place on Tuesday at the Blue Triangle, Twentieth and B streets, at 6:45 o'clock.

A bulletin containing information about the work of the Y. W. C. A. and schedules of classes for the coming season is being sent out to members and subscribers.

Princeton chapter of the Y. W. C. A. will hold its first meeting of the season at the Grace Dodge hotel tomorrow at 2 p. m.

A meeting of the membership committee has been called for tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock at 614 E street northwest.

GIRLS FRIENDLY

The branch at Christ church, Rockville, Md., gave a farewell supper to several of its members on September 6, who were going away to school for the winter. Mrs. Walter Williams, branch president, acted as toastmistress. Miss Olive Edmonds sang a solo, accompanied on the piano by Miss Betty Willson. A ukelele solo was given by Miss Anna Merriam. A toast by Miss Nellie Poss was then read.

The girls absent from the branch this year are Miss Catherine Dawson, Miss Anita Lamar, Miss Catherine Hicks, Miss Loretta Hunter, Miss Elizabeth Robertson, Miss Helen Ramey, Miss Betty Willson, Miss Gladys Watkins and Miss Martha Williams.

Among the guests at the Holiday house recently have been Miss Luzetta Gasch, Miss Catherine Baird, Mrs. L. B. On Tuesday evening a "hot dog" roast was held out in the yard. There were numerous trips on the Potomac during the week.

Near East Orphans Write Sponsor Here

That children are the same the world over is illustrated by letters received here from two little orphans, Yetvart and Arshavir Vartanian, addressed to George M. Judd, Eckington place and Florida avenue northeast. Both orphans are being cared for by the Near East Relief at an orphanage in Corinth. Mr. Judd is their sponor.

In their letters, the orphans tell of their studies and of playing football. Arshavir says that while a group of children were cleaning up the playground at the orphanage the supper bell rang, thus breaking up the work. Harold F. Pellegrin, Potomac director of the Near East Relief, who gave out the letters, explained that a number of Washingtonians are caring for orphans under the sponsorship plan adopted by the organization.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1926. F

Stage and Screen Presentations

CIRCUS FILM AT RIALTO THIS WEEK

Tingling with the romance of the sawdust ring and the glitter of gasoline flares, "Bigger Than Barnum's" is the feature photoplay at the Rialto this week.

Directed by Ralph Ince and with a cast headed by Viola Dana, Ralph Lewis and George O'Hara, the story shows intimately the life of circus performers.—clowns, tumbling behind their chalk; acrobats, balancing dangerously on tiny thread of steel where a slip means death; the blare and panoply of the circus and behind it all unchecked human passions waging a bitter war while the crowds applaud. The plot revolves around the old acrobat's son, who is disowned when his father believes him a coward. In a thrilling dramatic climax the boy's courage is revealed when he makes a perilous trip across a high wire hundreds of feet above the street to rescue his father from a blazing hotel. An absorbing love story is wound among the main theme. Viola Dana, as the fascinating daughter of the circus, and George O'Hara, as the son, both add to their laurels in the unusual and fascinating picture.

The special presentation on the stage will be Spencer Tupman and his Mayflower orchestra. This organization is so well known to Washingtonians that it is scarcely necessary to mention the fact that it takes front rank with the foremost jazz orchestras of the country. The highly individualized qualities of Spencer Tupman and his Mayflower orchestra has brought this young director a national reputation as one of the foremost organizations throughout the country.

A comedy, the International News and the overture by Mischa Guterson, conducting the Rialto concert orchestra, completes the program.

SECOND BIG DOUBLE BILL AT PALACE

Another great stage and screen program will be presented at Loew's Palace theater, for the week starting this afternoon, under its new policy of presenting fine screen attractions and big stage features as well, when the eight popular Victor artists will be presented for the first time at popular prices along with Renee Adores and Ralph Graves in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production, "Blarney," the latter constituting the featured screen attraction of the week.

Rubinoff, the popular guest conductor of Tom Gannon's Palace symphony orchestra, whose conducting from the pit and violin solos from the stage constituted one of the high lights of last week's program, will be retained for a second week. Loew's Palace magazine, Dick Liebert's organlogues and other musical and screen attractions will add variety to the ensemble.

The eight Victor artists, which group includes the famous Peerless quartet, are Henry Burr, tenor; Billy Murray, tenor comedian; Monroe Silver, monologist; Frank Banta, pianist; James Stanley, barytone; Carl Mathieu, tenor; Stanley Baughman, basso, and Sam Herman, xylophonist.

Renee Adoree, the beautiful Melisande of "The Big Parade," has one of her finest roles with Ralph Graves, Paulette Duval, Malcoln Waite, Margaret Seddon and others in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Blarney," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Donn Byrne. "Blarney" is a dramatic and romantic study of the days when old New York was young.

MOLLIE HEADS GAYETY SHOW THIS WEEK

Those who have followed up the success of Mollie Williams for the last half score of years don't have to be told of this clever young woman's ability as a producer as well as an entertainer.

This is visible anew in the mammoth spectacle she produces as this season's treat. Just eighteen scenes are essential for the capers, antics and stunts that fill up every minute of the amazingly beautiful and enticing mirth carnival. To bedeck the chorus with attractive wardrobe more than 300 costumes have been created and to finally serve every ingredient in royal style a group of brilliant entertainers have been engaged.

Mollie Williams herself stars at the head of her own organization. There will be a playlet, in which she holds the center of the stage and there will also be an endless procession of bewitching scenes and laugh creating climaxes, principally created by Harry Evanson, Kate Busby, and Jack Darrell, comedians of extraordinary ability.

Jeanne Steele, Bee Paige and George Paige and Harry Seyon will likewise give a good account of their cleverness in the Mollie Williams offering.

Among the sensational spectacles will be "the Green Hat," a genuine novelty; "Temptations of Today," introducing the fair ones of the show in captivating groups; "Kingdom of Charleston," a fantastic craze; "The Chicken Wiggle," an up to the minute dance creation and quite a number of others equally attractive and mirth provoking.

'COCOANUTS' COMES TO NATIONAL

The Marx brothers, in "The Cocoanuts," the hit of hits of the New York season, will be the attraction at the National theater Monday.

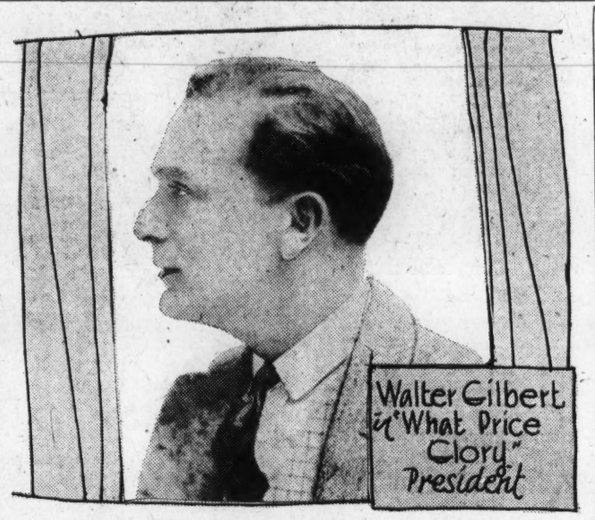
"The Cocoanuts" is a sparkling and picturesque pageant of clever fun makers, beautiful women, rich and varied costumes and elaborate stage pictures.

Irving Berlin is responsible for the lyrics and music and George S. Kaufman sponsors the book, which he has written around the droll personalities of the Marx brothers. The story deals with the Florida real estate boom in an amusing and satirical manner. Of course, there is a plot; at least all musical comedies are supposed to have one. But what is a plot between friends, anyhow? The Marx brothers are there and if the plot disappears occasionally, there is enough to hold the story together.

The company comes here from an all-season run at the Lyric theater, New York. It is intact as regards principals, chorus and production.

Manager Sparrow Celebrates Birthday

Manager Allen J. Sparrow, of the Strand theater, had a birthday last Saturday, and in commemoration of this epochal event the folks at the Strand theater decided that their genial boss was entitled to a noteworthy presentation. Then and there they started a campaign for a birthday fund, the result of which was a huge basket of flowers, and in order that the many friends and patrons of Manager Sparrow might be taken confidentially into what was going on it was decided to wait until the conclusion of Harry Le Van's vaudeville act, when Mr. Le Van made a little curtain speech inviting friend Sparrow to the stage and thereupon presenting him with their token of friendship and good wishes. Not to be outdone the folks back stage, double-quick timed and followed up the presentation of flowers with a box of Manager Sparrow's favorite cigars.



BARTHELMESS IS STAR AT THE METRO

Another dual entertainment is announced for the current week at Crandall's Metropolitan theater beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The foremost screen attraction for this week will be supplied by Richard Barthelmess in his latest First National release, "The Amateur Gentleman," adapted from the story of the same name by Jeffery Farnol. In this subject the star is supported by a new leading woman in the person of Dorothy Dunbar.

The stage offering for the week will be "The Call of the Sixties," a musical novelty in which Dane Claudius and Lillian Scarlet are the principals. The auxiliary features of the entertainment will include a new release of the specially assembled Metropolitan world survey, a cartoon comedy, concert overture by the Metropolitan symphony, under the directorship of Daniel Breeskin, and on weekdays the musical accompaniments by the Metropolitan Ramblers, under the conductorship of Milton Davis.

"The Amateur Gentleman" takes rank as one of the finest contributions to the art of the cinema that Richard Barthelmess has ever brought to the silver sheet. The action of the story is laid in England in the year 1818, and provides a stellar role that abounds in action and fluctuates the development of a dramatic narrative with spirited climaxes. A long list of distinguished players appear in Barthelmess' support and add their bits to an ensemble that has seldom if ever been surpassed. The central figure is a youth who was the lowly-born son of an ex-champion pugilist who became an inn keeper, incapable of realizing that his offspring might, upon the inheritance of a large sum of money, actually become a gentleman. It is from the father's designation of his son as "an amateur gentleman" that the play derives its name.

"WHAT PRICE GLORY" AT PRESIDENT

When Maz Anderson and Laurence Stallings were writing "What Price Glory," announced as the opening attraction at the President theater, it was their modest intent to tell a story of a battle between two hard-boiled marines for the favors of a peasant girl in a little French village near the front line of war activities. But so gargantuan were the characters they created, and so vividly pointed was their story that the collaboration resulted in the most talked about, written about, and the most remembered play that this or any other generation has ever seen.

"What Price Glory" was produced by Arthur Hopkins at the Plymouth theater, New York, early in September, 1924, and met with immediate success. Its Broadway run continued for 54 weeks, and has been presented in most every city in the United States.

Director Charles Schofield of the President Theater Players, has cast Mr. Walter Gilbert as Capt. Flagg. Miss Leona Powers will play the part of Charmaine, the little French girl.

The engagement will begin Monday evening, with matinees Thursday and Saturday.

Like Washington.

"The Great Moment," a gripping comedy drama, is serving Mollie Williams in her unsurpassed revue, this week's attraction at the Gayety theater. Mollie, the originator of pathetic playlets woven in Columbia burlesque attractions, and to see one of her shows without a dramatic skit would be like visiting Washington without seeing the places of historic interest. This season Mollie has drifted a little away from her previous ideas, for her latest dramatic creation is a most modern conception with all the thrills of excitement, but pleasantly relieved by mirthful situations.

VALENTINO HOLDS OVER AT COLUMBIA

Rudolph Valentino, the greatest lover the screen ever knew, in his last and greatest romantic triumph, "The Son of the Sheik"—a picture which packed Loew's Columbia to absolute capacity at practically every performance during the last week—is announced by the management of that theater as the attraction for a second week, starting this afternoon.

"The Son of the Sheik" is a sequel, by E. M. Hull, to her famous novel and Valentino screen triumph of some five years ago in which the famous star is supported by a cast that includes the beautiful Vilma Banky, who was Valentino's leading woman in "The Eagle;" George Fawcett, Montagu Love, Karl Dane, Bull Montana, Agnes Ayres and others. The photoplay version of the story was made by the noted Frances Marion, who adapted "The Sheik," while the direction is that of the famous George Fitzmaurice.

Valentino not only portrays some of the greatest romantic acting he has ever given the screen in his role of a young desert sheik in love with a beautiful dancing girl, but he enacts a series of daring climactic episodes that are breath-taking in their reckless disregard of danger. The entire production is laid on the desert.

Added screen and musical attractions supplement "The Son of the Sheik," among which are a Christie comedy, a Lyman Howe hodge-podge, International Newsreel pictures and orchestral overture and atmospheric score by the Columbia Symphony orchestra under the direction of Leon Brusiloff.

JAPANESE STAR HEADS KEITH'S BILL

Sessue Hayakawa, the internationally famous motion picture star, will headline the bill at B. F. Keith's theater this week. He will appear in "The Bandit Prince," a new playlet which is based upon the novel by the same name written by Mr. Hayakawa.

"Hello—Good-by," a laughter piece revue in fifteen scenes, will be a featured presentation. This act, produced by Jean Bedini, will bring together a sparkling crew of funmakers, including Irene Ricardo, Eddie Vogt, Frank Hurst, Joe Melino, Jean Bedini and others who appear in their own acts on other parts of the bill.

Irene Ricardo returns in her own hilarious manner to present "Whoa, Pagliacci," which never fails to bring on the oft-mentioned but seldomly experienced galés of laughter.

Frank Hurst and Eddie Vogt are cavorting under a banner which sets them forth as "profiteering in fun." This pair has running patter at absolute command.

Jean Bedini and Melino present a juggling travesty guaranteed to keep the tide of merriment at high ebb.

The Di Gatanos, heralded as Broadway's newest and brightest lights, appear in dances of yesterday, today and tomorrow.

The usual supplementary features round out the bill.

Promenade Expensive.

The President Players' management is paying a heavy rental for the new promenade lounge in the rear of the orchestra section. The promenade was made possible only by ripping out six rows of seats and these figured at potential dollar bills every night will run into handsome figures before the end of the season.

"KOSSACKS" HEADLINE AT EARLE

For the current week beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock the Earle theater announces one of its most pretentious program. The headline attraction of a bill that will embrace the best in popular-priced vaudeville, photoplay features, orchestral and pipe organ music, will be contributed by the Kuban Kossacks, a male chorus of fourteen solo voices, in a program of excellent choice which will reveal not only the ensemble strength of this group of artists, but the solo proficiency of more than one member of the ensemble. Another inclusion of the vaudeville portions of the entertainment that is genuinely noteworthy is that of Bert Levy, one of the foremost cartoonists and caricaturists in the United States, who augments his draftsmanship with a keen sense of humor and ability as a whistler.

The stage portions of the program for this week at the Earle also will embrace a clever turn by "The Three Aces," Freeman & Lynn, in a novelty offering, the Shelby & Adams Revue, and other divertissements of the first rank. The photoplay feature for the week is Producers' latest release, "Almost a Lady," in which Marie Prevost is the pictured star, with Harrison Ford and George K. Arthur, two of the cleverest comedians on the screen, in the support.

The program for the week also embraces the customary short-reel features presented by the Earle theater weekly, including screen comedy, news reel, orchestral overture, and pipe organ accompaniments to the pictured portions of the entertainment.

Irene Is Here.

Irene Ricardo, Fanny Brice's only rival, is at Keith's theater this week, starting today, and the fair comedienne will be welcomed by a host of friends she has made in Washington.

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE" HOLDS AT BELASCO

Owing to the crowds that are packing the Shubert-Belasco theater to see "Abie's Irish Rose," it has been decided to hold the Anne Nichols comedy drama over for another week beginning tonight. The engagement will positively end Saturday night, September 25. There will be the usual matinees, Wednesday and Saturday.

Anne Nichols' delightful story hinges upon the racial and religious differences of the Irish and Jew. A story wherein deep-rooted prejudice is eradicated; but not until all those concerned are subjected to many heartaches and enveloped in an atmosphere of unfriendliness that almost reaches a state of hatred. But this does not necessarily mean that the play is at all melodramatic; on the contrary, it borders on the farce at times, owing to the deft manner in which Miss Anne Nichols has handled a very delicate subject.

When a girl bearing the name of Rosemary Murphy and a boy who answers to the name of Abraham Levy decide to marry, it is more than likely that something is going to happen to their plans before they are consummated. This is the foundation of the story about "Abie's Irish Rose."

The cast of clever players Miss Nichols has picked for this company includes Elsie Nichols, Walter Vaughn, Joseph Greenwald, Philip Lord, George Callahan, Mildred Elliott, Charles W. Guthrie and Harry Marks Stewart.

Chats on Stage and Screen Folk

GALLI-CURCI TO SING HERE

When one considers that the slender, frail Galli-Curci, the world's greatest coloratura soprano, annually fills from 90 to 100 concert engagements between October and the following mid-May, it seems altogether marvelous that this famous singer continues to enjoy not only good health but constantly maintain the very pink of physical condition.

Galli-Curci, who is announced as one of the artists in Mrs. Wilson-Greene's evening concert course this season, two of which, her own and John McCormack's, will be held at the Washington auditorium and the remainder at the beautiful Memorial Continental hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has never canceled a concert engagement in Washington through illness or for any other reason.

This is truly remarkable, and when it is considered that postponements are the bugbear of the concert profession that frequently make necessary a long railroad jump, sometimes hundreds of miles, to go back later and fill a postponed date, some idea of her good fortune in that respect can be realized. Only once, in fact, in four years has Galli-Curci canceled an engagement through illness, and that was when she undertook to sing in decollette in a chilly Canadian concert hall in April.

Ever since Galli-Curci was a child she has borne in mind the fact that health is vital to the success of a singer, and with this idea in mind she cultivates repose, no matter what the strain of traveling may be. Exercises play a big part in her life, and in every large city she has an osteopath who gives her treatment immediately after her arrival from a long railway jump. The result is a freedom from colds and illness that is almost phenomenal in the concert world.

'MISS NOBODY' AT TIVOLI

The new greater movie season brings an exceptional array of feature photoplay productions to Crandall's Tivoli theater for the week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock. For Sunday and Monday Anna Q. Nilsson will occupy the screen in First National's production of "Miss Nobody," which will be supplemented by Mack Sennett's two-reel comedy, "Ice Cold Cocoas," and a new release of the Pathe Review, the entire bill to be embellished by pipe organ accompaniments and solo intervals by Otto F. Beck and Ida V. Clarke, assistant.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, John Bowers will occupy the screen as star of "Laddie," which will be supplemented by the new comedy, "Chase Yourself," in which Jimmie Adams has the central role. The bill will be further augmented by a new release of the popular "Topics of the Day."

On Thursday, Laura la Plante will occupy the screen at the Tivoli in Universal's production of "Poker Faces," which will be supplemented by a new News reel and one of Paul Terry's amusing Aesop Fables.

A revival of timely interest and genuine artistic worth is announced for the Tivoli on Friday, when Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayers will be seen in the costellar roles of E. M. Hull's story of "The Sheik," which will be supplemented by Jimmie Arthur in "Mr. Cinderella."

On Saturday, Jack Holt will be the Tivoli's pictured star in Zane Grey's "Forlorn River," which will be supplemented by Hal Roach's new two-reel comedy, "Thundering Fleas," a new Grantland Rice Sportlight and the first installment of a new chapter play bearing the title of "Snowed In."

RUBINOFF TALKS JAZZ

Jazz music. It has been praised, condemned and talked of endlessly. As a musical director, I have often been asked to express my personal opinion of it.

It appears to me that many popular jazz numbers have been condemned on account of their lyrics, and not their melody. The impression that jazz is common—cheap, or even worse, has often arisen from the words in which it is put, rather than the music.

After all, the melody in many jazzy numbers is exceptionally beautiful, and I have tried to illustrate that by playing a popular number in many different ways—as a semiclassical or operatic number, for instance. Frequently I can take a common, jazzy tune and play it in a classical way, but retaining much of the original melody. Then even the man who says he "doesn't like jazz" will like it, because he doesn't identify it as jazz, but thinks it's something classical.

Billy Murray, tenor-comedian, and Henry Burr, tenor, with the Eight Victor Artists at Loew's Palace this week.

AMBASSADOR BILL VARIED

Richard Barthelmess, supported by Dorothy Dunbar and a cast of unusual distinction will be seen for the first time in Washington in the title role of First National's production of Jeffrey Farnol's story of "The Amateur Gentleman," at Crandall's Ambassador theater the first three days of this week, beginning this afternoon at 3. The story is that of the son of a former champion pugilist, who later became innkeeper, who upon the inheritance of a large sum of money decides to take his place in society and is laughed at by his father who takes a hearty licking at the hands of the son who proves himself in fact not an amateur but a real gentleman. An Aesop fable and pipe organ music augmented by minor film features will complete the entertainment.

On Wednesday and Thursday, Patsy Ruth Miller and Johnny Harron will occupy the screen on "Hell Bent for Heaven," which will be supplemented by a new news reel and Mack Sennett's "Ice Cold Cocoas."

On Friday John Bowers will be starred in "Laddie," with Lige Conley in "Going Crazy" as the comedy and a new release of the topics of the day added, to be followed on Saturday by Johnny Walker and Pauline Starke in "Honesty the Best Policy," our gang in "Uncle Tom's Uncle," screen snapshots and Pathe review.

Givney a Guest.

Kathryn Givney, former member of the National Players, will be a guest at the opening performance of "What Price Glory?" at the President Monday night. Miss Givney is just back from Europe to begin rehearsals for a new production put out by producer Russell Janney.

Harry Long Here.

HAYAKAWA AN ARTIST

More than once the shadowy silences of a moving picture house have been shattered by an ecstatic whisper, "Gee, I'd like to meet him," as some young girl was thrilled into articulation by the suave, fascinating Oriental Sessue Hayakawa, for years among the most devastatingly attractive of all screen villains. Few film actors can match his facile technique, few can display the variety and depth of feeling which distinguish his picture work.

Hayakawa is an artist. Furthermore, his histrionic ability adapts itself to regulation footlights as well as to the silent drama.

At the moment he has stepped away from the Klieg lights to face the spotlight in Keith-Albee vaudeville. In a thrilling dramatic sketch, "The Bandit Prince," based upon his own novel of that name, he is making a tour of the more important houses in the Keith-Albee circuit and will appear at B. F. Keith's theater next week.

Although vaudeville is a new field of theatrical venture for Hayakawa—with the exception of a brief tour of the principal music halls of London, he has never attempted variety—he finds it much to his liking and is giving in his two-a-day playlet as fine a performance as he has ever achieved.

WILL REVIVE "THE SHEIK"

Jacqueline Logan and Margaret Livingston will be the pictured stars at Crandall's Central Theater the first two days of this week beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock in James Oliver Curwood's story of "When the Door Opened," a drama of strong climaxes, which will be supplemented by Lige Conley, in "Solid Gold," and a new issue in Grantland Rice's series of "Sportlights."

On Tuesday Dorothy Gish will be seen in "Nell Gwyn." This study of the life of the famous character will be supplemented by Mack Sennett's two-reel comedy "Funnymooners."

A revival of more than ordinary interest is announced for the Central on Wednesday and Thursday, when Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres will occupy the silver sheet as costars of the notable screen version of E. M. Hull's novel of "The Shiek." This dashing drama will be supplemented by new releases of the Pathe Review and Paul Terry's Aesop Fable.

On Friday Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller will be costarred at the Central in the Warner Brothers enlivening farce, "So This is Paris." Andy Gump, famous in the Washington Post comic strips, will be the comedian of Friday's bill in "Dumb Luck," in which a new release of the Screen Snapshots will be shown.

Vera Reynolds, protege of Cecil B. de Mille, will be the Central's star on Saturday, in "Sunny Side Up," which will be supplemented by the exquisite natural color production of "The Vision," suggested by a famous painting. The auxiliary attraction will be a new Paul Terry Aesop Fable.

Many Read Story.

Some idea of how many persons will hear and see Rudolph Valentino's last photodrama, "The Son of the Sheik," which starts its second week at Loew's Columbia today, may be gained from the fact that over 1,000,000 copies of the book were sold, to say nothing of the more than 40 big circulation newspapers that ran the story serially. And Valentino's screen version is being viewed by something more than a corporal's guard!

Burlesquers Creative.

There is seldom a day that some Broadway manager does not announce the engagement of a performer that he has recruited from the burlesque stage. This can easily be accounted for, says Harry Bentley, long a burlesque star, and this week at the Mutual theater, from the fact that performers in burlesque have to be creative.

The rising generation of stage players do exactly as the director tells them to, says Bentley. Such professionals wouldn't nave a chance in burlesque.

TUPMAN BAND IS COLORFUL

Shimmering jazz rhythms of Spencer Tupman and his Mayflower orchestra are the special presentation feature at the Rialto this week. This organization holds a unique place among music lovers and has become famous throughout the entire country from the fact that Tupman possesses that very rare talent among jazz orchestra directors of being able to blend dreamful melodies with fizzing syncopation, forming a musical cocktail that pleases all classes of music lovers.

Besides being one of the best-known band leaders in the East, Tupman takes top rank for his own special arrangement of jazz numbers, which have been adopted and used by other prominent directors.

It will be recalled by Washingtonians that Spencer Tupman and his own orchestra was the one chosen to succeed Vincent Lopez and his orchestra at the Mayflower hotel. Previous to this it is also well remembered that Spencer Tupman was the star musician with Myer Davis' Le Paradis and is credited by many with making it one of the best dance and vaudeville draws.

PLAY MANY INSTRUMENTS

Few people know that the Marx brothers are among the most accomplished musicians on the American stage. This unique aggregation of musical comedy comedians play almost every known instrument there is and, what is more, they play each instrument unusually well.

The Marx brothers, who heretofore have let but two members—"Harpo" and "Chico"—play an instrument in their attractions, this year come to Washington as stars of "The Cocoanuts," in a new musical comedy by Irving Berlin and George S. Kaufman, which Sam H. Harris will present for a week only at the National theater, beginning Sunday, September 19.

"Harpo," who plays the harp as his specialty, has many times been offered concert work, and "Chico," who plays a piano specialty, has also been approached for similar engagements. Yet both "Harpo" and "Chico" play the violin, mandolin, guitar, saxophone, flute, cornet, horn and other brass and stringed instruments.

"STEP LIVELY GIRLS" HERE

What is probably the most sophisticated burlesque show on the circuit, "Step Lively Girls," is announced as the attraction at the Mutual theater, commencing today, with Harry Bentley, and what is said to be an excellent company, giving life and vitality to the offering. This hilariously funny entertainment is in two acts and ten scenes, with the four big feature numbers laid at Miami, Fla.—a vineyard in Spain, a boathouse in Hawaii and a scene on the Nile, Egypt—thus affording the principals and chorus a great opportunity to display very colorful costuming and decorative scenic embellishments. Harry Bentley, the principal comedian, will be remembered for his excellent delineation last season of the funny Dutchman, who was always doing the wrong thing at the right time. Bob Collins, who makes a splendid foil to Bentley, is said to be funnier this season than at any time in his career. Elsie Burgere, the ingenue soubrette, is said to be an excellent toe dancer in addition to her vivacious methods as a comedienne of excellent technique.

Clever Entertainer Is Bert, at Earle

At the Earle theater this week there is an entertainer of unique capabilities. Bert Levy, one of the foremost cartoonists and caricaturists in the United States, has for many seasons devoted a part of his time to vaudeville entertainment in which he excels as a caricaturist whose art is reflected upon a magnified screen through a device of his own invention, the drawing being accompanied by a gatling gun fire of comedy and whistling of a character that in itself would justify his engagement as a clever artist. Bert Levy's presence on the bill at the Earle this week insures a degree of popularity for the Thirteenth street house that could not be augmented by the addition of a thousand prominent names, for Levy in the Capital by reason of his association with the newspaper crowd and others of prominence is one of the best known and most liked artists to come to this city.

SPENCER TUPMAN,

STYLES IN SCREENLAND

By the Associated Press.

Tight skirts, bloused waists, hat sleeves, transparent velvet, rattlesnake skin slippers, button earrings, embroidered hose and chin straps with small hats, are just a few of the fads and foibles that will be featured in the fall styles to be worn by feminine members of the motion picture colony.

NORMA SHEARER.

Norma Shearer apparently believes in taking no chances of losing her headgear. She has a number of small felt hats ready for autumn wear and each has a chin strap of leather or heavy ribbon. The remainder of her wardrobe shows short skirts and a wide variety of sport suits. These latter are distinguished by an almost total absence of pleats. All of them are either wrapped or straight lined with box coats that come to the hips.

AILEEN PRINGLE.

Aileen Pringle defies Paris in her fall modes as regards skirts. Hers are ankle-length, in contrast to the short-skirt dictum from the French capital. Miss Pringle believes that "the length of skirts should be a matter of taste. Furthermore, there is a method of conforming to prevailing styles and still retaining individuality." Hence all her evening gowns are to be "very long," and her street frocks a bare seven inches from the pavement. Miss Pringle dismissed the subject of sport clothes with the remark, "I seldom wear them."

CLAIRE WINDSOR.

The most popular furs of the year in film circles seem to be antelope, pony and leopard. Claire Windsor has a new antelope coat on her hangers. The collar is small; the silhouette conforms to the newest shape, that is a decided waistline with a bloused back and a straight, tight skirt. With the coat goes a small felt hat and rattlesnake skin oxfords.

Miss Windsor also has a suggestion in hairdressing, particularly if it is parted.

"Facial profile should determine the side on which hair should be parted. Study your face in the mirror and learn which side is prettier, then part the hair accordingly. A part in the hair is always flattering. It softens the features.

"If you know the difference in your two profiles you also are a better judge of hats that are becoming. Always choose those with trimming that softens the poorer side of your face. The better side can look well under the severe side of your hat."

ELEANOR BOARDMAN.

The period gown is getting a strong play for evening wear. Eleanor Boardman has a number with long skirts, tight bodices and drop shoulders. One very pretty one is made of shell-pink velvet trimmed with creme princess lace.

MAE MURRAY.

Mae Murray, who has a reputation for a style all her own, flatly refuses to have anything to do with long skirts. She is indulging in short sport, street and evening creations. The last-named are made of gold, silver and lace cloth and carry such trimmings as fringe, crystal beads and hand-painting.

PAULINE STARKE.

Jewelry evidently will have an off-season among the film folk except for evening wear. Long earrings for street dress are in eclipse and are being replaced by small, button-like affairs of onyx and jade. Pauline Starke has had a number of pairs of these "tailored" ear decorations designed for street use.

For the evening, necklaces, bracelets and earrings still will be visible with settings of aqua marines, crystal and diamonds. Some of the stars still cling to their pearls, although there is not a great confusion of these.

RENEE ADOREE.

For evening wear, short skirts for the street, hand-painted gowns and small hats for women who would dress well are recommended by Renee Adoree.

Some of the new colors are delightful, she says, particularly the new shades of gold. The actress believes they enhance the beauty of every woman who wears them.

Mannish-tailored gowns, however, are frowned on by Miss Adoree. "Avoid them if you are the decidedly feminine type. Few women can wear them successfully.

"Big hats are delightful and very feminine but they are not practical. Small hats are smart. Long skirts are all right for evening wear, but I do not approve them on the street. After the comfort of short sport skirts women will never accept long skirts again."

CARMEL MYERS.

Carmel Myers forecasts the death of the big hat. "It will be gone by the end of the summer," says she, and emphasized the death-sentence of the broad-brimmed head decoration by showing her own choice of small velvet and felt creations.

Opening Date Announced.

It is announced by Harriett Hawley Locher, director of the public service and educational department of the Stanley-Crandall theaters, founded by Harry M. Crandall, that the special programs for children to be given on Saturday mornings in the Tivoli and Chevy Chase theaters will be inaugurated for the new season on October 30. Mrs. Locher has specialized in this type of entertainment and is nationally recognized as an authority in the preparation and presentation of bills desiged for juvenile entertainment.

Demand Exceeds Supply.

Norman W. Pyle, director of publicity at Loew's Palace theater, provided a mere 6,000 copies of his new Palace publication, The Loew's Palace Newsette, for distribution to the customers at last Sunday's opening bill and before nightfall he had to rout his printer out of a Sunday afternoon nap to grind out 4,000 more to satisfy the day's demand.

Hungarian Rhapsody.

Whoever christened Vilma Banky, Rudolph Valentino's leading woman in "The Son of the Sheik," at Loew's Columbia this week, "the Hungarian rhapsody," had a genius for nomenclature, for Vilma's beauty in this last Valentino picture is even more rhapsodical than it was in Valentino's previous hit, "The Eagle."

PRIEST ROLE EMBARRASSES

If you think the life of an actor is a bed of roses, then hark to the woes of one Geo. Callahan, the portrayer of the priest in "Abie's Irish Rose," at the Shubert-Belasco theater for another week beginning tomorrow night.

"Because I represent a priest on the stage, I am compelled to be like one in real life," protests Mr. Callahan. "I really enjoy an occasional gay party and a lapse into the frivolous. But dare I stray from the narrow path? I'll say I dare not.

"Members of our company come to me with their troubles and problems. Many persons who have seen the play come to me with their stories and ask me to help them. I try to do my best, but I always send them to a clergyman of their own faith, because—after all—I am only an actor. I love the part of 'Father Whalen.' He is a good, kindly man and I try to live the part every second I portray him. Anne Nichols, author of 'Abie,' once said she engaged me for the part because I looked like a priest she knows very well. And now I am beginning to feel like one. It has been good for me to be good."

WHY GILBERT CAME HERE

Walter Gilbert, leading man for the President Players, who will open their season Monday night in "What Price Glory," is in Washington because Manager C. J. Harris outbid Boston competitors for his services. Mr. Gilbert is a prime favorite with the Beantown audiences and has appeared there regularly for the last several winters, alternating between there and Providence, where he is a summer member of the Albee Players.

Mr. Gilbert manages to take one or two flyers each season into production work. Last spring he was at the Belasco here in "Cobra," and the season before that in a new mystery play, "At the Curtains." Stock, however, is his forte and his dozen years' experience in that field he has managed to restrict almost entirely to Eastern cities.

As First Sergt. Quirt in the Stallings-Anderson war play, Gilbert will be seen to tremendous advantage. He is tall, sturdily built and exceedingly handsome. These attributes clothed in a marine corps uniform should not fail of impress on the more susceptible matinee girls.

Represents Loew Here.

Under the new policy of presenting stage and screen attractions at Loew's Palace theater, Lawrence Beatus becomes managing director of Loew attractions in Washington, and O. J. Ratto, formerly assistant manager of the Palace, becomes house manager. R. R. Dissel remains as treasurer, with C. B. Murphy in charge of theater service.

No Stranger Here.

Walter Gilbert, new leading man of the President Players, appeared in Washington late last spring in "Cobra." For years he has been an outstanding stock favorite in Boston. He will play First Sergt. Quirt in the opening bill, "What Price Glory?"

IGNORANT OF BUGGIES

In view of the nation-wide popularity of the song, "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," one would imagine that there are thousands of young folks in America today who know all about driving horses and buggy riding, too, but Marcel De Sano, director of "Blarney," the screen feature at Loew's Palace this week, says that such is not the case.

The time of the picture is of the period when a horse and buggy was as important to a young blood as a light coupe "of a popular make" is today. And De Sano was looking for young actors to play the parts of swains of the period, to drive horses and buggies as part of the atmosphere background.

Not one in ten young men interviewed knew how to drive a horse. Nearly all claimed ability to drive horseback, but guiding a steed from a buggy seat was something else again.

"How time does fly," said De Sano, "young men who admit they know anything about buggy riding are no longer young."

De Sano did extensive research work on the old-time bare knuckle prize fights preparatory to photographing "Blarney."

He combed the country for photographs and drawings of some of the memorable conflicts and created composites of these for his settings for the film.

KEATON STAR AT STRAND

Beginning today and continuing all week the Strand theater offers one of the biggest bills of its season. Aside from the five big pleasing acts of Loew's vaudeville, one of the screen's favorites, Buster Keaton will be shown in that inimitable prize-fight-comedy picture, "Battling Butler." Thrills and laughs galore are promised in this whirlwind of fun and excitement, together with a love story that is full of romance and heart throbs.

The stage presentation consists of another fine array of Loew's high class vaudeville, five big acts in all, topped by a Herbert Barnett and Jack Thomas revue, with the Doll sisters (Helen Jesius and Chappy, and Libby Kay) assisting. Other numbers on the vaudeville bill will include Winehill and Briscoe in a comedy farce, "Just for a Laugh;" LaFoy-Startman company in a song and dance number, "Tea for Three," by William K. Wells; Helen Moretti in a song and ballad number entitled "The Little Girl With the Big Voice," and Ambler brothers, "America's Foremost Equilibrists."

Some Xylophonist

Although Henry Burr, Billy Murray and Monroe Silver are perhaps the best known members of the group of eight Victor artists, who will appear on the stage of Loew's Palace today, Sam Herman, the xylophonist, is a remarkable performer on this curious instrument and has developed some tonal effects that would seem impossible to reproduce on an instrument of that type.

PLAYS LEADS IN 6 MONTHS

The magic lamp of Hollywood is apparently at work again. Its favorite this time is Dorothy Dunbar, whose meteoric rise from extra girl to leading woman in six months is the topic of filmdom's conversation.

For Dorothy, beautiful, athletic, dark and vivacious, was chosen by Inspiration Pictures to play the leading feminine role opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The Amateur Gentleman," which comes to Crandall's Metropolitan and Ambassador theaters this afternoon, opening at 3.

The entire Hollywood field was scoured for just the right actress for the role of Lady Cleone Meredith, an English aristocrat of the regency period. Finally, Miss Dunbar became the unanimous choice of J. Boyce Smith, jr., general manager of Inspiration; Richard Barthelmess and Sidney Olcott, the director. Barthelmess heartily indorsed the selection.

Magnetic Hollywood drew her from Colorado Springs, where she was born and where she reigned in the younger social set. Commencing as merely "atmosphere" she was soon given "bits" which were followed by a prominent role in Fox's "Siberia." Eph Asher then selected her to play one of the leading parts in Corinne Griffith's "Mademoiselle Modiste."

Seeks New Acts.

John J. Payette, supervisor of the Stanley-Crandall theaters in and about Washington, founded by Harry M. Crandall, executive vice president of the Stanley-Crandall Co., left Washington last Monday night at midnight for a three-day business trip to New York city, where he is conducting negotiations for the appearance in the Crandall theaters of this city of a distinguished list of special musical stage attractions. Mr. Payette has become something of a commuter between Washington and New York, having been back only two days from the Crandall wedding trip to the metropolis when he returned for business of more official import.

Funnier than "Twin Beds" or "Getting Gertie's Garter" is the farce, "A Kiss in a Taxi" which the President Players will offer following "What Price Glory." This comic enlargement of the events befalling a flirtatious French banker who finds himself the foster father of a little sprite from the Montmarte district, appeared here at the Belasco late last spring with Arthur Byron, Janet Beecher and Claudette Colbert. Al H. Woods found it one of his most profitable ventures of the season.

The piece is built on broad farcical lines, concerning itself with a maze of entanglements resulting from a rather innocent gesture by the aforesaid banker. Outright hilarity ensues by appearance on the scene of a dizzy author who is actually in love with the little cafe girl.

Why do sturdy and respectable citizens of this broad land, engaged in the purveying of corn, hardware or real estate, yearn for the exotic costumes and titles of the East, for emblazoned orders, ritualistic mysteries, intricate hand-shakes? It is a speculation for the sociologist, for the mass-psychologist. Pending the final answer to this question, George S. Kaufman and Herman J. Mankiewicz have written an entertaining play, "The Good Fellow," which satirizes the national tendency and which will be seen at Poli's theater for a one week engagement beginning Sunday evening, September 26, prior to its opening in New York the following week.

The first opportunity in Washington to view in motion and color the Lew Wallace classic of "Ben-Hur" will come at the New National theater beginning Sunday night, September 26, where Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's $4,000,000 picturization in arrangement with A. L. Erlanger, Charles B. Dillingham and F. Ziegfeld, jr., will be presented for a limited engagement with the complete touring orchestra and staging from the Embassy theater in New York.

The novel, subtitled "A Tale of Christ," was the world's most popular book. The stage spectacle toured America 22 years. Now, in the greatest art of the motion picture, are offered the famous sea fight and chariot race as thrilling out-of-door events, the lovely romance of Judah, Prince of Hur, and Esther, and replicas of Old World masterpieces, often in color.

Fay Bainter, who was seen as a member of the all-star cast of the revival of "The Two Orphans" at the Cosmopolitan theater in New York late last season, and previously was starred in Victor Herbert's "The Dream Girl," comes to Washington on Monday evening, September 27, in "First Love," a new comedy by Zoe Akins, adapted from the French play, "Pile ou Face," by Louis Verneuil, which the Messrs. Shubert will present for one week at the Belasco theater preparatory to its New York opening.

Reports from abroad indicate that the Verneuil comedy enjoyed a tremendous success in the French capital and much is expected of it with its American setting and nearly all-star cast which the Messrs. Shubert have assembled for Miss Bainter's support.

The bill at B. F. Keith's theater next week will be coheadlined by Betty Blythe, famed motion picture star, and Cecilia Loftus, the noted English star in impersonations.

"Around the World Revue," next week's attraction at the Gayety theater, has an alluring title and scenically lives up to its caption. Nine countries are shown in colorful revue during the progress of two acts and fifteen scenes. Picturesque Spain, France, China, Japan, Hawaii and Switzerland are all "visited" and the native costuming of each land is worn prettily by the feminine principals and pert chorines of the cast. The Lander Brothers, Harry and Willie, tramp comedians, have the leading fun roles.

Beginning next Sunday, September 26, Rex Ingram's master production, "Mare Nostrum," will be the screen feature at the Strand theater with Alice Terry and Antonio Marino heading an incomparable cast.

On the stage will be a line-up of Loew's vaudeville headed by "Seminary Scandals," featuring Miss Tommy Allen. Other numbers on the vaudeville program include Al Traham and Vesta Wallace in "The Curtain Speech;" Nellie Arnaut and Brothers; Sue Creighton and Eddie Lynn and the Three Herman Brothers.

Next week's bill at the Earle theater will be comprised of another skillful combination of photoplay, vaudeville and musical features which will embrace "A Night in China," an oriental musical comedy with the Roma Duo; Joe Morris and Wynn Shaw in "The Mosquito Trust;" Dave Schooler and company in "Music Hath Charms," with Peggy Hart and Estelle McNeil, a skit written by Dave Schooler and Herman Timberg, famous violinist comedians. Other Keith's popular priced vaudeville acts will round out the stage portion of the entertainment which will be augmented by feature and short reel photoplay attractions, orchestral overture, and pipe organ accompaniments of the cinematographic portions of the entertainment.

Lillian Gish and John Gilbert are announced as the cofeatured stars of King Vidor's brilliant, romantic and colorful production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "LaBoheme," from the famous opera by Henry Murger, which is announced as the featured screen attraction at Loew's Columbia theater for the week starting next Sunday afternoon. A remarkable cast, including Renee Adoree, George Hassell, Karl Dane, Roy D'Arcy, Frank Currier and Edward Everett Horton appear in supporting roles.

At Crandall's Metropolitan theater the week of September 26 Colleen Moore, one of the most popular screen stars ever to enlist the admiration of Washington picture fans, will be seen for the first time in the National Capital in First National's production of "It Must Be Love." The program will be augmented by a sterling stage attraction, short-reel film features, and special music by the Metropolitan symphony, under the conductorship of Daniel Breeskin, and on weekdays by the Metropolitan Ramblers, conducted by Milton Davis.

On Sunday and Monday of next week, beginning Sunday afternoon at 3, Leatrice Joy will be the pictured star at Crandall's Tivoli theater in Producers' release of "The Clinging Vine," in which she is supported by a fine cast. On Tuesday and Wednesday, Lloyd Hughes, in association with Dolores del Rio, Alec B. Francis and George Cooper, will be seen in First National's production of "Pals First," which will be succeeded on Thursday and Friday by Constance Talmadge, supported by a new leading man in the person of Tullio Carminati in First National's clever farce of a dancer involved in Russian nobility, "The Duchess of Buffalo." On Saturday only of next week the Tivoli will present a star cast in "The Honeymoon Express."

Colleen Moore, supported by a cast of unusual distinction, will be seen for the first time in Washington at Crandall's Ambassador theater the first three days of next week, beginning Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in First National's production of "It Must Be Love," adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Delicatessen. On Wednesday of next week Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres will be seen in a revival of "The Sheik." Thursday of next week will be notable for the appearance at the Ambassador of Leatrice Joy in "The Clinging Vine," which will be succeeded on Friday by Laura La Plante in Universal's production of "Poker Faces." On Saturday Jack Holt will be the Ambassador's pictured star in the film version of Zane Gray's "Forlorn River."

The following feature bookings announced for the week of September 26 at Crandall's Central theater: Sunday and Monday, star cast in "Desperate Moments;" Tuesday and Wednesday, George O'Brien and Olive Borden in the Fox production of "Fig Leaves;" Thursday, Mary Brian and Lionel Barrymore in "Paris at Midnight;" Friday, Priscilla Dean in "The Speeding Venus;" Saturday only, Florence Vidor in "You Never Know Women." Each daily bill will be augmented by short-reel camera subjects and melodious pipe organ accompaniments and solo intervals.

Morgan Inspects Building Projects

Joseph P. Morgan, general manager of the theaters founded in Washington and contiguous territory by Harry M. Crandall, executive vice president of the Stanley-Crandall Co., under whose control these theaters now are operated, last week spent several days in a tour of inspection of the new building projects being featured by the Stanley-Crandall Co. Mr. Morgan left the Capital on Thursday and journeyed to Frederick, Md., where a new Stanley-Crandall house is being erected under the general supervision of John J. Zink with Mr. Morgan as the supervising head of the company of ownership. From Frederick Mr. Morgan proceeded to Baltimore, Md., where the process of razing the old Academy of Music is well under way with the end in view that on the site of the Academy will rise one of the most pretentious motion picture palaces in the East or, as a matter of fact, anywhere on the continent. As planned by the Stanley-Crandall Co. the new theater on the site of the old academy will be a 4,000-seat house surpassed by none in beauty, spaciousness or comfort.

Mollie Williams Has Been Busy Woman

That Mollie Williams has been a very busy little lady during her summer vacation may best be illustrated by a glimpse into her activities. Immediately after the close of last season she embarked for Europe, visited Paris to take a peep at the fashionable creations of the smart modistes, left a good-sized check with them for some of the most gorgeous wardrobe that has ever crossed the Atlantic to adorn the pretty feminines of Mollie's show, and then the energetic directoress, actress, chansonette, and business manager of her attraction, rushed to Berlin to pay a visit to Baruch's studio, the most prominent scenic establishment and costume shop of the world. Mollie could not resist securing a number of glittering and marvelous settings, effects and wardrobe and after she put a good dent into her bank balance she still kept on moving, her next stop having been Vienna, where she likewise exchanged American gold for Austrian tinsel. After her return she lost no time in securing the acme of entertainers for her present revue, which is this week's attraction at the Gayety theater.

President Changed.

Monday night will be an eye-opener for patrons of the new President Players, particularly to those who have been occasional guests at that house in the last several years. With its new lobby and complete rehabilitation inside, the house looks like a spic and span new structure.

AMELITA GALLI-CURCI, world's greatest coloratura, who will appear at the Washington Auditorium this season under the management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

Le Paradis Open On Wednesday Night

Favored entertainers and an entirely new decorative setting, described as "gorgeously frivolous," will be featured at the formal opening of Le Paradis for the winter season, which will take place on Wednesday, September 22. The equally renowned Club Chantecler will open just two days later on Friday, September 26.

Hugh black lace parasols as big as the usual lawn umbrella will be dotted about the room. If you are lucky enough to secure a table under one of these astonishing parasols, you can look right up through the lace at romantic Italian star lights that give out an amber glow as softly subdued as that of real starlight. Hangings of black and gold brocade are in perfect harmony with stars and parasols. The ensemble was designed by Mrs. Meyer Davis who is an expert in the art of interior decoration.

Felix Solari and Walter Kolk, Le Paradis favorites of last year, are back from their summer wanderings on the year's fun track. In order to help to live up to their standards as de luxe entertainers, this pair of cut-ups have invested in the most magnificent appearing musical instruments ever seen.

By ELISABETH ELLICOTT POE.

THE first of October will find the musical season in swing in Washington. October also promises a rare treat in the second of the Coolidge festival of chamber music, formerly known as the Berkshire festival of chamber music, to be held in the Coolidge music auditorium of the Library of Congress.

The music division of the Library of Congress, cooperating with the Coolidge music foundation, has obtained noted artists to present this first important musical treat of the season. It is to be hoped that it is but the forerunner of a season which will be notable in brilliancy and achievement from a musical point of view.

It is always a gratification to note that Washington musicians are not only effective in production of music but in musical comment as well. Prof. Otto T. Simon has just published an interesting brochure, "The Voice in Singing," intended for those interested in singing. Prof. Simon is regarded as an authority in the art.

Many of his pithy remarks deserve quotation. They contain valuable hints for young singers, particularly when he says: "The vowel is the heart throb in singing. It alone is affected by music. The consonant is the vertebra. It weighs the vowel to earth and stiffly and arrogantly holds itself aloof from the influence of music."

And again: "Breath control is a definite physical functioning, a play of muscles in antagonism, that encourages breath exudation. The Italians have a saying, 'Be a miser with the breath.'"

Even the large auditorium's capacity is being tested by the demand of seats for the Philadelphia orchestra series of five concerts to be given on Tuesday afternoons, October 26, November 23, January 19, March 1 and March 29.

The management of the auditorium will extend the division curtain back several rows permitting a much larger capacity on the floor to meet the demand for season tickets.

Eva Whitford Lovette, who has been passing the past four months in New York city, will return to this city on September 22. Mrs. Lovette will open her Washington studio on October 1 and will resume her position as vocal instructor on the faculty of National Park seminary. She will sing on the faculty program on October 8.

Miss Esther Linkins, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs, has invited federation board members and a few other musicians to meet Mrs. Dickinson, Miss Helen Fetter and Miss Jessica MacBride informally in her home Wednesday evening, September 29.

Mrs. Dickinson represented the local federation at the Church Music conference at Chautaugua in July and will give her report of the conference. Miss MacBride and Miss Fetter will tell of their musical experience in Europe.

Thursday, October 7, at 8:45 p. m., Bach, "Brandenburg" concerto No. 3, for string orchestra. Malipiero, Ricercari, for eleven instruments. Bloch, concerto grosso, for string orchestra and piano. Ernest Bloch, conductor.

Friday, October 8, at 11 a. m., Joseph Jongen, string quartet, op. 67. Albert Huybrechts, sonata for violin and piano. (E. S. Coolidge prize, 1926.) Cesar Franck, string quartet, the "Pro Arte" string quartet of Brussels, and Mr. E. Robert Schmitz, pianist.

Friday, October 8, at 4:30 p. m., N. Berezowsky, theme and fantastic variations, op. 7, for clarinet, string quartet and piano. A. F. Goedicke, five Russian folk songs for voice, violin, violoncello and piano. S. I. Taneiev, quintet, op. 30, for strings and piano. The "Stringwood ensemble" of New York, and Boris Saslawsky, barytone.

The New York Philharmonic orchestra announces a series of three concerts to be given at the National theater Tuesday afternoons, November 16, January 4 and March 8. These concerts will be under the leadership of Conductors Willem Mengelberg and Wilhelm Furtwaengler. The first program announced is Weber, Overture, "Euryanthe" (Strawinsky), Little Suites; Casella, "La Giara" (Strauss), "Don Quixoté."

Henri Verbrugghen, Belgian conductor, will be heard in Washington this winter. He will conduct the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra in a concert to be given on a Sunday evening. An orchestra concert on a Sunday evening will be an innovation here.

Mrs. Frances Cureton Hubbard has been the organist at Calvary Baptist church during August. Mrs. Hubbard will join her sister, Miss Virginia Cureton, at Harpers Ferry, to fill out the season at Hill Top House as pianist in the dinner orchestra.

George Cornwell, pianist, of Forestville, Va., and pupil of Georgia E. Miller, has returned home, having completed the six-week summer session at Rutgers university in New Brunswick, N. J. Mr. Cornwell's work was highly commended by the professors and students of the university. Mr. Cornwell did solo work in the interpretation classes, and at the closing recital he played Liszt's "Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody."

Katherine Riggs, harpist, has returned to Washington after a summer's motoring in New England. Miss Riggs spent some time at Ogunquit, Maine, and at Marblehead, Mass., and on her way back made visits at New London, Conn., and in Philadelphia. During her six weeks' stay at Marblehead Miss Riggs was solo harpist at St. Michael's Episcopal church, playing also at Old North Congragational church, in Marblehead, and at St. John's Episcopal church, Charlestown, in Boston.

The Carbauh Concert company, composed of Earl Carbauh, barytone; Bob Carbauh, xylophone, and Lillian Carbauh, accompanist, just completed a fifteen-week Chautauqua engagement which took them through the New England States and Canada. Mr. Carbauh will resume his studio work September 20.

Ruby Smith Stahl returned to her duties at the First Congregational church last Sunday, after an absence of six weeks spent in Maine, singing at the Samoset, at Rockland, and Mount Kineo house, at Kineo.

Rehearsals of the choir began last night, and since the seating space will be larger this year it will be possible somewhat to enlarge the organization. The other members of the quartet, Dorothy Wilson Halbach, contralto; W. Madison Taylor, tenor, and John Chandler Smith, bass, with Charles T. Ferry at the organ, began their year's work September 5.

Anna Sloan, cellist, has returned to Washington. She will leave the city shortly to fill musical engagements in other cities.

Alice Eversman will reopen her studio October 1.

Elena de Sayn, Russian violinist, has returned to Washington and reopened her studio. A new course in concert repertoire and interpretation for advanced students founded on the principles of the Ecole Normale of Paris will begin October 1.

The Catholic University Schola Cantorum will meet Tuesday at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of MacMahon hall. This will be the first meeting of the year. The schola will sing at the opening pontifical mass of the university on Sunday, September 26.

Goldie Dressler Hutchins, contralto, made her first appearance last Sunday at the Hamline Methodist Episcopal church, when the quartet began its season's work. Mrs. Hutchins has been soloist for the last five years at the First Congregational church, and has held similar positions in other churches here and in Indianapolis. The other members of the quartet are Ethel D. Stickles, soprano; Clarence P. Lewis, tenor, and John H. Marvillo, bass and choir director. Edith B. Athey is organist.

Music at All Souls' Unitarian church this year will be provided by Miss Gretchen Hood, soprano; Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, bass, and Lewis Atwater, organist. This regular staff will be supplemented occasionally by other voices and instruments.

WRC will broadcast this morning's service. The musical numbers will include two cello solos by Richard Lorleberg. "Cantilele," (Goltermann) and "Prayer" (Wolf-Ferrari); soprano solo, "The Everlasting" (Mendelssohn); bass solo, "Spirit of God" (Neidlinger). The organ numbers will be "Processional" (Du Bois), and "Grand Choeur" (Cesar Franck).

Miss Helen Burkart has returned from Woods Hole, Mass.

DIET FOR ANEMIA.

WE are accustomed to telling people with simple anemias and secondary anemias that a proper diet will aid materially in a cure. On the other hand, we have frequently told persons with pernicious anemia that diet would not cure them.

In a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association, two groups of physicians gave diets which they have found of great service in treating all forms of anemia, including pernicious anemia. It will be several years before the last word can be said as to the permanence of the improvement in pernicious anemia.

From 3 to 6 ounces of cooked calf's liver; occasionally an equal quantity of lamb's kidney was substituted.

Four ounces lean beef or mutton. Not less than 10 ounces of vegetables containing 1 to 10 per cent carbohydrates — especially lettuce and spinach.

Eight to 16 ounces of fruit, especially peaches, apricots, strawberries, pineapple, oranges and grapefruit.

About 1 1-3 ounces of fat derived from butter and cream. However, animal fats and oils were excluded as much as possible.

If desired, 1 egg and 8 ounces of milk.

Breads, potato and cereal enough to make a daily allowance of 2,000 to 3,000 calories composed of about 11 ounces carbohydrates, 4½ ounces good proteins and not more than 2 1-3 ounces of fat.

Grossly sweet foods were not given, but sugar was allowed very sparingly.

Drs. Koessler and Maurer and Miss Laughlin used a very different diet in the treatment of pernicious and secondary enemias.

Koessler's diet:

Cod liver oil, about 1 teaspoonful four times a day—two-thirds of an ounce a day; butter, 2 ounces a day; milk, 6 glasses a day—about 3 pints; cream, 3 ounces a day; 2 or 3 eggs, or a total of 5 ounces; 3 ounces orange juice, 3 ounces of raw or canned tomatoes, 3 ounces of lettuce or raw cabbage, 3 ounces spinach or carrots, 3 ounces meat (liver, kidney, sweetbreads or brains), 3 ounces bread (whole wheat bread made with milk).

The central idea in the Koessler diet is to supply plenty of vitamins. Cod liver oil, butter and cream supply vitamin A especially, whole wheat bread made with milk is rich in vitamins A and B. Milk and cream contain A, B and C. Eggs are rich in A and B. The vegetables contain B and C and some A. Spinach contains A and B; lettuce, A, B and C; fresh, raw cabbage, A, B and C; Swiss chard, A and B; string beans, A, B and C; carrots, A, B and C; cauliflower, A, B and C; endives, A and C; pears, A and B; sweet potatoes, A and B; squash, A; fruits, A and some B; liver and kidney, A and B and some C.

CARE OF BABY.

Mrs. E. W. L. writes: My baby girl is 4 months old and perfectly healthy.

1. Shall I commence giving her thin cereal yet?
2. Is an ounce and a half of orange juice daily about right?
3. I expose her skin to the sun's rays every day. Is it all right to expose her face, too, as long as her eyes are in the shade?
4. Will this coarsen her skin?

REPLY.

1. If she is bottle fed, you may. If breast fed, you should not.
2. Yes, if she has been drinking orange juice daily. Otherwise, begin with a tablespoonful.
3. Yes.
4. Somewhat.

SAFE TO SWIM.

V. G. writes: My baby is 5 weeks old and breast fed. How long before I can play tennis and go swimming? May I dive from high and low springboards? The baby is fat, strong and healthy, and I also am strong and healthy.

REPLY.

If you are strong, and if you are willing to start gradually, you can play, swim and dive now.

CHILD HAS INFECTION.

Mrs. T. S. writes: My boy, who is just 16 months old, starts to get hot every afternoon. He does not seem to want any food except his milk. He stays very hot all night, but toward morning he gets all right again. In the morning I give him orange juice, and he drinks it very greedily. He is cuting his stomach teeth. Do you think that is the cause?

REPLY.

Teething is not the cause of your baby's trouble, although I have no way of knowing what is.

He has some kind of infection. Since you do not mention diarrhea nor cough, I assume the infection is not in his lungs or in his digestive apparatus. Malaria, typhoid fever, colon infection of the kidney, infection of the ear are possibilities.

You should have him examined without delay.

RUTH AND PETER

By Achmed Abdullah

(Copyright, 1926, Thompson Feature Service, Inc.)

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Ruth Welles, young, pretty and very ambitious, secures a position as secretary to Peter Barton, a distinguished New York lawyer. She is sharing an apartment with two sisters, Edna and Hattie Mathews, and Ruth and Hattie are taking a night school course in law. Maisie Andrews formerly occupied the apartment with the girls, but is now living alone, although Riccardo Martinez, an unscrupulous adventurer, has the key to her apartment. Presently Edna marries Harry Davis, a rejected suitor of Ruth's. Meanwhile Ruth and Barton, after struggling against their feeling for some time, admit their love for each other and are married in spite of the disapproval of his mother and Nelda, his sister, who wished him to marry a certain little French countess. Barton then engages Hattie as his secretary and Ruth is dismayed to find that now she has become his wife he no longer is willing to share his business interests with her. About this time she introduces Nelda to Maisie as the result of an accidental meeting and through Maisie Nelda meets Martinez. He immediately engages in a flirtation with her hoping to obtain blackmail by compromising her. Maisie is furiously jealous and after many quarrels with Martinez is, one day, found murdered, but Martinez is able to prove an alibi. While this is taking place, Ruth is growing more and more jealous, first of Hattie because as Barton's secretary she shares his business affairs, and second of Annette de Lorraine, the little French countess, who is Barton's client. Hattie resigns from her position as secretary and she and Ruth open a law office together. Barton is bitterly opposed to it and succeeds in ruining their business. After this failure Hattie returns to Barton's employ and Ruth goes south with Nelda to recover from a nervous breakdown. There they meet Martinez, who now calls himself Del Santa Cruz, and he renews his flirtation with Nelda, finally demanding money and threatening to ruin her reputation unless she complies. Ruth herself enters into a flirtation with him hoping to find some way of saving Nelda, who returns to New York on her advice. In New York Barton, having heard gossip on the matter, demands an interview with Nelda.

CHAPTER XXX.

"The Coward."

Nelda, on her end of the telephone wire, heard the sharp click. She sat down, trembling like a leaf. She was afraid of her brother. She might tease him. But when he used such a tone as he just had, she obeyed him. She could not help herself.

But—what was it? What did he want of her? What had he found out?

Oh—what could it be?

Her heart gave a sick throb. Perhaps—Meredith? Could anything have happened to her husband? Had Peter learned first?

No, no! In that case he would have come to her at once; would not have spoken so sternly.

What was it? Had he found out—the truth?

She ordered her car and went to his office. All the way down she was a prey to uncertainty and terror and nervous speculation.

He rose as she entered his private office; locked the door.

"Well?" she asked, trying to make her voice sound defiant and not succeeding.

"I want the truth! Nelda!"

"The truth?"

"Yes. Why did you leave Palm Beach so suddenly—and return here?"

She forced a laugh.

"Dear old idiot! My teeth—of course! What else?"

"You lie!"

"Peter!"

"I repeat—you lie! I have seen Dr. Morgan. He told me there's nothing wrong with your teeth!"

"Neuritis!"

"Stop bluffing! I want the truth!"

"You're not the district attorney! You've no right to cross-examine me!"

"Not the right, but the duty! I'm your brother!"

"That doesn't make me responsible to you!" she flashed out.

"Perhaps not. But in Meredith's absence I assume the responsibility."

"Oh, very well," petulantly. "What crime am I supposed to be guilty of?"

"That's just what I don't know. But I'm going to know—before you leave this room!"

She began to feel hunted, trapped. She looked about her frantically; took refuge in pyrotechnics.

"It's utterly ridiculous! You are behaving like a silly fool! I'm going home!"

She rose.

"Sit down!" he thundered.

Her knees gave way. She slumped back into the chair, staring at him with frightened, betraying eyes. For a fleeting moment she longed to confess everything, the whole miserable business, to cast its burden on his broad shoulders. But he looked so stern, his mouth set in a straight line, his heavy eyebrows lowered. She did not dare. Hysterically she began casting about her for some means of self-defense.

"You have quarreled with Ruth!" he said.

"I haven't!"

"I know you have!"

"How do you know?"

"I heard——"

"Gossip!"

"But true gossip! All Palm Beach knows it—and half New York. You quarreled with Ruth over—a man!"

"Don't be absurd!" she countered weakly.

"This man!" he thrust the pictorial sheet before her, and forced her to look.

Her throat worked convulsively. She pushed the paper away from her with trembling hands.

"Who is this man?" he demanded.

"I, I——" she stammered.

"I tell you who it is. Martinez—in spite of the title he calls himself by! Riccardo Martinez!"

"You—you—oh—how did you know?"

Peter laughed shortly.

Nelda was silent, and he continued:

"Tell me what's been going on down there!"

"Nothing!"

"The truth—I want it! Whom are you trying to protect? Yourself—or Ruth?"

Again she was silent. She was thinking:

"If he is merely jealous of Ruth—well—so much the better for me! It will keep him off the right scent—and give me time—give Ruth time, too, to help me! Later on Ruth will be able to convince him that his suspicions were unfounded."

She shrugged her shoulders.

"I know nothing!" she replied.

"Then why," he demanded, "did you and Ruth tell people in Palm Beach that you had to hurry to New York because Meredith was coming home? You and Ruth should have stuck to one lie! If you do not care to confide in me I'll get to the bottom of this—this mire—myself—without your help. You were always a silly, frivolous, little fool, Nelda! It's partly Meredith's fault. I know. But—you are married to him, and you owe it to him to keep your skirts clean. I'll see that you do! I'll have a talk with Meredith when he gets back. I won't have any scandal in my family. You hear me?"

She did not reply.

"Its pretty patent to me now," he added. "You had a flirtation with this—gentleman, Ruth cut in. She had perhaps—ah—a prior claim!"

Nelda bit her lips. She might have said:

"Ruth hates him, despises him! Ruth only tried to save me from my own foolishness!"

But Nelda was a coward. The words refused to come to her lips. Instead she said feebly:

"That's not so!"

"Well, we'll see!"

"What are you going to do?" she cried.

"Never mind!"

"I—I assure you you're wrong—wrong! How can you listen to sordid gossip?"

"I—needn't—if you will tell me the truth!"

Her head dropped. Tears were in her eyes. He stared at her.

"Go home!" he said coldly. "I'm through with you—for today!"

She left, absolutely terror-stricken; her brain in a whirl; unable to control her thoughts.

After she had gone, Peter sat quite silent for a time. Then he picked up the telephone receiver and made reservations for the train leaving the following afternoon for Palm Beach.

It was the best thing, he thought. Ruth was down there, alone, with Martinez. He would surprise them, giving no warning. Nor must he give Nelda a chance to warn her—even if Nelda cared to warn her, which he doubted.

He called Hattie into his office.

"We shall have to work late today. Things to straighten out. I am going away tomorrow."

"To Palm Beach, Mr. Barton?"

"No. To Richmond. On business."

They worked until nearly midnight.

He spent a sleepless night, thinking of Ruth. He remembered how she had tried to implicate Martinez in the Maisie murder case. Perhaps it had been jealousy. Women did strange things. * * * And now, Ruth and Martinez were together again. * * *

Ruth—he loved her—had always loved her. But they had drifted apart. No, no, it hadn't been his fault! Hadn't he given her everything — everything? Hadn't he been kind, decent, generous and—faithful?

Ruth—down there—with Martinez. * * *

He left on the afternoon train. Ruth would not know of his coming.

But he had reckoned without Hattie.

Hattie had overheard him ordering his train reservation for Palm Beach; had wondered why he had told her he was going to Richmond.

Hattie, too, had heard some of the gossip.

She telephoned that night to Nelda; did not find her in; went to her house the next day.

Nelda received her; and Hattie went straight to the point, telling Nelda about Peter's sudden leaving for Florida, his informing her that he had gone to Richmond; mentioning what she knew about the gossip; and winding up:

"I don't know exactly what it's all about, Mrs. Meredith! I—please don't think me impertinent—but I thought of wiring Ruth—of warning her. Then—well—I thought I'd better come to you—and——"

Nelda thought rapidly.

"Thank you!" she replied simply. And, with sudden resolution: "I'll wire Ruth and—yes, yes, yes!—I'll go to Palm Beach myself!"

"Mr. Barton will get there first—at least a day ahead of you!"

"I—I'll arrange it somehow! Thank you again! You—you are a good friend."

"I love Ruth!"

After Hattie had gone Nelda sent a telegram to her sister-in-law.

"Have reason to believe Peter left secretly yesterday for Palm Beach."

LOS ANGELES THEATER NEW ART TEMPLE

By ADA RAINEY.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 18—The most significant art expression that I found in Los Angeles is the Metropolitan theater, the interior of which is an entirely new form of art. The architect of this inspiring interior is William Lee Woollett. The story of how this theater came to be is unusual, to say the least.

Mr. Woollett was one of a number of artists and connoisseurs who were invited to see the famous "Nude Descending the Stair," when that now historic canvas was in the nature of a sensation. He was asked by one of the guests to give his opinion concerning this much discussed painting. He had nothing to say about it then for it conveyed no definite idea to his mind. But he determined that he would find out what it meant.

This was the beginning of his interest in the new form of art. Not that he became an advocate of the famous nude, but he became aware of an entirely new point of view in art and he studied for years to know the meaning underlying abstract art, with the result that he has brought into expression an original form of art that is beautiful, intensively stimulating and effective.

Memorial to War Dead.

The Metropolitan theater was built as a memorial to the boys who fell in the world war. The interior is magnificent. It expresses the ideas that inspired the men and the tremendous force of which they were the embodiment. The expression of these ideas in symbolic form is the task that the architect has set himself. On either side of the entrance hall are two great figures that are the creations of the artists imagination. To the right is Aspiration, a creature composed of the head and shoulders of a stag, the rest of the body made in the form of a snail, bound to the earth by the snail's slow weight.

To the left is another imaginative form, embodying "They shall not pass," which commemorates the solid defiance of France. The two great figures are composed of concrete, as is the whole of the interior, yet so varied is the surface quality that one has the impression of many materials and great richness in color and texture.

There are original designs, sculptures, painted and incised, that for sheer beauty and originality have never been equaled. Yet there is a wonderful symbolism running through the whole. For instance, the form of the poppy has been conventionalized and used as a motif in the iron grill work of the doors and in the lamps used throughout the interior.

A noteworthy thing in this work is that the architect has also been the craftsman. He has not been content to make all the designs used in the interiors, but he has had a hand in the actual work of all the modelling, the painting of the designs and the actual construction. This is quite contrary to the practice of many architects who are mostly content to supervise the work of construction after drawing up the plans and turning over to others the execution.

Architect Is Versatile.

Mr. Woollett stands for the lifting of the crafts to a higher plane than they are at present occupying. The making of beautiful things is in self an exalted work, and when it is so considered by the community as a whole we shall greatly benefit all along the line of the objects that surround us. We will cease to have so many machine-made things and we will honor the craftsman as an artist which he is in reality.

Mr. Woollett is himself a sculptor, painter and architect, all in one. He is original in all these forms of art and he has blended them in the interior of this theater in a wonderfully harmoniously way. All the designs, are, in a way, based on the Greek. For without Greek art they could not have come into being, yet so skillfully is this concealed that only one thoroughly conversant with the history of the arts could detect this.

There is a pretty idea upon which the building is constructed, which is that it was built upon the foundation of an older building which was discovered when they began digging for the foundations. Many old columns were found which were employed in the present structure. These can be seen in certain places and form a contrast to the modern features of the decorations and the structure.

It is really entirely impossible to adequately describe the building; its richness of imagination used in the basic construction of the formation, as well as in the lighting effects, the textiles used and the unity of the whole effect. There is no hint of the familiar Doric, Ionic or Corinthian columns which some way have always seemed quite out of harmony with our present civilization.

Ideals in Concrete.

Here the artist has dared to express his conception of an ideal expressed in concrete, color and textiles, with a result that all those who are seriously interested in the evolution of a new architectural style will do well to seriously consider. It is not something bizarre and unrelated. It is based upon the structures of the past, but with a reaching toward beauty in a way that is daring, effective and magnificent. The effect of the whole upon the mind when sitting in the auditorium is restful and invigorating at the same time. It is such artists that we need to build, not only our theaters, but other public buildings as well, if we would have our cities expressive of the best of our civic ideals, and have the whole harmonious in expression.

That Los Angeles is an active art center can not be gainsaid.

Some one has aptly remarked that Los Angeles will go to see any thing once. They will go to see exhibitions of paintings of all sorts and kinds and then reserve their own judgment. Since the Pan-American exhibition held last fall there has been great tolerance for all the new forms of art. This exhibition has undoubtedly stimulated interest as well as established unity between the two Americas artistically. Art has the power to bind together nations in a common understanding as scarcely anything else can do. The Los Angeles museum bought the prize paintings and has them on permanent exhibition in their galleries. All the paintings purchased were of the progressive type which shows which way the wind is blowing.

Scholarly but Popular.

The policy of this museum is highly to be commended. It is at once scholarly and popular in the best sense of the term. At present there is on view a loan exhibition from private collections which is representative of the best in American art for the past generation. There are a few canvases by some of the representative French painters of the past generation and one by Israels, but the majority are American, who are represented by choice examples of their works.

The mere list is an inspiring one to the art lover and conjures up beauty expressed in pigment that appeals to all. Some of the artists are: Ralph Blakelock, Jerome Blum, William Baer, Jessie Botke, George de Forest Bush, Emil Carlsen, John E. Costigan, Arthur Davies, Paul Dogherty, Thomas Dewing, F. S. Frieseke, Lillian Genth, Robert Henri, George Innes, George Luks, Francis J. Murphy, Willard Metcalf, William Ritchel, Dwight W. Troyon, Ettore Titto, Guy Wiggins, James McNeil, Whistler and William L. Lathrop.

A special exhibition of the works of Arnold Ronnebeck and Warren Wheelock is holding the attention of the public. The carvings and painting by Wheelock call for special mention, as they are possessed of undoubted originality and charm. Mr. Wheelock has capable technique and something to say that is sincere and entirely unusual. "The Chinese Poetess" and "Lady at Prayer," as well as "Madonna and Child," have almost a medieval fervor and beauty in them. The sculptures by Mr. Ronnebeck do not impress with great sincerity. They have in them something of a pose in the point of view not quite convincing. Mr. Ronnebeck, who was in Washington for a winter, is at present acting head of the Denver Art museum.

Mexican Painting on View.

The presentation of the painting by John Carroll, who received a prize at the Pan American, is made the center of interest in a room filled with modern art, which this museum is at present interested in advocating. A flower piece by Dasberg is beautifuly painted. It received the third prize at the same exhibition. Mr. Dasberg is at present a member of the art colony at Santa Fe, N. Mex., and is attracting much in interest in his work. A painting by Diego Rivera, the painter who received the first prize at the Pan American exhibition, is really the "clou" of the room, and it has been the focal point in much discussion in regard to his broad and modern method of painting.

Rivera is a Mexican and is the leading painter in the Mexican school, which has attracted much interest recently. It is a much-lauded policy of this museum that it is so decidedly in the vanguard of the new movement, which, whether we entirely approve or not, is surely coming to be the most talked of and the most general mode of expression among the artists who are making a name for themselves at present.

Through the generosity of William Preston Harrison the museum is offered the recent collection of modern French paintings which this art patron is at present making in Paris. Mr. Harrison is now making his first visit to Paris in 20 years and has had the benefit of the judgment of Andre Lhote, eminent authority on French art.

This collection will doubtless be accepted and will add much to the richness and value of the museum. It consists of paintings by Picasso, Matisse, Derain, Vlanick, Dufy, Othon, Friesz and Marc Chagall. Then there are works by Gromatre, Dufresne, Van Dongen, Utrillo, Jean Marchand, Paschin and Waroquier. Indeed all the groups of the various movements, recent and current, are to be represented in this collection. This will make Los Angeles richer in modern paintings than almost any other American museum.

Many Art Galleries.

There are numerous galleries where American painters can exhibit their works. The city is rich in art galleries. Chief among them and perhaps the most extensive is the Biltmore Salon. This gallery is in the huge Biltmore hotel. Along the long corridor which extends for a block are paintings by the representative Western painters. The paintings which hang on the walls of the corridors are more or less permanent, or at least they are not often changed. But there are other smaller rooms where are held from time to time "one man shows."

At present there is a group exhibition of Western painters consisting of Jack W. Smith, J. Manheim, A. M. Hazard, Edgar Payne, Thomas L. Hunt, Kathryn Leighton, Carl Oscar Borg and others. The work shown is good, rather conventional in aspect and almost entirely of Western subjects, mostly landscapes.

At Cannel & Chaffin's there is also a group exhibition by George Demont Otis, Paul Lauritz, Leland Curtis, Edgar Payne, D. B. Stuber and F. Grayson Sayre. There is a painting by Frank Brangwyn of "King John Signing the Magna Charta" and a self-portrait by Frank Duveneck that call for special mention. Omission must not be made, however, of the wood block prints by Elizabeth Keith.

Miss Keith is an Englishwoman who has spent some time in China and has caught the spirit of the Chinese better than any artist whose prints I have seen. They are of the buildings of old China, the figures of the mandarins, the boys on the streets and the Chinese landscape. She evinces much feeling in her subjects and is most successful in her use of color. There is distinction in the little exhibit that will be welcomed by all lovers of art.

At the Stendhl galleries there are paintings from Morocco, Mexico and California by Gordon Couts and paintings of the desert by Henry B. Waggonor. Mr. Waggonor is a Californian, but loves the desert of Arizona and is most successful in depicting it. He catches the spirit of the great open spaces, the structure of the mountains and the beauty of the vivid coloring.

His interpretations are poetic and filled with the loveliness of the desert at sunset and at sunrise. Indeed, so enamoured is this artist with the Arizona desert that he forsakes civilization completely for months at a time, lives in a tent and gives himself up entirely to painting. With this love of his subject it would be strange if the artist had not expressed much of the beauty on his canvases.

'SHOW BOAT' AN APPROACH TO U. S. GOAL

The public will have to determine whether Edna Ferber has written the great American novel in "Show Boat," just released by Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y. "Show Boat" is an approach to that desired volume, however. The legal controversy raging over the book, due to interpretation of certain characters, can not affect its literary merit, and after all only a small part is devoted to a description of Chicago's picturesque Gamblers' Alley of the '90s.

The gaming note is struck simply in following the fortunes of Gaylord Ravenal, gentleman adventurer and some time actor. There is a Micawber resemblance in Gaylord Ravenal, and like that gentleman of Dickens' creation, Gaylord always was "waiting for something to turn up."

The Dickens' note is struck again and again in other characters. Naturally, they are Americanized and every figure is a star in the array of picturesque folk Miss Ferber has gatheed together to tell this thrilling tale of yesterday and the Mississippi.

Certainly there is something arresting in a prim and proper Yankee school marm becoming the wife of a Mississippi steamboat captain and chatelaine of the Cotton Blossom Floating Palace theater, the famous "Show Boat" of the story.

When Capt. Andy Hawkes, a true-to-life character, dies and his wife, Parthenia Ann Hawkes, becomes proprietor of the "Show Boat," she runs it according to Puritan ideas with a strict eye to business. At 80 she dies a millionaire and a character known in every hamlet along the Mississippi.

The captain, who killed a man in his youth, can see no reason why his daughter Magnolia should not become the bride of Ravenal, who also has killed a man.

Magnolia, whom her mother endeavored to rear according to her own strict principles, climbs through the windows of the "Show Boat" to witness the performances and becomes letter perfect in the parts of the players. Despite the influence of her mother, Magnolia becomes leading lady of the troop. Ravenal becomes leading man and her husband.

When gambler's luck and discouragement causes Gaylord to desert his wife and child, Magnolia tries the stage, but, while she achieves some success, she finds it different from playing to the sympathetic audiences along the Mississippi.

Kim insists on a real dramatic school, and spends much time in study.

Just as her mother had stepped into the dictatorship of the Show Boat, so Magnolia, the mother of a successful Broadway actress, takes her place at the helm of the Show Boat when death claims Parthy Ann Hawkes. Kim and her young husband journey to the Mississippi to induce Magnolia to leave and are presented with a fortune left by Parthy Ann and the remembrance of contentment of Magnolia as their reward.

All the world is a stage, according to the trend of the story, and the flotsam of humanity as it flowed in and out the floating theater represented every emotion and characteristic.

News Notes on Books and Authors

"The right of the American citizen to command the processes of the law for the protection of his rights is the most valuable possession that he has, and some day he will be aroused to the importance of seeing that its value is not impaired by a failure to make needed improvements in substance and in methods."

These lines are from Henry W. Taft's new book, "Law Reform: Papers and Addresses by a Practicing Lawyer," published by MacMillan. ($3.00.) Mr. Taft has practiced law in New York city for more than forty years, and his convictions and opinions, reached through long experience, are presented in a way to interest both laymen and lawyers. He discusses not only law reform, but justice and the poor, the press and the courts, freedom of speech and the espionage act, will contests in New York, and other matters of current and perennial importance.

A gift of $37,500 by John D. Rockefeller, jr., to the American Library association for the support of the Paris library school during 1926-27 is announced by the library association's headquarters here. In accepting the gift the association undertakes to obtain funds from other sources for the two following years, 1927-28 and 1928-29.

Supported in the past by grants from the American committee for work in devasted France, the school has trained librarians from many nations who have sought to learn American methods and apply them in their own countries. The French Library association, the French Committee on Modern Libraries, the Ecole des Chartes, the French National library and other French institutions have indorsed the work of the school and cooperated with it. It is conducted under the auspices of the A. L. A., and Miss Sarah C. N. Bogle, of Chicago, assistant secretary of the association, is director of the school. She has recently sailed for Paris to visit the school and make plans for the next year's course.

The recent appearance, from the house of Appleton, of James Madison Stifler's "The Religion of Benjamin Franklin," has attracted considerable attention, not only from those interested primarily in the or in the more definitely "religious" phases of the subject, but also from those who find an appeal in material relating to the beginnings of our native culture. Indeed all who have an interest in Americana, as such, will find this book altogether to their taste, for it furnishes a new and interesting contribution in several respects. The Americana collector, in a recent issue, calls it "an important addition to our Franklin literature." "Its author," continues this publication, "in his enthusiasm, forgets at times the object of his investigation and considers other Franklin matters, which, true enough, are somewhat corelated to the subject. This helps to make the book interesting reading and will encourage the one who should feel adverse toward reading a theological dissertation, which this book is not * * * The author, who correctly comes to the conclusion that according to conventional standards Franklin was a heretic, has gathered in a scholarly way enough material to prove that Franklin during all his life was guided by religious principles, although the ethical end was predominating."

Book Reviews

ONCE ON A TIME. By A. A. Milne (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

This is a book for those who believe in fairies, and those who do not soon will after they begin this book. It is a fairy story from a grownup's standpoint. In this book by the author of "When We Were Very Young" life is very real, not always straightforward, the princes and princesses are not all good or all bad. Dr. Milne holds that no one can write a book for children unless he write it for himself first. The book is full of satire suggestive of the characters of the kaiser, Lloyd George and other history makers which the reader will have to pick out for himself.

THE DUFFER HANDBOOK OF GOLF. By Grantland Rice (The MacMillan Co., New York).

The text of the book consists of sixty chapters on the various angles of golf as a science, as a diversion and as a recreation. This book will be of value to the golfer for it not only presents the lighter side of the game, but many points useful in actual playing.

Clare Briggs, cartoonist of the New York Herald-Tribune, has drawn seventy-five pictures on golf for this publication.

WHERE THE SOD SHANTY STOOD. By Virgil D. Boyles and O. W. Coursey. (Educator Supply Co., Mitchell, South Dakota.)

This is a series of chapters on the old settlers of the region of South Dakota and is full not only of human interest but of the thoughts and motives which actuated these settlers, and those who have moved forward on the very ground on which the sod shanty once stood. Each chapter of this story is complete in itself and written in a most entertaining and realistic fashion. The birth and growth and the progress of the country, hard work and high adventure can be traced on these pages.

AN OUTLINE OF CHRISTIANITY. THE RISE OF THE MODERN CHURCHES. (BETHLEHEM PUBLISHERS, NEW YORK.)

The third volume of the series known as "An Outline of Christianity," keeps pace with the general excellence and value of the volumes which preceded it.

The directing editor was that eminent theologian and scholar, the Rev. Dr. Shailer Matthews, dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago. Associated with him in its compilation was an executive editorial board, including many of the most noted American churchmen, representing many creeds.

In addition to its text the volume is a treasure house of illustrations, which are in themselves landmarks in the progress of the churches of whose history they are parts.

The great movement of the Reformation is set forth in its historical aspects, but without either malice or bias. The claim is made in the introduction to this portion of the book, that the modern world came into being with the Reformation, which revolutionized the social and political, as well as the religious life of the West. The editors find that the Protestant Reformation "had its beginning in the work of Martin Luther." A good description is given of this great religious leader. The story moves on into recitals of the part played by Calvin; the Church of England and other religious bodies in the general movement of the Reformation. It is interesting to note that a member of the Society of Jesus, Prof. Francis Mannhardt, of St. Louis university, has written the chapter entitled "The Roman Catholic Church Since the Reformation."

Americans will be particularly interested in the chapters on "Christianity and Democracy," showing the part taken in our national life by Protestant church groups within our midst. Other chapters are devoted to Christian missions and present religious tendencies.

THE FIGHTING SLOGAN. By H. A. Cody. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

The plots and dangers of the Canada of sixty years ago involves young Drum Rowan and the girl he loves. They are plunged into the labyrinth of intrigues of the disunited country, threatened with invasion from 20,000 Fenians, lining her orders intent on her destruction. The only way to meet this kind of fire and menace is with fire, and the loyalty and bravery which inspires the heroism of the two outstanding characters of the book is very well told. There is romance, naturally, made all the more romantic because of the setting and the stirring days of the young and primitive country.

A VOICE IS CALLING. By Arnold Blome. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

The book is written around the author's personal experiences in coming into Christian Science, the benefits he has derived from it and the cures he has been able to effect. It is intended as an inspirational volume and to convince the reader that Christ's coming to individual consciousness is a matter of personal effort.

It contains also many informative letters from Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy and Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson.

FORD AGAIN IN PUBLIC EYE NOW AS AUTHOR OF WORKS ON HIS PICTURE OF FUTURE

Henry Ford as an author in which he modestly admits the collaboration of Samuel Crowther, is the unusual guise he assumes for his new appearance before the American people.

In "Today and Tomorrow" (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York) the American Croesus has written down his dream not only of the immediate present, but of the future which is to be.

Is it a part of the instinct for economy which has been one of the secrets of Mr. Ford's success, that he sends unbound copies of his new work for review in the press? This practice is not common with aspiring authors longing for the accolade of critical approval Perhaps Mr. Ford has counted on the news interest which surrounds any action of his. He is right in this except that literature is a jealous mistress and a place within her sacred precincts can not be bought for gold. Henry Ford, the billionaire, in the land of literary accomplishment, must produce, just as the poet in a garret can not become famous through the mere act of starving.

Tells of Industry.

The most interesting thing on the first page of Mr. Ford's book is his statement as follows: "Take just one idea—a little idea in itself—an idea that any one might have had, but which fell to me to develop—that of making a small, strong, simple automobile, to make it cheaply, and pay high wages in its making. On October 1, 1908, we made the first of our present type of small cars. On June 4, 1924, we made the ten millionth. Now, in 1926, we are in our thirteenth million."

Mr. Ford points out the affiliated industries which follow the making of motors.

It is amazing to trace with him the growth of his business in terms of human beings. Three million men, women and children get their livings directly out of this idea of his which blossomed into achievement eighteen short years ago. This figure does not include those concerned in the distribution or maintenance of the Ford cars.

The author uses these facts as a text on which to preach a sermon on opportunity as it exists in the United States of America today. With the cheerfulness of the billionaire he says that "the fact is that a generation ago there were a thousand men to every opportunity, while today there are a thousand opportunities for every man." This is due to the maturing of industry which opened up a whole new world of opportunity.

Work Convicts.

"A criminal is a nonproducer," he says, "but when he has been caught and sentenced it is very wasteful to continue him as a nonproducer. He can surely be turned into a producer and probably into a man. Yet, because we value human time so highly, we do not hear much about the waste of manpower in prisons, nor do we hear much of the terrible waste of withdrawing support from the families of the convicts and throwing them on the community." There is much wisdom in what Mr. Ford writes in this regard.

The Ford volume pictures a new Utopia of industry. It may come, and if it does, the author will have done more than his full share in bringing such a paradise about.

That Henry Ford is a different Henry Ford than the angel of the peace ship of yesterday is plainly to be seen in his final chapter, "The Wealth of Nations." He sees war now as the result of poverty—especially of poverty of thought. The Henry Ford of today is coy about interfering in European situations. There is a hint of a criticism of the League of Nations in this chapter.

FORMER CAPITAL WOMAN WRITES STORY ON VIKING DISCOVERY OF AMERICA

Clara Sharpe Hough, author of "Leif the Lucky" (the Century Co., New York), a romance of the Viking discovery of North America, was at one time a resident of Washington. She is a niece of Lieut. Col. L. W. Prunty, U. S. A., a veteran officer who has had several details at the War Department.

When Mrs. Hough first came to Washington in 1918 she was Miss Clara Sharpe. She had taken her college degree at Mills college in California and followed it with two years of post-graduate work at Columbia university. Here she did scenario work in the Department of Agriculture. Late in the war she was here with her husband, who was an assistant to Herbert Bayard Swope, of the war industries board.

The author herself is now a resident of New Bedford, Mass. It was in this old whaling port, now a cotton manufacturing city, in the heart of the Viking country that her novel was finished. It had its genesis out on the Pacific coast.

"Leif the Lucky" starts out where the sagas stop. Upon their bare outlines the author has built a romance of discovery and conflict. Love and religion bring the clashes. The narrative recites the love-rivalry of Leif Ericsson and his brother Thorwald; it pictures the triumph of Christianity over paganism in the soul of the Norsemen.

This is Mrs. Hough's first pretentious story, although she began writing fiction in her undergraduate days. She sold her first short story to "The Youth's Companion" in 1914. Mrs. Hough has devoted much of her time to active newspaper work. Twice her stories have appeared in annual selections of best newspaper stories. She has been a social worker on New York's East Side and is now secretary of her local Girl Scout council. She was the first woman library trustee of New Bedford.

60 Per Cent of Manufacturing Activities Have Abandoned Steam-Driven Machinery.

POWER CENTRALIZATION MAKES RAPID STRIDES

The increasing use of electricity in industry operations and the integration of public utility electric plants are outstanding developments in the electric power field.

Sixty per cent of American industry is already electrified, and manufacturers show a growing disposition to purchase electric power rather than to generate it themselves in private plants.

One of the chief reasons for this increasing popularity of central station service may be found in the relative economies of operation attributable to consolidation and interconnection among central station plants.

"Probably the remarkable extent to which electricity is being utilized in industrial operations throughout the United States is not generally realized. Only about two-fifths of the electricity available finds employment in domestic and commercial uses and in transportation. The remaining three-fifths is used in three industrial fields, namely, manufacturing, mining and irrigation.

Central Station Popular.

"A survey of electric power consumed in manufacturing industries during 1924, published recently by the Electric World, showed 60 per cent electrification in that branch. Inasmuch as the manufacturing industries consume about four times as much electrical power as mining and irrigation combined, the survey may be considered representative of the entire industrial field of electricity. The lowering cost of electricity, with which users are familiar, makes it increasingly attractive to industry. Thus in 1918 less than 9,000,000-horsepower of motors in the manufacturing industry was driven by electricity. In 1924 over 22,000,000-horsepower was so driven.

"Along with the increasing consumption of electricity there has developed a tendency among manufacturers to purchase their electric power rather than generate it themselves in private plants. Within the past decade, the central station industry has very definitely assumed the position of leadership in the manufacturing power field.

"There are doubtless a number of causes for this, but certainly it would seem that no one circumstance has done more to carry the central station to its position of preeminence during the last decade than the integrating movement among central stations. The total number of operating systems has decreased by about one-sixth since 1918.

"During this same period of concentration of management and plant; the demand for central station service has more than doubled."

LAW LIBRARY IS FREE TO LAWYER TENANTS

Chicago Skyscraper Offers an Odd Attraction as Inducement.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Swimming pools, gymnasiums, day nurseries and recreation rooms are among newer inducements offered tenants, but one of Chicago's oldest skyscrapers has for some 30 years used perhaps an even more novel form of attraction.

The Ashland block, in the center of the downtown district, maintains on one of its upper floors a law library of more than 10,000 volumes. It is kept up to date, with all the newest statues and decisions, at no cost to those who use it. The library is believed to be the only one of its kind in the city, if not the entire country. The majority of the offices in the building are occupied by lawyers, and most of the judges in the city have at one time been located there.

A. J. Alexander, wealthy Kentuckian, built the Ashland block when tall buildings were few in Chicago. "It was his first venture and the proposed height worried him. Because he was afraid the building would not be safe, engineers constructed a foundation sufficient for twenty stories instead of seventeen.

Lighthouse Is Tribute To Wife and Daughter

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—A 50-foot stone monument surmounted by a light which can be seen miles at sea has been erected by A. A. Moore, retired attorney, on Mission peak, near Mission San Jose, as a memorial to Moore's wife and daughter.

Electric League Briefs

By N. H. BARNES, Assistant Secretary

A snappy meeting of the house electric committee was held on Wednesday of last week in the office of the chairman, G. P. Mangan. Some of those present were C. P. Hill, J. C. McLaughlin, A. M. Hyler, P. A. Davis, Howard P. Foley, L. L. Hayes, E. S. Cassedy, Frank T. Shull and J. H. Potts. The house electric will be on display before long. It is worth watching for further announcements about this.

On Tuesday there will be an important meeting of the business promotion committee of the league, of which the house electric committee is a most important part. The meeting to be held Tuesday will be in dining room B of the City club at 12:30 p. m. Howard P. Foley is chairman of the commitee and Edward R. Bateman is vice chairman.

The union contractors group of the Electric league will hold a meeting at the City club on Wednesday of this week, at 12:30 p. m. This group will meet every other Wednesday instead of weekly.

One of the features of the house electric is the fact that instead of displaying a high price house as has always been in the past, the house this year will be of the type that the average layman can consider owning—a house that sells for around $10,000. Among the active workers in selecting the furnishings and equipment for the house electric are two of Washington's widely known electrical men, of the Westinghouse Co., J. C. McLaughlin and A. M. Hyler. A. C. Eastburn, of the Graybar Electric Co., is also associated with this work.

One of the newest members of the league, E. S. Cassedy, of the General Electric Co., is already taking a part in the affairs of the organization. Mr. Cassedy is in charge of the manning of the house electric, with a staff of trained people to tell Washington what is in the home, and why it is there.

P. A. Davis is handling the electrical fixture end of the house electric demonstration. This means that one of the foremost authorities in the city on lighting fixtures will select those used in this house. Assisting Mr. Davis, and handling the layout of the wiring is John H. Potts, illuminating engineer of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

The Advertising for the house electric and for the business promotion committee of the league is being handled by C. Phillips Hill and B. E. Dement.

It's always fine to be met in the lobby of a bank by that institution's president, who with outstretched hands escorts the best customers about the ornate room. Such is the function of one Fred Schuler, of the Potomac Electric Power and member of the Electric league, who makes everyone who enters his company's building feel completely welcome. Mr. Schuler will be transported to the house electric during its display to act as its "main entrance man," so that all visitors will feel welcome.

Jere Mackessy, chairman of the sports committee of the Electric league, announces that there will be a fall golf tournament on September 28, starting at noon, at the Indian Spring Golf club. Many prizes of value will be offered, and the tournament will equal all of those famous ones which have been held in the past.

H. M. Sager, new member of the league and electrical contractor operating from 37 H street northwest, has started to take an active part in the organization, and has missed no meetings since becoming a member.

The Electric Bowling league has issued announcements that it is ready to start play for the coming winter, with a 10-team league. Last year this league played with eight teams throughout two sessions, holding about four alleys almost every night during the week. One of the features of the coming season is that the full league, with 10 alleys in a row, will roll on the same evening.

The Electric league will roll at the Convention Hall alleys starting on Wednesday. The 10 teams taking part are the National Electrical Supply Co., the Potomac Electric Power Co., Thomas Electric Co., Central Armature Works, O. R. Evans and Brother Co., Electric League of Washington Contractors, Doubleday Hill Electric Co., H. C. Roberts Electrical Supply Co., E. B. Warren Electric Co. and Howard P. Foley Co.

Costly 60-Acre Crop Put in Bank Vault

Kelso, Wash., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—A crop so valuable it was stored in a bank vault was grown this year on the farm of Alexander brothers, near Woodland, in southwestern Washington.

They planted 60 acres to peppermint, a single acre producing from 40 to 45 pounds of oil. The oil was sold at $10 a pound, bringing the value of a 5-gallon can to $400.

ELECTRIC DISTRIBUTION IS NOT LOCAL PROBLEM

Isolated Systems Disappearing Rapidly, Says Dean of Ohio State University.

HEAVY STRAIN ON CAPITAL

"It is no exaggeration to say that the time is not far distant when there will be few communties in the settled portions of the United States receiving electricity from an isolated system of generation, transmission and distribution," writes C. O. Ruggles, dean of the college of commerce, Ohio State university, in a recent issue of the Annalist.

"This means," says he, "that, so far as electric service is concerned, the problems are not at all local problems confined to the municipality, but are the problems of great systems of generation, interconnection and distribution.

"The remarkable extension in utility service in the last generation, and especially in the last ten years, is one of the outstanding economic, industrial and social facts of present history in the United States. The demands upon capital necessary to bring about this service have been enormous. The capital was neither available nor could it have been furnished for isolated systems of utility service; but, above all, it could not be furnished or secured except under a system of regulation, which, while it fully protected the public in every one of its essential interests as consumers, at the same time gave reasonable assurance of a fair governmental regulatory system upon which investors could rely for the protection of their rights.

"Not only has this expansion been tremendous in the past, but there is now no visible limit to the expansion which must take place in the future if all requirements of our social and industrial fabric are to be met."

Electric Meter Man Walks 75,000 Miles

The average reader of electric meters, going as he does from house to house once a month, walks around the world once every four years, judging by the experience of Roy Davisson, of St. Louis, Mo. This man, after twelve years of it, has covered nearly 75,000 miles, reading an average of 6,500 meters a month, or about 930,000 in all, and he is by no means run down yet.

Meter readers expect trouble with pet dogs, but in all his years of service Davisson says he has been bitten only once, and that was immediately after all St. Louis readers had been equipped with leather puttees for protection. He overconfidently defied a bad dog to bite him on the new armor and the hound took him up—on the thigh.

Motors, Run for 30 Years, Still Going

At Columbia Mills, S. C., the first motors ever installed in a textile mill are still running after 30 years of it. They were rated at 65 horsepower, but some of them were called upon to deliver 85 horsepower much of the time. Many of them ran day and night for years.

Three electric generators are still running in a textile mill at New Bedford, Mass., after 44 years' continuous service. At Tonawanda, N. Y., a group of sixteen motors has worked steadily since 1895. The country is full of examples of this sort, so that actually it is impossible to measure the life of such electric machinery.

In Industry—Indispensable!

INDUSTRY thrives and hums along through the economical energy electricity provides.

You benefit both directly and indirectly from this. Electricity enables commodities to be produced at less cost—it helps increase the sale of them through well-lighted displays in store windows—it makes possible economies in production, transportation and distribution which materially lower the final cost to you.

To your own home comes this same current which is indispensable in industry. Because of its volume production for wide industrial use your house current is cheaper! With it you can do a multitude of things easier, faster and better—light every nook and corner brightly; heat, cook, clean, wash, iron, refrigerate—even relieve pain!

Utilize to the utmost this industrious energy. Apply it to your every need with confidence in its steady supply by

ACTIVITIES LEND FORCE TO CIVIC IMPROVEMENT

Through Vocational Training Tradesman Offers Youth Opportunity.

No where in the world is there a more vital problem to be solved by right-thinking people than the question of mere "housing." The cavemen were "housed" when it comes to that—but—how? It is the way in which the modern plumber has answered this latter query that has led us to look upon him as one of the greatest (if not the greatest) civilizing and educative force of the age in which we live.

The plumber of today is no longer a mere tradesman; he is a teacher; and a most influential one at that, since his pupils form the great general public, and the branches in which he gives instruction include hygiene sanitation, civics, vocational training, and, we may even say without stretching a point, ethics.

Plumber Aids Toward Health.

Let us give a brief resume of his teachings in these varied fields:

1. Hygiene: Because of his knowledge of the laws governing health preservation the plumber has used his powerful influence to spread the "bath-a-day" idea.

2. Sanitation: The science of the removal of elements injurious to health. Science, mark you! Here's where the plumber shines! Who can gainsay the fact that through the marvelous way he has piped fresh water into each home and piped away poisonous waste he has done more than all the doctors in the land to remove the danger of epidemics? Typhoid, yellow fever, cholera, smallpox, once the scourge of the land, now appear only as isolated cases due entirely to the plumber's mastery of the science of sanitation.

3. Civics: Who, may we ask, is a greater stimulator of civic pride than the plumber? What is any city but an aggregation of individual homes? And in so far as each home is immaculately kept, scientifically drained and made hygienic and convenient through up-to-date plumbing systems and devices, just that far will the entire city become a beautiful, comfortable and healthful place to live in.

Backs Vocational Training.

4. Vocational training: As a teacher of youth along vocational lines, who can do more for the ambitious boy of today than the high-type plumber? He can teach him a trade which will nobly employ his powers of both head and hand; which will not only yield him a competence, but will make him a respected and valued member of any community of which he becomes a party.

5. Last, but far from least, ethics—the study of the principles of right living. Who can deny the influence of the plumber in this important field? Have we not always coupled cleanliness and godliness? On the other hand, have we not always just as naturally referred to the seething criminal classes of our big cities as the great unwashed? All hail, then, to the man who has done so much to further the cause of cleanliness, for those who are clean and are sanitarily housed are healthy, and seeds of vice never flourish where cleanliness reigns.

To sum up, then, the value of this greater teacher—the plumber. He disseminates instruction in hygiene, creates sanitary living conditions, promotes civic pride, trains youth in a vocation of the highest type, makes ethical living a possibility to even the humblest householder. In short, the plumber is an asset of incalculable value in any community, whose services can not be reckoned in terms of dollars and cents, but can best be expressed by our reaction to his instruction in terms of right living.

First Golf Club Used In West Is Preserved

Wichita, Kans., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The first golf club used on the first golf course built west of the Mississippi river is to be enshrined in a place of honor at the Wichita Country club.

Prof. C. P. Clark, now of Hanover, N. H., who was responsible for the first course to be established here, has given the country club the stick.

Prof. Clark, who came from Massachusetts in 1887, says he never will forget the sensation created the first time he appeared on the streets of Wichita attired in knickers, a sweater and a cap.

"Holdover Lightning" Causes Big Fire Loss

Flagstaff, Ariz., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Ben Franklin drew electricity from the clouds to the key on his kite string, but forest supervisors would like to have some inventive genius discover how to get rid of it.

"Lightning holdovers" caused several fires in the Coconino national forest during the forest fire hazard season, as they did in other parts of the west, destroying thousands of acres of valuable timber and drawing men from other pursuits to fight the flames.

Lightning generally hits these trees in out-of-the-way places, invisible from the lookout's tower. The fire will smoulder along for a few days, waiting for a stiff breeze to fan it to other trees, and before it is discovered, several acres of good timber will have burned.

ENGINEERS WOULD CURB FIXTURE 'SECONDS' TRADE

SEEKS TO PROTECT PUBLIC

A resolution attacking the present method of distributing second-grade fixtures was passed by the Utah State Association of Sanitary and Heating Engineers at the regular quarterly convention of that organization, May 25, in Salt Lake City, which reads as follows:

"Whereas, the sale of 'seconds' or 'B'-grade fixtures to the so-called exporter is no assurance that the fixtures will be exported, but, to the contrary a large percentage is sold to the shyster jobber, lumber companies, and others, who sell to the curbstone plumber or direct to consumer;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that it is to the best interest of the legitimate master plumber and to the public in general that these goods be marketed through the legitimate master plumber and that all sales of such 'seconds' be invoiced or billed to the purchaser as 'seconds;' and be it further

"Resolved, That the directors or a special committee of the National Association of Master Plumbers be asked to wait on the manufacturers and the associated plumbing supply houses with a view of bringing about such an arrangement."

The present method of distributing "seconds," namely that of supposedly exporting them, is considered very unsatisfactory by many of the Utah tradesmen, who hold the opinion that a good percentage of the "seconds," while perhaps originally marked for shipment to other countries, never land there, but are diverted to some other American city and find their way eventually to the public. If sold through the legitimate jobbers, all masters would be placed on the same basis, instead of the majority trying to sell only first-grade material while the few, including lumber companies, wrecking houses, and others, sell the second-grade materials direct to the public, often as first-grade goods.

UNIVERSITY TO BEGIN REAL ESTATE COURSE

Will Present Principles Governing Values of the Property.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Fundamentals in the real estate business will become a matter of student investigation in the School of Business Administration of the University of Michigan this fall. In addition to research work, four courses for graduate students are offered.

The instructor, E. M. Fisher, recently director of the department of education and research of the National Association of Real Estate boards, will have the title of associate professor.

In addition to his work as head of the research, Mr. Fisher will offer three courses: The fundamentals of city growth and real estate values, and a beginning and following course in realty management.

The first course presents the principles governing city and real estate values, the effect of city planning and zoning on real estate utilization and value and the economic aspects on real estate as a commodity.

The realty management perliminary course includes surveys of the operation of a brokerage office and departments of mortgage and finance, subdivisions and property management.

DRAINING ZUYDER ZEE DOOMS DUTCH TOWNS

Famous Fishing Ports Soon Must Learn Farming or Become Extinct.

Vollendam, Holland, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Holland is draining the Zuyder Zee in order to make more grazing land for the fat cattle who supply the world with Dutch cheese.

When the feat is accomplished this town, long one of the show spots of the Netherlands, will be a herring town without a harbor. The brown-sailed fishing fleet will be left high and dry and the pink-cheeked Dutch girls who parade the dykes on Sundays when the fleet is in port will no longer have any reason for parading.

Other towns of the Zuyder Zee will share Volendam's fate. The villages which have always been connected with the sea must turn to agriculture or become extinct. Tourists who go to Zuyder Zee towns to see the colorful costumes and hearty fishermen must go elsewhere when the bed of the Zuyder Zee has been annexed to the fertile fields behind the dykes.

EARTH'S VAPORS TAMED TO DRIVE STEAM ENGINES

California Engineer Sinks Well to Tap Underground Steam Under High Pressure.

AIDS FUEL CONSERVATION

In these days of need for fuel conservation it should delight the soul of Herbert Hoover to learn that in California a young engineer has succeeded in harnessing the hot vapors that come from deep down in the earth to drive steam engines.

Scientists and other learned men said that it could not be done, but this young man proved to them that it could. There is an area 10 miles wide and 20 miles long that seems to be the lid of a great internal furnace. Every crack and crevice emits hot steam.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in drilling and casing a hole to withstand the tremendous pressure of the pent-up steam. But once the first hole was completed and closed by a valve it supplied steam at a pressure of several hundred pounds per square inch. Steam from the first well was used to run the engines used in drilling the succeeding ones.

This discovery has opened unlimited possibilities for future industrial development. Think of the fuel that can be saved. But, while the engineers are striving to find ways to save fuel for industrial use people are wasting thousands of bushels of coal in their home because of inefficient heating methods.

Old-fashioned stoves and worn-out heating plants waste fuel, at the same time they fail to heat the house properly. Probably the greatest waste of all, however, occurs in dependence upon human instead of automatic mechanical control of fires. This waste could be checked at once by putting in operation any one of several tested and reliable devices for automatic heat regulation.

Old Texas Veterans Live in Hill Country

Dandera, Tex., Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Dozens of men and women who helped to subdue the frontier in the days when Texas was a republic are gathered in the hills and valleys surrounding this little town, spending the last years of their lives in peace and quiet. The old settlers have their retreat in the Bandera hill country, where few tourists ever penetrate.

The inhabitants till their farms that dot the valleys, and their sheep, goats and cattle find range in the hills.

Says Educated Women Not Business Luxury

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Dr. Caroline Spurgeon, specialist in university women's relation with commerce and industry, believes that highly educated women are not an expensive luxury in the business world.

With Viscountess Rhondda and a committee of university women, she has recently completed a pamphlet stating the case of the university woman in industry, which she and her committee are distributing.

Give Marriage Title To Suffrage Women

Munich, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Women's suffrage societies here have dropped all "frauleins" from their list of members by the simple act of calling them "frau."

The movement to give the married woman's prefix to all women, whether married or not, is growing fast. Feminists hope to have abolished soon the title of "fraulein," or "little woman," which they find objectionable.

HUNT FOR LIAR'S HOME WINDS UP AT APOSTLE'S

HE CONVERTED ST. PAUL

Damascus, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—Every American who comes to Damascus is told: "Don't fail to visit the house of Ananias."

Although after three weeks in Syria, visiting Beirut, and other large cities, and listening to some of the tales that are being related by various sects and parties, one begins to feel that Ananias was greatly overrated and, were he living in these days, in these parts, he could not hold down a berth in Class D of the Liars league, one feels he can not leave Damascus without calling on the patron of prevaricators.

He occupied a fine house, as houses in Damascus go, and must have been a prosperous old gentleman.

"Did he have any other profession besides that of a liar?" a guide was asked.

"Lawyer? He was not a lawyer; there were no lawyers in those days," the guide, who learned his English in England, replied reprovingly.

"Liar! Liar!" was the emphatically repeated query.

"Aoh! a fibber, you mean," came back the Anglo-Syrian with a look of intense surprise. "Why, this man is not known because he was a liar, but he is the man who converted Saint Paul."

They never have heard of Ananias, the liar, in this part of the world.

When You Buy or Build that New Home ~

Make the man you buy from give you a warranty of the quality of the plumbing, backed up by a reputable master plumber.

Yet too many persons, when they buy a house, take the worth of the plumbing for granted. Seem to think that if there is any—it is probably all right! Yet nothing in the home is more important to health than plumbing!

You have a right to demand that the plumbing in a house you buy is in first class condition. If it is not, insist that it must be put in proper condition before you close the deal. Repairs may be needed for "unseen" plumbing—the pipes, etc., which are buried in the ground, or hidden from sight by walls and floors. Such repairs are the costliest of all!

When you buy a home be as particular about the plumbing as you are about the general desirability of the property. Without good plumbing, a dwelling is both unsafe and unpleasant to live in. Insist upon a warranty of the quality of the plumbing in the home you buy!

DRIVE NO CAR WITH DEFECTIVE BRAKES

AUTOMOTIVE NEWS AND GOSSIP

RESPECT THE RIGHTS OF THE PEDESTRIAN

SCHOOLS ON WHEELS WILL DEMONSTRATE OLDSMOBILE PARTS

50 Itinerant Stripped Chassis Cars to Show Capacity and Mechanical Operation.

ALL WORKING DETAILS EXPOSED TO OBSERVER

Demonstrators Driving Autos to Lecture on Scientific Reasons for Construction.

Fifty "automobile schools on wheels" are touring the country, each in charge of a competent instructor, under a program engaged in by Oldsmobile branches, distributors and dealers. Nearly every city and town in the United States is included in the itinerary of these "schools."

By means of these "itinerant schools" Oldsmobile officials plan to show and explain to automobile owners the vital parts of a motor car rarely, if ever, seen by the average driver. In this way it is believed that owners will better understand their cars and will obtain even better motoring satisfaction in the future. Another object of the "schools" is to exhibit the many quality features it is now possible to obtain in a car in the $1,000 class.

The "schools" consist of a stripped Oldsmobile chassis so equipped as to allow the attending demonstrator to explain the mechanical features in detail. That part of the automobile which is "under the floor" is exposed to plain view, showing the method by which the power is transmitted from engine to rear wheels.

A box carried in the rear of the chassis opens into a parts display where the important parts of the inner mechanism of the car are shown. These include the crankshaft with harmonic balancer, camshaft with the latest type quiet curve cam design, silent chain drive, disc clutch assembly, cut-away section of the cylinder block, piston, axle shaft, connecting rod, spiral bevel drive gear, main bearings, valve lifter assembly and self-aligning and self-lubricating clutch release bearing.

With the aid of the stripped chassis and these parts, the demonstrator is enabled to clearly explain the entire workings of the car—why certain things happen under specified conditions and how each part is designed to do its share in giving smooth and consistent motor car performance.

The lectures by the demonstrators cover several fields of science. Explanations are given of the electrical system, the latest methods devised to keep harmful foreign substances, either solids, liquids or greases, from the engine by means of dual air cleaners, oil filter and crankcase ventilation, thermostatic principles of two-way cooling, the devices which insure perfect lubrication at all times and other features of leading motor car design.

22 YEARS OLD, BUT WINS CUP

Veteran of 1904, this Reo roadster is still running under its own power. It has even appeared in the movies.

Veteran Reo, Built in 1904, Still Delivering Service

One of these days the title "Most photographed automobile in the world" is going to be bestowed on the 1904 Reo pictured in the above illustration. The old Reo is spending most of its time these days in some sort of competition or other, and more frequently than not it comes out of the contests with a prize.

This widely pictured Reo broke into renewed prominence about the time that the American around-the-world fliers were tuning up their ships preparatory to making new history in the field of air travel. At that time the commander of the American aviators spotted the old Reo near the hangars in which the planes were parked and borrowed it for a ride. Being a very popular public figure at that time and also appearing to be vastly amused by the sprite manner in which the old car stepped out, the officer was profusely photographed at the wheel of the Reo.

Then the movies claimed it for a time, using it for "atmosphere" when the action was laid in the early days of the century and transportation facilities had to fit in with the times. Comedies found good use for it, too, since the producers could always be sure of a laugh when a comedian of great girth and tremendous tonnage wedged himself behind the wheel.

The Reo's latest conquest was a victory in an old car parade in Venice, Calif., where the handsome cup upheld by the youngster in the illustration was added to its collection of trophies. Just what its next cause for venturing into the spotlight will be can not be forecast.

KNIGHT SLEEVE-VALVE MOTOR HIGHLY LIKED

Public Has Confidence and Cars Carrying it Are Easy to Sell.

REPAIR WORK IS AVOIDED

A recent survey of used cars throughout the country disclosed the fact that the fastest selling second-hand car, and the one which commanded the highest prices in the general market, was the car equipped with a Knight sleeve-valve motor.

Managers of used car divisions in large dealerships, and operators of used car markets not connected with General Motor car dealerships, all reported the same condition. The consensus was that the motor car buying public have a deeply seated feeling of confidence in this type of power plant.

One large operator in used cars said: "I can usually turn a Knight-motored car in from one to three days and I seldom carry one for more than a week. We are constantly bidding for these cars and the Willys-Knight stock in our lot is depleted almost as soon as we have built it up to anything like the standards required by the normal demand for these cars."

"We have practically no expense for repair work on the motors in the Willys-Knight cars we take in trade," said another larger dealer.

Investigators found that dealers in the higher priced cars are in many instances restricting the makes of cars which they will take in trade, but all of these expressed themselves as being always ready to trade in a Willys-Knight.

A large used car dealer who specializes in rebuilt used cars said: "We are reluctant to accept the majority of used cars which show better than 25,000 to 30,000 miles on the speedometer. There is usually too much work to be done on the motors, but I have Willys-Knight cars which show better than 100,000 miles and, outside of the usual tightening of bolts and perhaps a repaint job, I have very little work to do on them. The buyer rarely ever hesitates in buying a Willys-Knight regardless of what mileage it may show."

HUDSONS NOW USE LESS FUEL, REPORTS INDICATE

Owners Note Gasoline Economy With Car on Market About a Month.

EXPLAINS IMPROVEMENT

Although the new steel Hudson coaches have been on the market about a month, and most of them in the hands of owners who have not exceeded their breaking-in mileage period, reports of their high gasoline economy already are beginning to flow into the offices of the Lambert-Hudson Co., distributors.

The new Hudsons, considering their high speed, abundant power and other fine car characteristics, have an amazing quality of gasoline thrift, owners say.

The greater fuel mileage noted on the new cars thus is explained by the manager of the local company:

"By an improvement in the intake manifold, the engineers for Hudson have made possible a better distribution of fuel. By obtaining the maximum of power from every drop of gasoline, much better fuel mileage now is obtained."

Duco-finished bodies with striping, steel construction in the coach, improved upholstery, nickeled radiator shell, a rounded rear quarter and other refinements characterize the new Hudsons.

CAPITAL SALESMAN WINS HONOR IN AUTO CONTEST

Callan, Franklin Employe, Made General in Sales Army for Efforts.

COMPETE FOR PRIZES

James E. Callan, salesman for the Franklin Motor Car Co., of 1503 Connecticut avenue northwest, was designated last week as general in the Franklin army of salesmen. The rank, which entails a fine cash bonus paid by the Franklin Automobile Co., of Syracuse, N. Y., was won through making a designated number of sales of Franklin cars within the year ending December 31, 1926.

Callan reached his goal with four months to spare, winning in the process a second bonus for selling more than one-half the number of Franklin cars allotted for the year before June 30.

His next goal is 52 Franklin sales before December 31, which, if realized, will net him a third bonus and membership in the highly distinguished Car-a-Week club.

The plan under which the bonuses are distributed by the Franklin factory is known as "Franklin's Twenty-fifth Anniversary Contest" and offers on a competitive basis several other awards involving hundreds of dollars which are to be paid for highest percentages of new business to total sales and greatest amount of new business.

Callan's individual record places him well to the fore and makes him a strong contender for the competitive awards which will be decided next December.

BRITISH WORKING ON NEW TYPE OF AIRPLANE ENGINE

Government Developing Single Sleeve Valve Motor for Air Uses.

SUCCESS IS REPORTED

On the recommendation of the aeronautical research committee of the British government, a special Argyll single-sleeve valve engine for use in airplanes is being developed in the British government research laboratory in London, England. This is the engine the basic patent rights of which are owned by the Continental Motors Corporation of Detroit.

In the report of the aeronautical research committee to Sir Samuel J. Hoare, secretary of state for air of Great Britain, which has just been issued, attention is called to the practicability and efficiency of the single-sleeve valve engine. The report says in part: "For some time past, work has been in progress on the evolution of a sleeve valve engine suitable for aircraft purposes. In a recent report on the present position, H. R. Ricardo stated that as the result of from 9 months to 2½ years' running experience on several engines, the conclusion has been reached that the single sleeve gives better performance than a poppet valve engine of the same size, maintains its performance far longer and possesses very considerable mechanical advantages.

"The subcommittee has examined in detail the results of all tests undertaken, and considers that the potential value of the single-sleeve engine for aircraft purposes has been fully demonstrated. In particular, experience has shown that it is possible to keep the sleeve fully lubricated without an excessive oil consumption and that the absence of hot exhaust valves in a sleeve valve engine reduces the tendency to detonation of the fuel, and therefore allows the use of higher compression ratios than a poppet valve engine of similar size.

"The increase in efficiency so obtained is important. It also appears that the weight of a complete engine is not likely to be substantially increased by the substitution of single-sleeve valves for poppet valves. The subcommittee considers that the research work has now reached such a stage that the development of multicylinder aircraft engines, using sleeve valves, should be encouraged."

WORK RUSHED ON NEW PONTIAC SIX FACTORY

1,000 CARS DAILY OUTPUT

A bulletin from the Oakland Motor Car Co. states that work on the new $7,600,000 Pontiac six factory is slightly ahead of schedule and that according to all indications production capacity of 1,000 cars daily will be available at the beginning of next year.

More than one-half of the entire foundation for the 30 acres of floor space that will comprise this mammoth new plant already has been laid and by the end of the month the entire foundation will be in. Excavation has been virtually completed.

While 1,000 men are now engaged in the construction of this new factory—the maximum that can be profitably employed—this force will be recruited up to 2,000 men before the end of October. Every type of dirt removing machine known in construction is being employed. A 78-inch storm drain, large enough for the needs of a small city, is being installed to take care of the rain that will fall upon more than 1,000,000 square feet of roof, and for other needs of the factory. Already two car tracks have been built into the factory to help in construction, but when the factory has been completed there will be nine miles of trackage under roof to bring in raw material and carry out finished product.

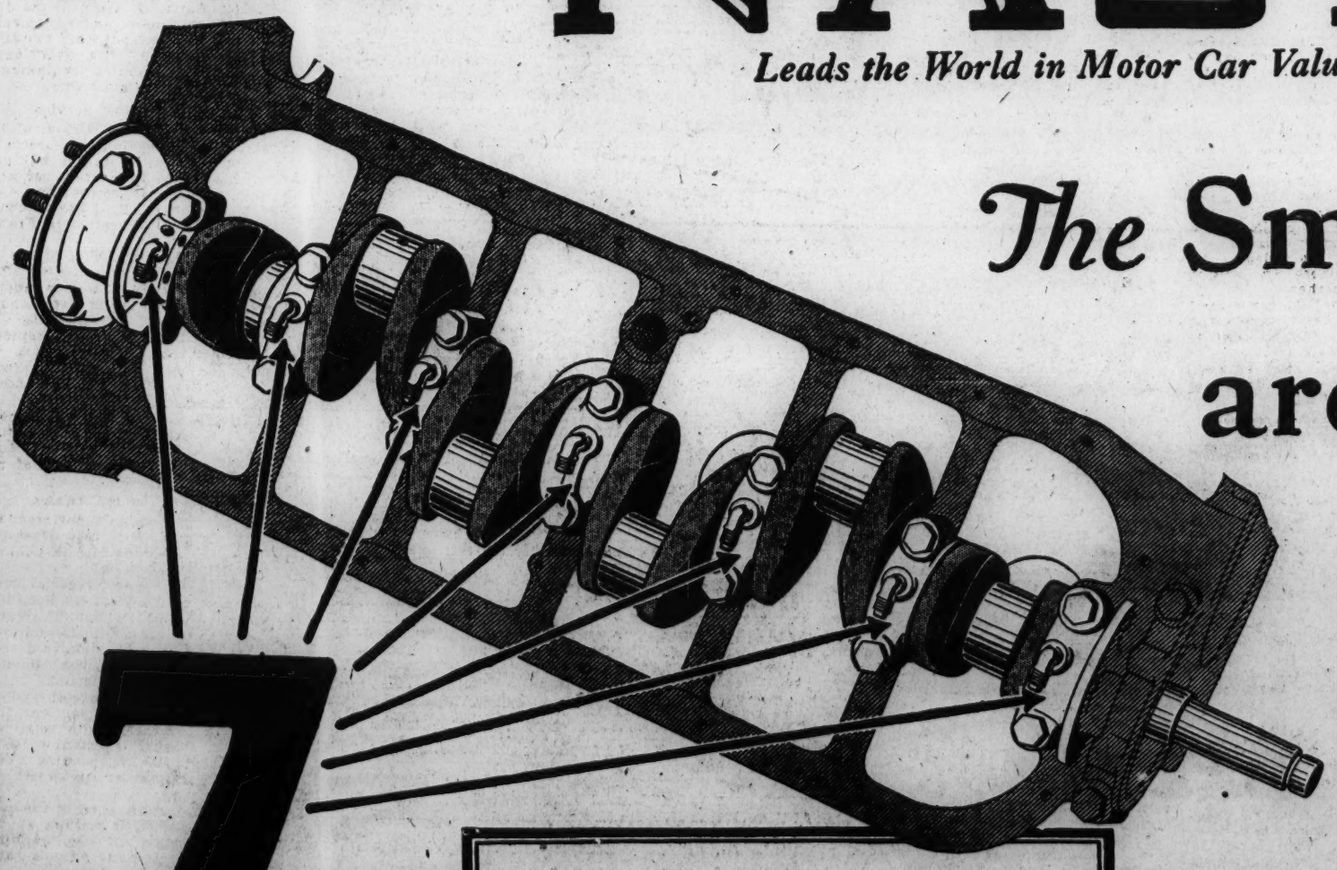
That there is need for this new factory may be gleaned from the fact that more than 18,000 Pontiac and Oakland sixes were built during August and that during this month the 100,000th car was turned out for 1926.

To build this number of cars has required the largest working force in Oakland's history. In fact, the present force is more than twice as large as ever previously employed.

The total at the present time is more than 6,500. Early in February the force was slightly more than 2,500 but practically 500 men were put on each month since until at the present time peak facilities of the present factories have been reached. The biggest jump in employment was from May to August, though since that time approximately 100 persons have been added each week.

NEW NASH MODELS

Leads the World in Motor Car Value



7 Great Bearings

The Smoothest Miles are NASH Miles

All new Nash models now have the great superiority of a 7-bearing crankshaft motor.

The 7 great bearings give the revolving crankshaft absolute rigidity and stiffness, thus achieving the final degree of power-smoothness and quietness.

Every connecting rod bearing surface is supported on each side by one of these big main bearings. There is no whipping, no distortion.

United to this phenomenal power-smoothness and quietness there is pick-up of breath-taking swiftness.

Come view these new Nash models—16 different body styles—brilliant new body finishes—with prices ranging from $865 to $2090 f. o. b. factory. Now on display.

New Nash Attractions

New instrument board with indirect lighting and all instruments in single panel under glass, including hydrostatic gas gauge.

New oil screen "agitator" which prevents oil coagulation in coldest weather.

New crank-case "breather" eliminating crank-case dilution.

MOTOR ENGINEERS TO INSPECT PLANTS AT CHICAGO MEETING

Three-Day Session to Consider Methods to Make Better and Cheaper Cars.

TECHNICAL PROBLEMS LISTED FOR DISCUSSION

Society for Steel Treating to Join in Convention on Production Plans.

Ways of making and inspecting automobile parts so that they shall be both better and cheaper are to be considered by factory production engineers and executives at a three-day meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers to be held in Chicago from Tuesday to Thursday, concurrently with the annual convention and national steel and machine tool exhibition of the American Society of Steel Treating. Headquarters of the engineering society will be in the Hotel Sherman, where there are to be four technical sessions.

On the opening night of the meeting a stag carnival will be held at the Chez Pierre Cabaret club, which has been reserved for the evening exclusively for the members of the society and their guests. Another feature of the meeting will be inspection visits to the plants of the Nash Motors Co., at Kenosha, Wis., and the Chicago plants of the International Harvester Co. and the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co. At these factories up-to-date methods of manufacture and inspection of automobiles, trucks, motorcoaches and engines will be observed.

Technical Sessions Open.

The technical sessions are to be open to members of the steel treating society and to other nonmembers of the automotive engineers' society. There are to be sessions on factory conveyor systems, gear production, inspection and machine tools. The program of addresses is as follows:

Thursday forenoon—What Goes Wrong with Machine Tools in Automobile Production, by E. R. Stoddard, Studebaker Corporation.

Fitting the Machine Tool to the Job, by O. C. Kavle, Manufacturers Consulting Engineers.

Supervision of general arrangements for the meeting is in the hands of a committee of fifteen, of which V. P. Rumely, of the Hudson Motor Car Co., is chairman. Arrangements for the factory inspection visits have been made by a committee of nine, of which O. W. Young, of the Hyatt Roller Bearing Co., is chairman, and the stag carnival and entertainment program have been arranged by Taliaferro Milton, of the Electric Storage Battery Co., and his committee of six other Chicago enthusiasts.

CROSSING CONTINENT BY AUTO IN 83 HOURS IS FOUND GRUELLING

TALK WITH MECHANIC KEEPS DRIVER AWAKE

Sustained High Speed Without Breaking Down of Engine Remarkable.

At the identical moment when Gertrude Ederle arrived at the Battery, New York, to receive a well-earned reward for her channel triumph, L. B. Miller was piloting his Wills Sainte Claire Six across Manhattan in his final dash for a new world's transcontinental record.

The simultaneous arrival of the two victors was a coincidence that aroused some interesting speculations and comparisons on the subject of human endurance. Trudy's achievement caused the world to marvel at the physical stamina of an 18-year-old girl. Yet in the crowds that surrounded, cheered and congratulated Miller there were many who declared that the 50-year-old man's feat of driving his famous Gray Goose roadster from San Francisco to New York in 83 hours, 12 minutes, a new world's record, was an even greater exhibition of physical endurance and dogged persistence.

Miss Ederle accomplished her record-breaking swim in something over 14 hours. Miller was obliged to travel at high, sustained speed for 83 hours and during all this soul-testing flight had no opportunity to sleep or to eat normal food.

Hard to Keep Awake.

"It was a constant fight to keep awake," said Mr. Miller, "and that was the hardest battle of the entire adventure. I drank copious draughts of hot coffee from thermos containers, but the only thing that saved me was a constant chatter of conversation with my mechanic. Never before in my life have I done so much talking. We talked constantly and continuously.

"People who question me about the performance of the Wills Sainte Claire invariably ask about the speed. How fast did the Gray Goose fly? As a matter of fact, the ability of the car to travel at high speed is not the vital matter. There are many cars capable of fine bursts of high speed, but quite incapable of crossing the continent in 83 hours. The crucial factor is ability to stand up hour after hour at sustained high speed without breaking down the engine, for the strain on the moving parts is something terrific. If you come through you surely have proved your car has extraordinary endurance and that its engineering is truly masterly.

"But there are other important factors that are usually overlooked and unless they are present you might as well forget all long-distance records. To maintain a speed sufficiently high on the average to establish a coast-to-coast record you must have marvelous acceleration and the finest possible brakes. A car that is only a little better than fair on the get-away and that must slow down before the turn of the road is reached because the brakes do not safely permit any other kind of driving will never cross the continent in 83 hours. To make such a record you must have hair-trigger acceleration, so no time is lost in getting out of traffic or in darting ahead as soon as a bad bit of road has been negotiated.

"The Wills Sainte Claire Six gave me a great advantage, because it not only had the necessary agility, but the Wills Lockheed Hydraulic Four-Wheel Brakes enabled me to approach turns at high speed and take them much faster than otherwise would have been possible. I attribute my success in making a new coast-to-coast record as much to the car's acceleration and to the perfection of control provided by the brakes as I do to any of the more obvious factors."

Peasant Women Seek Equal Voting Rights

Budapest, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). Peasant women of Balmaz Ujvaros have announced that they claim the right of local suffrage and will fight for it, as they labor equally with men.

Their case was recently laid before the annual assembly, of the Hungarian Suffrage society.

CUSHION-DRIVE CLUTCH NEW JEWETT FEATURE

VIBRATION IS ELIMINATED

A cushioned-drive clutch is a new feature incorporated into the latest line of Jewett presented last week.

Flat springs of imported Swedish clock-spring blue-temper steel are interposed between the driven member of the clutch and its hub, so that the turning force of the engine is applied to the drive shaft through these yielding members, rather than through positive metal-to-metal contact.

The advantages claimed for this construction include superior silence and the eliminating of vibration.

It has long been generally known that noises produced in one unit of any automobile may seem to come from some other unit. Rear axle noises, for instance, may appear to be in transmission, being telegraphed through the drive shaft to the gear box. Similarly, the transmission may act as a sounding box, amplifying engine noises, if the transmission shafts are in solid contact with the engine shaft. In the Jewett, the resilient steel springs absorb the minute vibrations between engine and transmission, so that the sounds are not transmitted and amplified in the gear case.

The Jewett clutch springs also act to absorb the minute vibrations between engine and drive, in either direction. Vibrations from the road, ordinarily transmitted through the shaft to the engine, are intercepted in the cushioning springs, as are any slight vibrations from the engine itself.

Westinghouse Battery Official Is Promoted

J. Ross Duggan, manager of export of the Westinghouse Union Battery Co., has been appointed vice president in charge of sales and has taken up his duties at Swissvale, Pa.

During the time Mr. Duggan has been at the head of the export department with headquarters in the Westinghouse building, 150 Broadway, New York, he has been prominently identified with the automotive industry, both domestic and export, in that city. When an expanded sales program was decided upon by the Westinghouse Union Battery Co., Mr. Duggan was chosen to head up the sales department.

A USED CAR IS ONLY AS DEPENDABLE AS THE DEALER WHO SELLS IT

COAST TO COAST IN 83 HOURS

World's Record Again Smashed by Veteran Roadster

Another world's record for the Wills Sainte Claire Six—the flight from Coast to Coast August 23-27 in 83 hours, 12 minutes!

A performance in itself so remarkable that the world paused to marvel.

Yet the most amazing fact in this astounding demonstration of master engineering and super-endurance was the mileage recorded on the speedometer at the start—

23,023 miles and every mile a tough one—more hard work than the average car is asked to do in two years.

For this is the identical Roadster that crossed the continent in record time in July, 1925, and also established a world's record between San Francisco and Portland, Ore., the same year.

A veteran performer—not a fresh car tuned and tested for a single task. Never has the industry seen its like.

New Colors—New Lines—New Comfort, Beauty and Distinction

The most beautiful body in this model that Hudson ever built is combined with the greatest of all Super-Six chassis.

Important increase in gasoline mileage is obtained with no sacrifice in power and flexible performance. Refinements and improvements centered around the famous Super-Six principle give greater smoothness, freedom from vibration and closely perfect all the great results of this exclusive Hudson advantage. The flywheel, balanced by precision machines also eliminates vibration possibilities.

Hudson's always brilliant performance is bettered. Power is greater. Pick-up is quicker. Reliability is increased. Motor life is lengthened. Repair needs are even more infrequent.

Hudson design, without resort to accessories, gives owners the top results of gasoline strained before it is delivered to motor, air cleaned and heated, and dirt-free lubrication.

Because the entire production of one of America's oldest and most exclusive custom builders is concentrated on Hudson bodies, this custom quality car holds the most amazing price advantage in Hudson history.

HOT MOTOR NEEDED TO OBTAIN BEST OIL AND FUEL RESULTS

Maximum Efficiency at 40 Degrees Below Boiling Point, Says D. S. Hendrick.

MAJORITY INDORSES WATER FOR COOLING

First Minutes Engine Runs Most Destructive, Declares Chandler Representative.

"Few motorists know that in order to obtain maximum fuel and oil efficiency it is necessary to maintain a hot motor," says David S. Hendrick, of the local Chandler organization.

"Engineering authorities agree that an automobile motor performs best when its temperature is about 40 degrees below the boiling point of the water," he says. "This does not result in an overheated motor. To the contrary, an efficient cooling system not only maintains its water at the proper temperature but in addition provides a method in which the motor may be brought to the required temperature quickly, regardless of climatic conditions.

"Water as a cooling medium is indorsed by the majority of automotive authorities," he continued. "It has the advantage of giving the greatest efficiency in maintaining constant motor temperature. To maintain proper cooling requirements, Chandlers now are provided with a highly efficient temperature-regulating valve known as the 'motorstat.' This vital unit might be termed the watchman of the cooling system, since it regulates the motor temperature under constant boiling point and builds up the required temperature in the shortest possible time.

"Automotive engineers agree that the greatest degree of oil dilution and the most destructive point of motor operation occur during the first few minutes of cold motor running," he said. "Consequently the short trips of city driving may have detrimental effects on motor performance unless the proper safeguards are enforced.

System Virtually Foolproof.

"This condition has been eliminated by the addition of the motorstat on all 1927 Chandler models. The motorstat restricts the passage of water from the cylinder jacket to the radiator until the proper operating temperature has been reached. The regulating valve in the motorstat then comes into play and automatically maintains a constant jacket temperature regardless of climatic conditions.

"Maintenance of the motorstat virtually is nil. The mechanism is so simple and positive in action it functions at all times. Overheated conditions in any cooling system usually are caused by lack of attention on the part of the motorist. Sometimes small leaks are neglected until the cooling system can not function properly because of low-water level. Again, other overheated conditions result from the owner's neglect in flushing the system at least once during each seasonal change.

"Many mechanical faults aggravate overheating," Hendrik said, "including a worn water pump, a broken or slipping fan belt, old hose connections, or adjustment difficulties in ignition and carburetion."

HUPMOBILE'S AUGUST SALES MAKE HISTORY

Number Exceeds Those Made in Any Corresponding Month by 50 Per Cent.

PROSPECTS HERE GOOD

Hupmobile's August sales were the largest for any corresponding month in its history. Factory shipments for the month exceeded those for the best previous August by 19 per cent, says O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation. Checkings of retail sales indicate that they surpassed those for the largest preceding August by approximately 50 per cent.

August marked the eleventh consecutive month in which factory shipments have exceeded those of the corresponding month the previous year. Shipments for the eleven-month period show a gain of 54 per cent, with retail sales larger by 57 per cent.

Export shipments gained 68 per cent over those for August 1925.

That continued record business is in prospect for the company and its dealers is shown in the fact the company carried over, on September 1, orders for more than $3,000,000 worth of cars. These include orders for more than $1,000,000 worth of Hupmobile eights and nearly $2,000,000 in Hupmobile sixes.

Prospects for an unusually good autumn business are especially good in this section," say Hupmobile dealers commenting on the outlook. Both September and October will exceed those months of last year. Sales, as a matter of fact, probably will more than double those on September and October, 1925, they say.

MOON'S NEW SEDAN REPLY TO DEMAND FOR EUROPEAN TYPE

CONTINENTAL ENGINE POWERS LATEST CAR

Removable Backs of Rear Seats and Unique Radiator Shell Among Features.

To further round out and complete its line of light six cars, the Moon Motor Co. announces the Moon 6-60 four-door sedan. The line now comprises the following models: De luxe roadster, standard roadster, coach, brougham, phaeton and the four-door sedan.

In the new four-door de luxe sedan Moon engineers have carried out the Europeanized idea of compactness, and the low-hung, road-gripping appearance found in the other models of the line. In so doing they have complied with the demand for cars of this type, the trend toward which has been extremely noticeable the past few months.

The 60-60 four-door sedan is powered with a special Moon Continental engine—bore, 2⅞; stroke, 4¾.

The lower body panels are finished in yucca gray lacquer, with the superstructure in black, while the belt is finished in Russian tan. The belt moldings are stripel with Nile green.

Polished plate glass is used throughout. Window regulators are of the new Dura type. Front pillars are of the narrow, safety vision type, with a swinging windshield, providing abundant ventilation. The sun visor as on all Moon and Diana cars.

Has Unique Radiator Shell.

Upholstery is of Chase combination mohair with a flexible robe rail. The rear seat backs as well as the cushions are removable. This is a new feature and permits easy cleaning. It is an economy feature, too, as in case of repairs to the rear body panel. The seat backs and cushions are of special Moon manufacture. The hardware is of special Butler finish.

Inside garnish moulding and the instrument panel are of metal and are finished in Duco to harmonize with the interior decorations. All instruments are grouped under one glass with an indirect nonglare lighting system.

The body superstructure is of ash and hard maple, the accepted standard in body construction in most high grade cars. The compactness of the construction in these cars makes for comfort. The body measures 50 inches inside, allowing room for comfort. Additional foot clearance in the rear compartment is provided by a cut-out under the back of the front seat.

Body panels are made of 20 gauge stretcher level auto body sheets.

The appearance of the four-door sedan greatly is enhanced by a unique radiator shell and a new conception in radiator cap ornaments—a small silver finished statuette representing a flying centaur.

Equipment includes four-wheel hydraulic brakes, cam and lever steering gear, Hartford shock absorbers, an automatic windshield wiper and full automatic spark control.

CHEVROLETS UNDERGOING 1,000-MILE HILL TEST

New Dynamometer Duplicates Drag Encountered by Steep Grade.

AUTO TOWS APPARATUS

Climbing a hill 1,000 miles long is a test General Motors engineers believe no car can withstand unless it has the rugged strength and stamina built into it to meet such a continuous strain.

In effect, this is the test which the Chevrolet car is meeting at the General Motors Corporation's extensive testing grounds, 1,146 acres in area, in the rolling country 40 miles west of Detroit.

A "towing dynamometer" is the machine used to duplicate the terrific drag encountered by an automobile motor in ascending steep hills. It is said to reproduce almost exactly the stress of an uphill climb.

The dynamometer is mounted on a chassis to be towed behind the Chevrolet undergoing the test. Weights on a scale beam control two huge brake drums on the chassis through a hydraulic valve pressure on the drums through a set of gears. The scale can be set to reproduce a grade of almost any degree through pressure on the drums.

Experienced engineers on the proving grounds have every modern facility at their disposal to test methods suggested for the improvement of Chevrolet cars. Other American and foreign cars also are "put through the grind" there. Any changes contemplated for the Chevrolet are tested for months or years before final adoption.

Cadillac Business Principles Protect the Used Car Buyer

With the Cadillac dealer, the used car is neither a "problem" nor an "evil". It is a business, conducted according to sound business principles having to do with the reliability and the value of the merchandise.

Many dealers regard the used car as an "evil", because they lose sight of used car values in desperate efforts to make new car sales.

The tendency in every such case, is, of course, to ask the used car prospect to pay back to the dealer the unjustified high price for the used car, which the dealer has allowed the man who traded it in.

The universal recognition of Cadillac as not only the finest of fine cars, but also the greatest value in the fine car field, enables the Cadillac dealer to allow for a used car a price that is fair—and to sell it at a price that is equally fair.

When you buy from a Cadillac dealer, you know that these sound business principles are operating in your favor.

NEW STUDEBAKER VICTORIA IS SHOWN FIRST TIME IN CITY

Car for Four Passengers Combines Beauty, Comfort and Refinement.

UNUSUAL ROOMINESS ADROITLY ARRANGED

Ample Luggage Space Provided; Sleek Body Has Grace and Poise.

Addition to the Studebaker line of a Standard Six Custom Victoria for four passengers was announced yesterday by the Studebaker Corporation of America through Joseph McReynolds, local Studebaker dealer. This model is now being shown at the local Studebaker display room.

Like its predecessors, the Customs Sedans, the Custom Victoria combines features of beauty, comfort and refinement heretofore provided only by exclusive carrossiers. Yet, through the one-profit facilities of Studebaker, this car is produced at a cost which is well within reach of the majority of motorists.

Probably the most conspicuous feature of the Custom Victoria, from the standpoint of riding comfort, is its unusual roominess. So adroitly have its designers planned the interior that there is adequate seating and leg room for four adult passengers. Despite its roominess, however, there is not even the slightest suggestion of bulk in its trim appearance. The same low-swung, graceful lines which have won for the Custom Sedans recognition as heralds of a new era of automotive draughtmanship also characterize this latest addition to the custom designed line.

Seating Is Comfortable.

The seating arrangement is just as comfortable as it is compact. Two passengers are carried in the wide, deeply cushioned and form-fashioned club seat, which is set at the right and slightly to the rear of the driver's seat. The fourth passenger rides in the auxiliary seat which affords complete comfort even on long tours. When used for three, the auxiliary seat folds under the cowl.

Unusual luggage carrying space is provided. Behind the driver's seat is a concealed compartment for small parcels, a notable shopping convenience. Under the rear deck, access to which is made easy by a waterproof and dustproof cover, is a commodious locker for baggage.

The grace and poise of the low, sleek body is accentuated by the lustrous lacquer finish of Kinick green and Tuchi gray. The belt is finished in ebony with delicate apple green striping. Supplementing the smart color scheme of the exterior, the interior is finished in rich, harmonizing tones. Upholstery is in fine Chase mohair with broadlace trim, Butler finish hardware and opal iridecsent dome light.

Many Conveniences in Car.

All of the features of driving convenience and refinement developed by Studebaker for the custom sedans are found in the Victoria. The scientifically designed windshield — exclusively Studebaker—provides ventilation without drafts. By means of a convenient handle this windshield may be adjusted to direct the air over the heads of the passengers or down under the cowl at will. It functions even during the hardest shower, for hidden troughs carry off the rain and no water may enter the body of the car.

An artistic instrument board carries an engine heat indicator, gasoline gauge, speedometer, ammeter and oil pressure gauge, neatly grouped under glass and illuminated by indirect light. On the top of the steering column is the control lever for the two-beam acorn headlights. A coincidental lock to ignition and steering gear is controlled by the same key which unlocks the door, spare-tire lock and rear-deck compartment.

Standard equipment on the custom Victoria is unusually complete, including four-wheel brakes of exclusive Studebaker design, disc wheels, full-size balloon tires, front and rear bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, rear vision mirror and traffic signal light.

Poised on the radiator cap is the silvered figure of Atalanta—emblem of the Studebaker custom line—which since its introduction with the custom sedans has come to be recognized as a symbol of beauty and grace.

NEW GRAHAM TRUCK FINDS READY MARKET

Two-Ton Vehicle in Demand Since August Offering, Dealers Report.

Up to the close of business, August 28, Dodge Brothers, dealers in the United States and Canada, had delivered 225 of the Graham Brothers' new two-ton trucks, which was announced to the public August 21. Graham Brothers report total shipments of 907 two-ton trucks up to August 28, and that on that date they held unfilled orders from dealers for 403 of this capacity.

"The large and immediate demand for Graham Brothers' new two-ton trucks," declared Raphael Semmes, president of the Semmes Motor Co., local dealer, "is exactly what would be expected by one familiar with the economical and dependable performance of their one-ton and their ton-and-a-half trucks. Like the two smaller models, this large truck is available with bodies designed and built at the factory to serve the requirements of almost all vocations requiring trucks of two-ton capacity.

"Dodge Brothers' three-ton commercial cars and the three capacities of Graham Brothers' trucks with the various bodies supplied by the makers, are adapted to the needs of over 400 different vocations and now meet over 90 per cent of all commercial haulage requirements."

Apartments Boomed By Cold in Argentine

Buenos Aires, Sept. 18 By A. P.).—Apartment house life is gaining rapidly in popularity among the Argentines. One of the chief attractions is the central heating system, almost unknown in Buenos Aires a few years ago. Argentines claim the winters here have become increasingly severe in recent years and that this explains why so many detached houses, without any heating facilities, are being deserted for steam-heated apartments.

One newspaper has begun a campaign in favor of heating the railway stations, street cars, subways and schools, pointing out that "every year it is becoming colder to the great discomfort of the public."

Millions More

to make Hupmobile Six the Finest Six under $2000

Hupmobile has spent many extra millions the last 18 years to build superior quality into Hupmobiles.

Hupmobile continues to spend extra millions today to make its Six the finest Six under $2000. Hupmobile has always built only one way—it has always kept faith with its own standards. That's why the name Hupmobile means as much as it does.

That is why you can buy this great Six in the absolute assurance that it gives you Hupmobile performance, value and economy.

Owners reap the benefit—and Hupmobile finds its six-cylinder car in growing demand month after month and year after year.

Those extra millions show in far finer workmanship, in far more thorough inspection, in better steels and in building to scrupulously close measurements.

Hupmobile could build its great Six to ordinary standards, and it would still be one of the foremost cars in America from the standpoint of acceleration, of comfort, of steering and riding ease, of roadability.

But it would not have that surpassing smoothness, that wonderful dependability, that ability to stay away from the repair shop months on end, which make the Hupmobile Six the great car it is.

Hupmobile Six a Leader, Also, in Complete, Modern Equipment

What goes into a motor car is vastly more important than what goes on it. You will not buy, of course, on mere externals and non-essentials, but on proven performance, dependability, long life, and low cost of maintenance. To superiority in these fundamentals, however, the Hupmobile Six also joins the latest and most complete equipment to be found on any car in its price class.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

STEADY DRIVING IS HELD QUICKER THAN SPEEDING

Expert Says Sharp Stops of Racing Cars Takes More Time.

CALLS GUESSING POOR

By EDWIN GREER,
President Greer College of Automotive Electrical Trades,
Chicago, Ill.

The car you are driving is probably capable of a speed of from 60 to 70 miles an hour, but you can not use this speed for any length of time without flirting with the angels. The modern highway while built like a speedway, isn't a one-way proposition like the race track. Therefore, the driver who speeds must always make frequent and nerve-racking stops, which cuts down his average time to a minimum. His speed is far below that of the driver who maintains a steady pace hour after hour.

What is speeding? Since it is the primary cause of a majority of all automobile accidents, isn't it about time that it is plainly defined?

A great many motorists think that there is something magically safe about motoring, when the speedometer hugs close to 20 miles an hour. Yet speeding can happen at any speed.

One driver has discovered that much can be learned about speeding, by driving the car with the speedometer disconnected. For the test, he secured the services of a friend who followed him over a prescribed course in another car.

The driver with the disconnected speedometer proceeded just as he would under normal conditions, and then checked up with the actual speed record, as noted by the friend following him. The results were surprising. Invariably he drove from 5 to 15 miles an hour faster than he thought he was going.

This was particularly noticeable in traffic and in going down hill on the open highway.

An interesting thing happened on one of these tests. The sudden appearance of another car, turning in from a cross road, called for the quickest possible stop. The driver without a speedometer actually failed to stop in time to avoid a collision, just because he thought he was stopping quickly enough, and never bothered to reach for the emergency brake until it was too late!

The experiment showed plainly that the average driver can not guess his speed—and that he invariably goes faster than he thinks. It shows that a car driver is speeding, whenever his conception of a safe stopping distance is less than the actual stopping distance.

Putting two and two together, this experiment shows that a driver who drives without a speedometer, or who does not watch his speedometer, is speeding—at any speed.

Insult by Woman Rewards Politeness

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).

Vignette at Grand Central station:

A middle aged woman arriving on a train from the West dropped her purse. A well-groomed, evidently well-intentioned man tipped his hat and started to pick it up. Quick as a flash the woman stooped and grabbed her property. Tucking it under her arm, she stared icily at the astonished man, turned on her heel and went on her way muttering about "taking no chances with New York crooks." "Can you beat it!" exclaimed the man as he walked sheepishly away.

New Yorkers Moving Before October 1

New York, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).

Tenant farmers who move each year have nothing on New Yorkers. September is the month when thousands of families seek new apartments before the official moving day, October 1, and the annual quests of the nomad Gothamites are now under way. Outside the taking of apartments in new buildings, the annual affair of bustle so welcome to transfer companies is nothing more than a swapping of homes by the shifting population.

TREASURY

The Treasury Department Fishing club, of which Chief Clerk F. A. Birgfeld is president, returned from its annual trip to Solomons Island, Md., Monday morning. The club's report of "catches" was even more abnormal than usual and tended to make President Coolidge's fishing achievements seem ridiculously trivial. Martin, special assistant to the Assistant Secretary, and Frank C. Rose, assistant head of the internal revenue appointment division.

How Quality Standardization Builds Long Life in CHRYSLER "70"

They are marveling at the quality which continues to deliver its miles with undimmed vigor and at upkeep costs low beyond all precedent.

LONG LIFE is the fruit of Chrysler's standardization of quality—the planned result of an engineering and manufacturing precision which, in its all-embracing scope, is new to the motor car industry.

Where ordinary engineering is satisfied with the customary margins of safety, Chrysler engineering has provided lighter alloy steels tested under stresses thousands of pounds greater than they will ever be called upon to meet.

Where ordinary manufacture is usually content with limits of a thousandth of an inch, Chrysler "70" craftsmanship painstakingly calibrates in ten-thousandths.

Therefore, it has been only logical that not only Chrysler "70's" speed and power should eclipse all previous performance; its striking and smart appearance should outmode all existing body design, but—

Most important of all—that its remarkable endurance should be obsoleting pre-conceived ideas of durability and long life, even though its hundreds of thousands of owners exact from their cars the seemingly impossible in performance.

We are eager to demonstrate these Chrysler "70" superiorities.

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80".

WHAT owners of many fine motor cars have heretofore considered as quick, quiet, powerful performance is nothing to compare with the quicker and quieter and more powerful performance of the new 1927 Chandler.

You realize the vivid difference between Chandler performance and ordinary performance when you take a Chandler over the road . . .

When you meet some skyscraper hills, the taller the better, and skim swiftly up them "in high"—right past other cars growling along "in second" . . .

When you feel the car's instantaneous surge of smooth, soundless power every time you tickle the accelerator!

You are as comfortable riding as you are in a big padded chair back home. Everything about this car makes you tingle all over with pleasure—happier than you've ever been with an automobile.

Steering is marvelously easy. Safe stops in any weather at any speed are assured by Chandler's perfect-action 4-wheel brakes. And due to inherent engine design, plus an oil purifier and an air cleaner, draining the oil in the crankcase is now necessary only a few times a year.

What's more—all you have to do to lubricate the entire chassis is press your heel on the little plunger of Chandler's "One Shot" system of centralized lubrication.

There are nineteen brilliant models to choose from— all lower than ever in price —and every one a distinct credit to a company that occupies one of the strongest positions in the industry—a company with no bonded indebtedness, no mortgages or liens, no bank loans, no outstanding notes—a company with assets 20 to 1 over liabilities.

Own a car of quality, luxury, big value, and real championship performance!

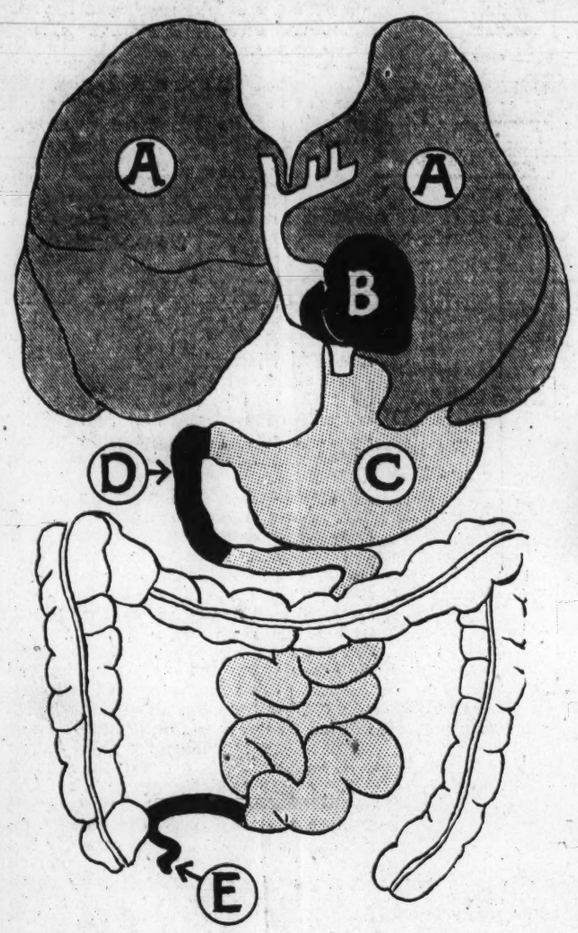
Explains How Valentino Dug His Own Grave

Sheik Might Be Alive Today Had He Not Attempted to Cure Indigestion Without Doctor's Advice



DIAGRAMMATIC VIEW OF THE VITAL ORGANS

The germs that breed gastric ulcer, which caused the death of Rudolph Valentino, commonly originate in a diseased appendix (E). They circulate through the intestines and frequently lodge in the duodenum (D), or in the lining of the stomach (C).

The spread of the infection caused pleurisy in the lungs (A-A) and finally affected the lining of the heart (B) bringing torture and untimely death to the popular movie actor.

Rudy's skill as a boxer demonstrated to those who sparred with him that the screen lover was no powder puff hero

Rudy as the Sheik, the role that elevated him to the heights of movie stardom

By ARTHUR C. JACOBSON, M. D.,
Associate Editor of the "Medical Times" and of "Medical Economics"

THERE is a great lesson in the life and death of Rudolph Valentino for every one who relies upon bicarbonate of soda to relieve "indigestion" and neglects to consult a physician about it.

Dr. Frank Smithies, the distinguished Chicago physician, has made a particularly earnest plea for more effective measures in the prevention of ulcers of the digestive system which sent the great screen lover to an untimely grave. In this golden age of preventive medicine such ailments can be cured if taken in time.

If the disease is prevented, as it can be, specialists cite the untold benefit that will accrue by removing from thousands the burden of suffering, of expensive treatment, of loss of time from work or study, of surgical risk and discomfort, and of threat of sudden death caused by ulcer. Ailments which may contribute to conditions in which ulcers eventually develop can and must be remedied.

Authorities even prophesy that a few decades hence the existence of great numbers of stomach ulcers will be considered an indication of poor medical practice. It is all a question of shutting off sources of germ supply.

Ulcers of the stomach, like Rudy's, do not start in the stomach or intestines, but are caused by some acute or chronic disturbance elsewhere in the system. It is thought that poor circulation at spots where ulcers usually form permits the poison to eat away tissue, allowing the germs to move freely.

When ulcer germs lodge in the walls of the stomach or intestines these organs literally "digest" themselves at these points until a hole is eaten through, as in the case of Valentino. It was a stomach ulcer of this kind which ended the career of the popular screen artist.

Just what is a stomach ulcer, such as Rudy had? How might it be described?

It is an open sore on the lining of the stomach, causing gradual destruction and death of the tissues involved.

Such an ulcer may rapidly eat its way into the abdominal cavity and poison other spots. It may slowly leak and cause abscesses near the stomach. It may make smaller the lower end of the stomach, through which food passes into the intestine, thus arresting digestion or causing stagnation of the stomach contents and swelling of the organ. It may cause repeated hemorrhages. It may cause the stomach to become fixed by adhesions, producing dragging pains. It may cause the stomach to become smaller and twisted out of shape. All of these are conditions that require the sufferer to be operated upon. The cuts made by the surgeon may, of course, heal naturally and completely.

There is great curiosity as to the particular cause of Rudy's ulcer.

Could such an ulcer result from an injury to the abdomen, such as a kick received in the course of a wild party?

That is not likely. Ulcers have been known to follow blows, but the weight of expert opinion is that this is coincidence.

Could such an ulcer result from the use or abuse of alcoholic beverages?

There is no evidence that such might ever be the case. Experts find that alcohol relieves the pain of stomach ulcer, and Sir Berkeley Moynihan, the great English authority on ulcers and their treatment, agrees with this opinion.

According to unofficial reports, Valentino had suffered from a rather severe attack of indigestion about six weeks before his final collapse, after which he lived largely on whisky and bicarbonate of soda.

Specialists do not list alcohol as a cause of ulcer, and in their advice as to treatment say nothing against alcohol.

It is safe to say that alcohol had nothing to do with Valentino's case, and that its deadening effect was all that made it possible for the screen star to bear the pain. Nevertheless, it was an evil because it masked the seriousness of his condition, kept him going and only postponed the operation which might have been performed sooner had Valentino's suffering not been made less acute by alcohol.

Was there any ground for the rumor that Rudy had been poisoned?

No. This supposition is exactly in keeping with what Dr. James J. Walsh has pointed out with respect to the poisonings that are supposed to have been so common in Italy in the days of the Borgias. Those supposed poisonings were mostly ulcers of the stomach or intestines. We hate to spoil romantic notions in this ruthless way, but Dr. Walsh is undoubtedly right. Of course, there was poisoning following the operation, but that is another story.

Were improper environment, anemia, overwork or nervous stress factors in Valentino's illness?

Authorities say that such factors must be taken into account. Any one reading the accounts of Valentino's brief life will realize the hardship and strain that went into it. They, along with the kind of food that he must have eaten for years, made it easier for the bony hand of death to clutch him.

Did excessive cigarette smoking play any part?

Some specialists hold tobacco directly responsible for attacks of ulcer, or at least for acute disturbances closely resembling it. Patients are told not to smoke for three months, and then only in moderation for the rest of their lives. The danger lies in excessive smoking.

The explanation may possibly lie in the fact that nicotine poisoning causes a slower blood flow in the smaller arteries, thus favoring the blocking of the blood in the stomach wall that some think helps to form ulcer.

The modern view is that stomach ulcer begins with infection from the appendix, the gall bladder, teeth, tonsils, lymph glands, adenoid tissue in the throat and the nasal passages. Infection from attacks of such diseases as grippe, erysipelas and rheumatism are said to be other causes. Which one of these factors figured specifically in Valentino's case?

Unquestionably appendicitis is one of the commonest sources of ulcer. One authority has shown that certain germs show a great liking for particular places in the system. In Rudy's case the lining of his stomach had such an affinity for the poison-producing ulcer germs, known to medical science as streptococci.

Valentino had appendicitis as well as a ruptured stomach ulcer. On this point one expert remarks that "the more often the abdomen is opened for gastric symptoms * * * the rarer does it become not to find gross evidence of disease in the appendix."

What symptoms must Valentino have suffered from? How long had he suffered with the complaint?

Valentino's chronic ulcer had caused him to suffer for years. We already have mentioned the attack six weeks before his final illness. A letter left by Peggy Scott, a woman friend of his who committed suicide in London when she heard of his death, permits the inference that he told her about his sufferings several years ago. The symptoms in general comprised "indigestion," loss of weight, anemia, nausea and much abdominal pain after eating. Pressure over the spot where the ulcer was hurt the movie star, and at the same time was associated with more or less stiffening of the overlying muscles.

When Rudy's ulcer finally ate through the wall of his stomach there was acute agonizing pain and he collapsed. This pain is frightful in intensity, and the least movement adds to the torture, so that Rudy lay in tense rigidity.

At first the abdomen was hard, later becoming swollen. The breathing was short and the pulse rapid. Still later came the signs of peritonitis. In such a human melodrama, with ulcer germs as the villain in the play, the hero runs great chances. A hole in the stomach kills at least 15 per cent of patients with ulcer of the stomach, as it did the movie star.

The stomach wall was eaten through Sunday, August 15, at noon, but Valentino was not taken to the Polyclinic hospital until 4:30 p. m., which meant valuable time lost. The surgeons began their work at 5 p. m.

With the technique of the appendix operation we shall not concern ourselves, since the ruptured stomach ulcer is the point of greatest interest. Such a hole is usually quite small, clean cut and situated upon the under surface of the stomach.

Especial care is taken to see that the parts immediately beneath the diaphragm are thoroughly cleansed in order to minimize as much as possible the risk of spreading an inflammation through the diaphragm, thus causing pleurisy. Just such a complication developed during Rudy's apparent convalescence.

In addition to closing the hole, the operation known as gastroenterostomy is, if the patient's condition permits, performed in order to drain the stomach, give it rest and lessen the tendency for more ulcers to develop.

This operation is a "short-circuiting" procedure whereby a loop of a portion of the small intestine is brought up and attached to the stomach in such a way that the contents of the stomach enter the intestines by the new opening instead of through the normal opening into the duodenum, or portion of the small intestine next the stomach.

The effects of the operation are both physiological and mechanical. Alkaline juices from the duodenum constantly enter the stomach and serve to reduce acidity in that organ, which is a desirable physiological effect. Mechanically, the effects consist in rapid emptying of the stomach and easing of the muscles, while contraction near that organ can not prevent the onward passage of food.

The bulletins tell the rest of the sad story.

On Friday, August 20, an official bulletin reported that the most critical period had been passed and that the patient was well on his way to recovery.

On Sunday, August 22, pleurisy develops in the left chest. Bulletin of August 22 reads: "There is a slight spread of infection in the abdominal wall."

August 23, Monday. Early bulletin reports pleurisy as having spread. Death at 12:10 noon.

Dr. Meeker, one of the attending physicians, reported Valentino's death as due to peritonitis and septic endocarditis, the peritonitis resulting from the hole eaten by the ulcer and the endocarditis from infection of the heart lining following the development of pleurisy.

The death certificate filed with the department of health reads: Ruptured gastric ulcer and general peritonitis; contributing causes septic pneumonia and septic endocarditis.

Not every case of "indigestion" leads to stomach or duodenal ulcer, but instances of such ulcers are rare in which there is no history of indigestion.

A peculiarity of ulcer which may lead to self-deception as to cure is the tendency to periods during which there is complete relief from symptoms.

Never dismiss indigestion as of little consequence. Leave the weighing of its significance to your family physician.

Rudy's last service to the world was a very great one, for vast numbers of people have received an intensive education in matters relating to their digestive interests in particular, to health in general and to their very lives.

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

"WELL, Miss Hazel," said Philbert, as he dropped into the committee room to borrow a cigarette, "I see the prohibition enforcement people have switched the poison on us again."

"I wish they'd get one good one, and stick to it," replied the Senator's secretary.

"So do I," said Philbert. "My dear, I no more than get my system accustomed to a bichloride of mercury cocktail, when I have to go in training all over again on wood alcohol highballs."

"On the whole," said Hazel reflectively, "I think maybe it's a pretty good thing. Prohibition, Philbert, in my opinion, is going to make the American people the healthiest race on earth."

"Explain it to me, please," said Philbert.

"Look at the power of resistance we are developing, Philbert. Look at the indestructible organs the future generations will have. My dear, you take the American of a hundred years from now, Philbert, and he'll never wear out."

"That doesn't sound unso," said Philbert, "explain it to me, please."

"What can kill us by that time, Philbert? Nothing, Philbert, and the only way left to commit suicide will be to jump off of something, and by that time, Philbert, everybody will be equipped with parachutes, or else may-be born with them. No, Philbert, at the way we are going the American in ought to be able to live for about hundred years."

"Who would want to live that long under prohibition?" said Philbert, emily.

"My dear, we will get used to it by time, and not mind it any more if there never had been anybody ed Volstead. No, I do not take a my view of the situation, Philbert, every time I read in the papers the prohibition enforcement horities have invented another son to put in the alcohol, and have ndoned formulas D-1,324, X-268, Y, Z and &, I only look upon it as other diet, a sort of health course the building up of the physical ructure. No, Philbert, why should we merely content to become immune bichloride of mercury, when we ight just as well go on and get our omachs in such splendid condition, hilbert, that arsenic and prussic acid ly act as a tonic?"

* * * *

"DO YOU think we'll ever get to that point?" asked Philbert, hopefully.

"My dear, of course I do," replied azel. "Why, we've only begun these ealth courses, Philbert. The whole thing is in merely an experimental stage as yet, but think, Philbert, what it'll mean for the generations as yet unborn, Philbert, for our grandchildren and our great-grandchildren, and our great-great-grandchildren, when the race has accustomed itself, Philbert, not only to resist all the known toxic substances that can be used to denature alcohol, Philbert, but all the diseases. How long do you think it will be, Philbert, before the prohibition enforcement people run out of chemicals, and turn to germs?"

"I hadn't thought of that, Hazel," said Philbert, brightly.

"That's because you are not a prohibition enforcement official, Philbert. You are not supposed to think of things like that. That is somebody else's job, at a large salary. But I have given a good deal of attention to the subject, Philbert, now that I am going in for physical culture, and have taken up some of the latest fads and macfaddens, and I think the future generations will have no more fear of yellow fever or cholera, Philbert, than we have of wood alcohol. When that time comes, Philbert, the only way to kill an American will be to do it with a hatchet."

"I hear that the next drive of the reformers will be against the deadly and pernicious weed," said Philbert, as he borrowed another cigarette.

"That is coming, too," admitted Hazel, "and think what that will mean for the future generations."

Some of the pleasantest evenings I've spent have been in the kitchen.

"Explain it to me, please," said Philbert.

"Think what a blessing it will be, Philbert, when nobody will be in the least disconcerted when a bootleg cigar blows up and knocks out an eye. Why, in time, Philbert, the eye will gain such power of resistance that you couldn't blow one of them out, as so many are by these trick cigars nowadays, Philbert. My dear, by the time the bootleg cigarettes have been denatured with T. N. T. we shall be physically the most superior race the world has ever known, and we can go into battle, Philbert, without a trench helmet or a gas mask."

"I never thought of that," admitted Philbert.

"No, Philbert, the potentialities of prohibition, Philbert, are very potential, and my Senator says the same. My Senator says that nobody knows what it's going to lead to, and he thinks there are going to be innumerable blessings that nobody has ever dreamed of as yet. Think what it is going to mean to this country, Philbert, when eating strawberries is prohibited by law. Think what a healthy race that'll make us, Philbert."

"Explain it to me, please," said Philbert.

* * * *

"NOWADAYS," said Hazel, "people just nibble at strawberries early in the Spring, and let it go at that, but when it is illegal to eat them, Philbert, the consumption will increase so that in a couple of generations, Philbert, everybody will become so immune to them that there won't be anything like prickly rash or rheumatism, Philbert. No, Philbert, I don't think there is anything that has done this country so much good as prohibition, and my Senator says the same. What was the idea of a lot of men in the old days staying down town all night, drinking by themselves in some club or barroom when they might just as well have taken their wives or sweethearts out in the kitchen and shaken up a cocktail for everybody. Why Philbert, I know men who were so helpless in a kitchen before prohibition that they could't boil the water to make a cup of tea, and now what they can do with a little mash and brown sugar, Philbert, would make the Burgomaster of Wurzburg look like one of the Sons of Jonadab. No, Philbert, prohibition has made people more handy around the house."

"That certainly doesn't sound unso," admitted Philbert. "My dear, I wish you could see what I can now do to fuseloil with dried peaches, which must be cut with scissors, Hazel, and not with a knife. I must admit that I never had any accomplishment like that in the old days."

"My dear, we learn something every day. I can remember when I no more knew what went into a Manhattan cocktail than I knew at what temperature the beer should stop cooking, and now I have people writing to me for my recipe from all over my state, and it's made us thousands of votes, Philbert, and my Senator says the same."

"Prohibition has certainly changed the home life a lot," admitted Philbert. "Why, Hazel, in the old days, when a gentleman would call on a girl, it sometimes took him five or six years to get so familiar with the family that they'd invite him into the kitchen to help make candy, or for Sunday night supper, but nowadays, Hazel, in all the best apartments, the kitchen is right opposite the front door, and the first thing you do when you pay a social call is to go to the ice box, and then maybe, later on in the evening, if you want to, you can go into the parlor, but generally, Hazel, you don't want to, and I must admit I've spent some of the pleasantest evenings of my life in the booze-doir sitting on the patent ironing board, with my feet on the gas stove."

"More and more life is becoming simplified," Hazel agreed. "Thanks to the blessings of paternalism, Philbert, many of the things that we used to have to do for ourselves are now done for us by the helpful officials. In the old days a man stood up at the bar and nominated his own poison, but nowadays, Philbert, General Andrews nominates it, and we are saved all that trouble. I must say the system is great and getting better all the time."

"Well, maybe I am going to live longer now, but I must admit, Hazel, that sometimes when I get up in the morning it would take a strong argument to convince me. I see six more are dead at Newark."

"That proves, Philbert," said Hazel, "that you can't breed supermen from weaklings."

WIRES GUIDE BLIND AT N. Y. VACATION CAMP

For the blind of New York a camp is in operation this summer at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson. It is called the River Lighthouse, and is run in conjunction with the Lighthouse of the New York Association for the Blind.

Three hundred blind men and women will have enjoyed vacations at this camp before the summer is over. The camp consists of a roomy old house, set far back from the road on a grassy hillside. A wide lawn is shaded by old trees and nearby is a large garden which furnishes an ample supply of vegetables during the season.

Walking has been made easy at River Lighthouse for these sightless people. A wire strung along the paths serves as a guide. The paths and roads which have no wire are made of gravel, which is easy for the feet to follow. With such assistance the vacationists may take daily promenades as safely as if they could see.

"Vacation to a blind person means twice as much as it does to a sighted person," said Miss Daisy Rogers, recording secretary for the New York Association for the Blind.

Those who are without sight have very few amusements. They can not even go to the movies.

Many of these blind visitors are self-supporting. They are engaged in millinery, stenography, typing, running small shops, working in insurance offices. They are as greatly in need of a definite change from the city as any seeing person.

Languishing for Crime News

By WILL ROGERS

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Well, all I know is just what I read in the papers. I am so far away that you will find my information kinder dull reading. Do you know that a murder is two weeks old before I get an inkling of it over here? I don't hear a bit of late interesting news like that till the party has maybe had time to shoot two or three more or have their trial and be out on bond. Funny thing, these papers over here don't go in for murders much. They certainly are old-fashioned about what is news. Why, when President Coolidge caught that Red Snapper up there they cabled that over and made a big story out of it, and here a fellow in Chicago can go out and do fair day's shooting and maybe come in with six or eight notches in the cork of his hootch flask, and they won't cable a word of it. The way they do the news of crime and robbery from America, they just run them under the heading "American Prosperity." Yesterday's market report:

Killed (by automobile), 32.

Killed (by Gunshot and other natural causes), 21.

Robberies, 824.

THEY won't tell you who was killed, who was robbed, who did the robbing, or any of the details. You can't find out if you had a friend done any good or not. They run it just like a baseball box score. You get the results and that's all. In fact, it's not as complete as box scores are. There you do know who was out, who made errors. Now, you see, they couldn't run a paper five minutes like that over home. Then here is another funny thing about them over here. If they happen to have a murder here (they had one last year), why they don't show any pictures of it at all. If they have any pictures of the fellow who did the killing, why, they just let the police use them.

They seem to think the police will do more toward catching him than the readers can, and the funny part about it is that they do. Well, can you imagine a fellow leading a gang over home, and going in to rob a place and shooting half a dozen, getting away, and then not having a single paper publish a dozen pictures of him? Say he would be so sore he would call on that editor and tell him something. He just about would be so sore that he wouldn't rob any more. And imagine if they didn't publish his girl's picture, under the heading "Master Mind Behind Gang Leader." You keep her picture out of the paper and you will see how long she will continue this "master minding." Over here they don't care if he had a girl. He could have a harem if he wanted to; nobody would ever read about it. After the murder is over the next thing you read about him is: "He was cheerful to the last."

If he wants to do any heroing here he better do it before he commits any crime. For from that time on the papers are going to cease to be his press agents.

He will call on that editor.

DO you know, as a real matter of fact, that criminal statistics of England prove that in all the murders that have been committed here that over 50 per cent of the ones that committed the crime have committed suicide before or right after being caught? They do that rather than face the law. They know that they will be caught, and they know what will happen to them after they are caught. So rather than face it, they kill themselves. Can you imagine a fellow in some big city over home committing suicide for fear he would be caught, or funnier still one committing suicide for fear of what would happen to him after he did get caught? It wouldn't be possible for an American criminal to commit suicide. It would require too big a sense of humor.

They got the quaintest ideas over here of right and wrong. Lots of the cafes are not allowed to serve anything to drink after 12 o'clock. But they have cabaret shows that run to 2 or 3 o'clock, and after 12 there is not a drop to drink on any table, and no one has a bottle hid under the table, and not a flask in the house. They seem to think because it's a law that they have to obey it. They got the funniest ideas that way. They seem to think the whole thing is on the level. All in the world you have to do over here to get a fellow not to do anything is just to let him know that it is against the law.

Now these papers over here will print something about the League of Nations, or France's financial trouble, or Mexico, or our Congress even, before they will print crime stuff. I don't see how in the world they make a living with them. And the policemen, especially the traffic ones, when they catch you, they are so nice about it that they don't seem like traffic policemen at all. You never hear one say "Ha, Bo! Pull over there! Say, where do you think you are going? What's the big idea? You are the only one on the road?" They are so nice about it here that it is almost a pleasure to have stopped and made their acquaintance.

But, as I say, they are just so far behind the times over here they don't know any better. They think they are progressing. So that's what makes it so hard to get any news out of their papers that would be of any interest to you all over there.

WE had at our theater recently the mother that swam the channel. She seems a mighty nice, modest woman and gives everybody else a lot of credit. The channel has been kinder vacant the last few days. I guess about everybody come over that wanted to. Secretary Hughes is prowling around over here somewhere. Mellon was smarter than Hughes. He come while he held office. I am leaving here soon and going up to Scotland to see Barney Baruch at his Grouse castle. They have killed about all the gentle grouse up there now, and they are just waiting till the Scotchmen get some more gentled for them. Barney and I got to sorter lay out our lines for the old 1928 handicap. I hate to mix politics and grouse and bagpipes and kilts, but '28 looks like a Democratic year. It's two years away. That's the main reason it looks like a Democratic year. Any two years away always looks like a Democratic year. In fact any two years away is a Democratic year. Democratic politics is what you might call future politics. But Barney and I have a pretty good layout of a campaign. He is going to furnish the candidate, and I am going to furnish the platform. We have really never had a well written platform. It's always had ink splotches on it, or beer stains or something. So I have an idea of an entirely new one, that will give us everything but the votes.

Now, we got to look up Mr. Coolidge for the votes. The way he and the weather act between now and the fall of '28 will decide the votes for us. Democratic candidates have been nominated in the back rooms of hotels for years. But this is the first time one ever was chosen out of the moors of old Scotland, while we are waiting for the Scotchmen to drive some halfbreed prairie chickens by.

So the next President, if he is elected on the Democratic party, out of respect to our judgment we will insist that he wear kilts, and have a Scotch economy platform.

I hear my old friend Ma Ferguson has dropped back into private life. Well, she didn't have far to drop. Ma had been practically in private life for years. It will be pretty tough on the "Governor," though. But he will get out and stir up something on the outside. Texas will always have to admit he made an awful good governor for his wife. I guess this fellow Moody is a good man. Well it takes a good man to handle Texas. I will be down there in a few weeks, right in Texas, and I will see if they have improved or got worse. Well, good-by, my TEA is waiting.

A Royal "Spanking" for Lady Mountbatten

She Shocked England's Queen by Stepping the Charleston With a Musical Comedy Man and Brought Royal Wrath on the "Palace Gang"

Garden party scene at the Royal Yacht Squadron from which Lord Mountbatten has been blackballed because of his wife's behavior.

Fred and Adele Astair, American stage dancers, doing their stuff on the roof of the Savoy Hotel

Lord "Battie" and his lady, lively members of Britain's younger upper set

EVERY one on this side of the water who knows or knows of that delightful pair, Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten, is watching with the keenest interest the battle now being waged against this charming couple by none other, it is said, than Queen Mary herself, as the chief representative of the older and more sedate set who have decided that it is high time to restore a little of the former decorum and dignity that attended court life.

The chief offender in the younger element, known as the "palace gang," the queen believes to be the former Edwina Ashley, England's richest heiress, now Lady Mountbatten, well known for her exuberance of spirits and generally acknowledged as the leader of the gang.

When pretty Edwina climaxed a long series of misdemeanors by becoming the dancing partner of a musical comedy actor, the exasperated queen administered at once that promises to be a long "spanking." Of course, the queen literally didn't take Lady Mountbatten over her knee, but she undoubtedly made her smart more than a hair brush would when she caused this vivacious lady's husband to be blackballed from the Royal Yacht Squadron, the very stronghold of British aristocracy.

The punishment that is being meted out to Lady Mountbatten and her husband is particularly interesting to Americans because this young woman is being disciplined for exactly the daredevil, democratic and unconventional ways which made her so popular in this country. Probably never did we have any titled visitors who impressed us less like high-born lords and ladies than the Mountbattens.

When this lively pair came to America a few years ago on their honeymoon, scores of rich and fashionable American families were eager for the chance to entertain the distinguished visitors, but the Mountbattens sought hospitality in less formal quarters. They skipped off to Hollywood and enjoyed themselves immensely as the guests of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin and other famous film stars.

Many members of the older and conventional set who have heard of the warfare going on between the queen and the too spirited Edwina and her gay husband wonder how it is possible for a young woman in so high a social circle to become acquainted with as common a person as a professional dancer.

It will be remembered by the hosts of Lord and Lady Mountbatten in this country that the two are just as fond of dancing as the Prince of Wales is and have no objection to going to public dance halls or bumping elbows with the ordinary crowd that frequents such places.

In London just as in New York, it is now considered quite all right for social registerites to go to the better class night clubs. And, of course, at night clubs one is likely to meet almost any one. At the table on the right may be a prize fight promoter and on the left a circus rider. In such an atmosphere one can't be particular.

One London night club, it is reported, became very popular for the reason that it was well advertised that Fred Astair, the nimble-toed musical comedy star, was due to appear every night following his dancing act in the theater. Those who have seen Mr. Astair, who is an American, on the stage will not be surprised that Lady Mountbatten wanted to have him for a dancing partner, for there is probably no one in London or New York who can do a better Charleston than he.

Dancing the Charleston is said to be somewhat contagious in effect. Even the most dignified people testify that while watching an exhibition of the negroid classic they hardly can keep their feet from flying out in a crude imitation of this very difficult dance. If a Charleston solo would have such an effect on a person with no particular fondness for dancing, it can not be wondered at that Lady Mountbatten was seized with an unconquerable desire to get on to the floor with Mr. Astair.

No doubt her toes tickled to try the more sophisticated steps that the actor was introducing in his dance and which were new to London. And the Charleston is like tennis—you can't get far with a beginner. In order to learn the intricate dance you have to be under the tutelage of a person who knows considerable about it.

While Lady Mountbatten might have attempted the dance with some of her social equals, they, unfortunately, would have been no help in her progress with the difficult steps. Moreover, the former Edwina Ashley has a temperament that won't permit her to be beaten at anything. She plays remarkable golf, she rides to hounds and as a dancer she shines even to a greater degree.

So when she saw some one that could do a better Charleston than she, naturally she was on the floor in a minute spiritedly going through the gyrations of the dance with the talented actor. Probably, even to those who are by this time accustomed to "Edwina's" unconventional modes, this seemed very daring. For Lady Mountbatten wears her skirts just about as short as you see them anywhere on Broadway, and to the staid people present the sight of Lady Mountbatten's garters and lingerie was, no doubt, a shocking spectacle.

At any rate, her stepping to syncopated rhythm with her agile partner came to the ears of the queen, who was not at all amused at the report that Lady Mountbatten went through the twirls and twists of the dance with as much grace as can be expected in an amateur.

The queen, it is reported, sat in council with other members of the older set and it unanimously was decided that a check must be put on the unruly "palace gang." When testimony was taken in regard to the worst member of the gang, the fingers of all pointed to pretty Lady Mountbatten. She, it was said, was the most daredevil of them all.

The best way to "spank" Lady Mountbatten, it was decided, was to blackball her husband from membership in the Royal Yacht Squadron at Cowes where the cream of London society gathers. Of all the calamities that might befall a young Britisher of the social standing of Lord Mountbatten this is about the greatest.

The Yacht Squadron has charge of the international races and at all times the clubhouse is a center of social activity. Two people of the wealth and social status of the Mountbattens would be constant frequenters of the club. But now they can go only occasionally, when invited, and it is believed that this privilege also may be taken away from them unless they behave themselves better than they have in the last four or five years.

Of course, all this bad feeling puts the Prince of Wales in a very embarrassing position. He can not very well openly rebel against the wishes of his staid and sedate mother, and yet all his sympathies are with his gay cousins. In fact, it is said, that he himself is the one at whom the blow is really aimed. Ever since the prince's visit to America, the queen has been hearing things about the prince and his gang and she finally has resolved to check this gayety.

The prince and "Battie," as Lord Mountbatten is familiarly called, are not only first cousins but are the greatest of friends. Before "Battie's" marriage to England's richest girl, the prince and he traveled over half the world together and H. R. H. certainly would never take along a "crepe hanger" as a traveling companion.

In memory of these expeditions the prince gave "Battie," on the day of his marriage to "Edwina," a silver globe with the paths of their travels marked on it. No doubt there were just as many festive events on these occasions as there were on the prince's visit to America.

Since the marriage of "Battie," their friendship has increased because Lady Mountbatten proved herself no one to throw cold water on any of their pranks. In fact, she herself, it is rumored, sometimes has led them in their defiance of the conventions. Nowhere in England is there a better example of the "younger generation" than this charming and headstrong young woman.

Another reason that probably accounts for the frequency of the Prince of Wales' visits to the Mountbattens is Lady Mountbatten's girl chum, Mrs. Richard Norton, the beautiful young matron, who was in the prince's party when he visited America.

Mrs. Norton, some people say, is the most beautiful girl in England; others accord that distinction to Lady Mountbatten. Both are typically English in type with Titian hair, large blue eyes and particularly fair complexions. Not only is Mrs. Norton very fine looking but she is an accomplished dancer. She dances so well that the prince prefers her to anybody else for a partner.

When Mrs. Norton was the guest of the Joshua Cosdens during the prince's visit, everybody wondered why the prince motored over to the Cosden estate every morning. It soon was discovered that in parceling out the royal party to American hosts, the Cosdens had bagged the greatest prize of all in the person of Mrs. Norton, as it resulted in the Cosdens seeing more of the prince than did anybody else.

Now Lady Mountbatten and Mrs. Norton are almost always together. These fascinating young women are reported to be the gayest of the "palace gang" and, of course, wherever they are there is sure to be a crowd of young men, including the prince.

When the queen undertakes to discipline Lady Mountbatten, most people think that she has taken a big job on her hands, for this independent young woman has inherited all the self-reliance and courage of her granddaddy, the Rt. Hon. Sir Ernest Cassel. If he could come to life he probably would get a good laugh at any one's attempt to tame the granddaughter that he believed was so like himself that he left her the bulk of his large fortune.

Sir Ernest spitefully was called by some Europe's most famous money-lender. In reality he was a very noted financier, and his great wealth was built up by courageous ventures.

When his little granddaughter was a mere child she was a prime favorite with him and he enjoyed her company greatly.

When the Mountbattens came to America they delighted every one with their democratic manners. Lord Mountbatten preferred to be known as "Battie" and he told one of his hosts that he didn't give two "hoots" as to what anybody called him.

But while Lady Mountbatten has been cutting up, to the great displeasure of the queen, there is another young member of the royal family, Princess Arthur of Connaught, who is quite conventional and conservative enough to please the most decorous of the older generation.

A curious fact that is widely rumored is that once American or English actors have met the Princess Arthur they are much more charmed by her than they ever were by Lady Mountbatten.

SATISFYING JUSTICE

By JOSIAH M. WARD.

Justice, says a Spanish proverb, is a lame horse blind in one eye. Witness the fate of the survivors of the Philip Nolan incursion of Texas in 1800, when Texas was Spanish territory. In March, 1801, his party of seventeen Americans was attacked by a regiment of Spanish troopers armed not only with muskets, but carrying a swivel gun firing grape shot. Nolan was killed at the first discharge of this then formidable weapon and the remaining Americans fought until their ammunition was exhausted. Twelve were left to surrender, and they did so on the word of the Spanish officer that he would escort them back to American territory with the honors of war. Two of the twelve escaped, leaving ten prisoners.

Instead of making good his word, the Spanish officer, Musquiz by name, hustled the Americans to the interior of Mexico and their case was referred to the King of Spain. Meanwhile they were kept confined in a filthy Mexican jail, and one man died from privation, leaving nine waiting for word as to their fate. It came after six years of waiting and was truly Solomonic. The king decreed that one man of every five should be shot.

Here was a problem. There were only nine men left. The Spanish officials deliberated long and solemnly and at length concluded that as the king's decree carried with it a sentence of ten years' further imprisonment in a penal colony for the final remainder of the party, the execution of one man of the nine would satisfy justice. The prisoners cast lots and Luke Blackburn threw the lowest total. So Blackburn was executed; the eight left were delivered into penal servitude, and Spanish justice triumphed.—From Adventure Magazine.

ELECTRICITY TO SALVAGE OLD IRON FROM SCRAP HEAPS

Millions of tons of iron now rusting in trash heaps throughout the country can be reclaimed by electricity, asserts Charles P. Perin, New York mining engineer.

"Large tanks of iron solvent, ferrous chloride, for example, could be maintained in convenient places, into which these wastes could be dumped," he says. "Then the iron could be recovered by electrolysis." In other words, if our villages and towns saw that iron junk was dumped into such tanks, they would find a considerable addition to their treasuries every year.

Considering that 20,000,000 tons of iron and steel are destroyed by rust every year in the United States, the suggestion, says Popular Science Monthly for October, seems to be one of no mean value, especially since Mr. Perin points out also that electricity can be made to produce iron that will rust less rapidly.

A TWO-JOB WIFE

AN INTERVIEW BY FANNIE KILBOURNE.

"At the time we were married, I was earning within a few dollars a week as much as Frank. I was as healthy, as eager to do my part. I did not wish to be a frightening responsibility to my husband to be the cause of his leaving congenial work. To tell the truth, I had never felt any particular need of being protected and I didn't then. All I asked was to be loved and to be treated with the respect and consideration with which any really fair-minded man treats the woman he loves.

"This is the schedule we finally worked into and which, after a year and a half, is still working with success:

"We rise at 7. Thanks to my bobbed hair and Frank's having to shave, it takes me fifteen minutes to dress to his twenty. So I start the coffee and lay the table for breakfast. Frank comes along in time to fix the grapefruit and we make the toast and cook eggs on the table grill. We are usually through breakfast by 8. Frank washes the dishes and prepares any vegetable that we are going to have for dinner. I make our beds, tidying the living-room and make out the marketing list. We are through and off by 8:30.

"At 5 o'clock we take turns stopping on our way home from the office to do the marketing. The one who does not stop has the table laid and such of the dinner as can be started on the way.

"On these dinners we use up a part of the margin allowed for saving in our original budget. With an hour to buy and prepare dinner, not for us are the cheap cuts of meat that can be made delicious by long cooking, nor the most economical of made-over dishes that use up scraps, but take so long to prepare.

"Our dinner dishes are usually washed (by both of us) by 7:30 and, except for one evening a week, we are through. One evening a week Frank gives the apartment a good cleaning while I do our weekly mending and make the laundry list out."—From the Delineator for September.

THINGS THAT BLESS.

Every woman should have well-kept hands. One of the first traitors to age are your hands if they are neglected. The care of the hands is really most simple and does not take more than a few minutes each day. Always wear gloves when doing housework, use a soft lotion after every washing and treat your nails with respect. Don't hack and butcher them. Such is Celia Caroline Cole's advice to women in her article "Things That Bless."—From the Delineator for September.

London.

THE fight to death between England's rival "dope kings"—the strange ramifications that stretch from squalid Limehouse right up to fashionable Mayfair—tragedies that devastate such women as the Hon. Gwynneth Morgan, daughter of Lord Tredegar, and at the other end of the scale, the pretty butterfly, Gertrude Dellow—the liaisons between black men and white women—such dangerous marriages as that of the sinister yellow Ah Tong who forced his white bride to be a secret agent catering to the drug-maddened—these are some of the lurid revelations that have caused the British public to watch with tense anxiety Scotland Yard's battle against dope traffickers which now culminates in the imprisonment of the Dutchman Boom, notorious "Snow Prince!"

The upheaval of the world war transformed the sporadic sale of dope that occurred in London's slums and dockland into a vast and terrible organized industry—a money hungry octopus that gripped with outstretched tentacles its victims from every quarter of Great Britain!

The leader, as will be remembered, was the infamous brilliant Chang, wildest Oriental that ever fattened on vice.

The suicide of the Hon. Gwynneth Morgan was followed by startling disclosures showing that she had been a victim of the Chinaman's almost hypnotic powers and that he had been the evil genius of her life, transforming her from a bright, happy society girl into that pitiable, broken thing, a drug fiend!

These revelations helped the police and a short time afterward the snake-like Chinaman was arrested, charged with some of his many crimes, imprisoned and finally deported.

London hoped that at last the illicit drug trade would be stopped and these tragedies of broken lives made impossible. But instead, the traffic continued, with this difference—that the police became aware of the fact that there were now two sources of supply in place of one! To add to their difficulties, although the one was known, the other was a complete mystery!

James Rich, a negro from South Carolina, whose real activities easily had been penetrated beneath his guise of theatrical performer, seemed the logical successor of the Chinaman.

He was watched with characteristic vigilance, but so cunning were his methods, so subtle his machinations, that for months it was impossible to bring home to him a single illegal act. Scotland Yard, nevertheless, made some important discoveries through dogging the movements of Rich.

They discovered that he was the leader of a band of negroes who entered into liaisons with white girls for the purpose of using these degraded creatures to distribute drugs!

At last, however, Rich made a blunder. With the vanity that is the undoing of so many crooks, he believed himself immune to police detection. One day, forgetting his usual caution, he handed a package to a woman in the street.

Like a flash of lightning the detectives were upon him and he was under arrest.

In court he attempted the old-time defense that he had been framed and that the dope found upon him, and also upon his woman customer, was planted by the police. But this was not believed and not only was he sentenced to a term of imprisonment, but he was also condemned to deportation.

But—to the amazement of the dope traffickers under the sway of the black man, and to the consternation of Scotland Yard—drug selling seemed to flourish more prosperously than ever, although the old chief struggled in vain to get back from China and the new leader toiled behind prison walls.

The next event to rivet public attention on the dope question with redoubled force was the suicide of a famous figure of London's night life, "The Little Lady of the West End," Gertrude Dellow.

"The Little Lady" was the bonne amie of the baronet, Sir Home Seaton Gordon. Gertrude's refinement, her gentle ways, appealed to the wealthy aristocrat who took for her a magnificent apartment and surrounded her with luxury.

Her parties and frolics had enjoyed the reputation of innocent gayety. But from the time that she had the misfortune to meet Mrs. Laura Ah Tong, who was not introduced to her under that name and whom she did not suspect of having a yellow husband, the change in her was almost immediate. Her parties now became wild debauches, frenzied revels led by the "Little Lady" herself, pathetic victim of dope.

Sir Home made many attempts to save her, but she succumbed afresh each time to the lure of the vicious joys of cocaine.

Laura Ah Tong, horrified at the news that she had supplied the very dose with which the "Little Lady" killed herself, is said to have given secret information to the police.

At all events, Ah Tong, who had been one of Chang's, and later Rich's, ablest assistants, was arrested. Thus came the revelation that the Oriental who had realized that where a yellow man might fail a white woman could succeed had wooed and won a pretty white bride for the purpose of using her in the most dangerous trade in the world.

Scotland Yard seized incriminating papers dealing with Ah Tong and his gang and published the sensational disclosure that the Chinaman systematically had been educating his fellow countrymen to the policy of making their distributions through white women.

But in spite of all this evidence, which tended to localize the distribution to Chinatown, a sort of sixth sense that seems to develop in the "Yard" men directed suspicion not toward any member of the slum population but to one seemingly respectable and wealthy merchant, Henricus Augustus Boom.

Boom was, to all intents and purposes, a rich business man whose affairs made it necessary for him to visit Paris and Amsterdam at short intervals. A good looking man, with blue eyes and crisp, golden curls, healthy as a western farmer, and with pleasant, candid manners, he gave the impression of being entirely honest, open and above board.

But Scotland Yard somehow couldn't feel satisfied that Mynheer Boom was all that he seemed.

And so they watched.

And then one evening a plain-clothes detective at a night club heard a man whisper to one of the women present, "Twenty ounces, all pure."

The sleuth's instincts aroused, he followed the man and a few hours later saw him speak to Boom.

A slender thread with which to enmesh a dangerous and clever dope dealer, but nevertheless, through the activities of the man who had spoken the fateful words, Scotland Yard accumulated facts that proved Boom the master mind of a world-wide trade in drugs.

They learned that another phase of his commerce was to reap profits from bringing into England women of disreputable character and particularly those who would help to induce their English patrons to contract the drug habit.

Thus, in seeking to wreck the dope plot, Scotland Yard uncovered also a network of "white slave" intrigue.

This, they learned, was his unholy mission when he traveled to Paris and Amsterdam and other continental cities.

He did not know, of course, that the police had discovered that the lady who posed as his wife and who had secured quite some social success merely was one of the women he had imported, but taking a fancy to her had decided to keep her for himself.

With the memory of Gwynneth Morgan and Gertrude Dellow and similar tragedies by the score to urge him to make a determined and even desperate effort, one of the detectives disguised himself and, spending days and nights in the Soho quarter in the very heart of the traffic, posed as an agent who could distribute a large quantity of cocaine to his clientele.

Boom fell into the trap and arranged to supply "snow" to the detective.

Almost before he could realize what had happened the cold grasp of steel secured his wrists. A lightning search had taken from him his hidden packages of deadly poison and he was a prisoner.

The police drew from him some interesting confessions. He explained the curious circumstances of the "dope war" that for so long had baffled the authorities. He told that a Japanese named Yasukichi Myagawa was the real head of the Limehouse gang, while Rich had become the chief of the West End faction of dope dealers. The rivalry between the two had so injured each that they had agreed to appoint him, Boom, as head and commander of the entire enterprise.

First, he had been sent to New York. Here, having enticed several hundreds of men and women to become drug addicts and thus proving his abilities as an organizer, he was recalled to Europe to "create markets" in the great British and continental centers.

His most daring, and incidentally most successful, stunt was to pose as a patron of education with a firmly rooted conviction of the benefits to be derived from travel. In this guise, he would become friendly with people who had children and would insist that they take a trip to England as his guests.

The child would receive from him an expensive doll, sent to the ship.

Inside the pretty doll, supposed to delight an innocent heart, he would conceal sufficient cocaine to kill a regiment.

Boom, the benevolent patron of "internationalism in education," as he termed it, would meet his guests at the custom house. When they were duly passed out, after the formalities and while the visitors interestedly were gazing at their new surroundings, he would take the doll for a moment, skillfully unscrew the toy head, slip out the package unseen by his guests, and thus gain possession of his dreadful merchandise.

Another method of his was to invite such young girls as he thought desirable for the still more sinister side of his business to pay a visit to him and his wife, asking them to bring with them some little package of a seemingly innocent description that a friend of his would send to the boat. In the lining of these parcels, dope was secreted.

When these unfortunates arrived, Boom, of course, was nowhere to be found. He would then disclose to his young guests, often timorous, ignorant girls, that they were implicated in the crime of bringing in drugs and threaten to denounce them as dope peddlers if they refused to obey his orders.

By choosing the mostly easily imposed upon types, he succeeded in combining his drug dealing with lucrative "white slave" traffic.

The rich and cunning Dutchman is now serving time in prison, condemned to the terrible punishment of hard labor. Directly he is free, he will be sent back to Holland, a known criminal whose every footstep will be dogged for life.

And so, it is to be hoped, ends the horrible sale of death in the guise of mad delight, after the capture of the Chinese dope king, the negro ruler of the illicit trading and the "Snow Prince."

If they have helped to reveal the danger of becoming slaves to the vice of drug taking and have exposed those who traffic in dope sold at an exorbitant price in money and bought at a still more awful price in blood, such tragedies as those of the daughter of the Tredegars; Billie Carlton, one of the best remembered victims; Gertrude, the butterfly, and countless others who have perished in the torments induced by cocaine, will not have been altogether in vain.

FORECAST THE WEATHER BY STUDYING THE [illegible]

For ages men have thought of the sun as an unchangeable giver of warmth and light. But is it actually so dependable, or do its radiations vary from day to day? If so, how do these variations affect our weather and our daily life on earth?

Right now the face of the sun is passing through one of its periodic eruptions of sun spots. Just what are these spots, and what influence, if any, do they have in causing unusual weather changes such as we have experienced this year?

These are problems which scientists are seeking to answer. After years of experiment Dr. Charles G. Abbot, director of the astrophysical laboratory of the Smithsonian institution, has determined that the sun's radiation does vary. The next thing to determine is how this variation affects the weather. Given that, long range weather forecasting will be an actuality.

Men like Dr. Abbot, who are making the sun their life study, believe that if they can solve the mystery of the sun spots, the rest will be easy.

If you take a baseball in your hand, twirl it, and watch the stitching travel in a sort of arc toward the center and away from it, you will have a fair idea of the motion of the spots across the sun's face. They first make their appearance at the upper edge, but have no effect on the earth until they reach the central meridian. When they are sixteen degrees north or south of the sun's equator their effect on us is the greatest. Then they pass out on the other sid[illegible] enough they may appear again has completed his round, which tak[illegible] to 30 days.

Many of these spots, resembling gigant[illegible] volcanoes on the sun's face, are large enough to be seen without the aid of a telescope. The large spot observed in January last had been visible on several previous rotations. When it reached its period of greatest intensity it was found to have a diameter of about 40,000 miles—about five times the diameter of the earth. What causes these tremendous volcanoes? It is now pretty generally believed that the sun is made up of a number of layers of gases, all in motion, but at varying speeds. Dr. J. H. Jeans, the British scientist, believes that these layers rotate faster toward the surface. The different speeds of the layers has the effect of setting up whirlpools or vortices. With the increase in friction these grow and seek an outlet. The tremendous energy finally forces openings through the top layer of the sun, in the same way that water whirlpools become waterspouts. Out shoot great volumes of gas which continue to pour forth until the internal pressure has been relieved.

Possibly you and your friends were disappointed with the performance of your radio set last winter. The transatlantic tests were a complete failure. All that, the scientists say, is chargeable to the sun spots. It is known also that they affect telegraphic and telephonic communication.

Presidents Live Longer.

Occupants of the White House hold the record for longevity, according to statistics on notable men compiled by Pitirim Sorokin, a Russian economist. Their average lifespan is almost exactly the Biblical three-score and ten.

Close on their heels as long-lived mortals [illegible]e the Popes of the Roman Catholic Church, [illegible]ho average 69.6 years. A third group in[illegible]des American millionaires, with 69.2 [illegible]ars. Scholars and scientists average 67.3 [illegible]ars, and writing men 64.4.

The poorest showing was made by the hereditary monarchs of Europe. Though this group included some very long-lived families, the average longevity was only 53.6 years. In explanation of the poor showing of kings, it has been pointed out that the other groups represent the results of selection. The Presidency and the papacy, for example, are both elective offices, and are filled invariably by men of mature years and usually good health, who have made their own records, while monarchs are notabilities simply by accident of birth, and by the same accident of birth may come of stocks decidedly inferior so far as health and vigor are concerned.

LOOK BEFORE YOU FIRE.

The owner of a department store walking through the packing room, noticed a boy idly leaning against a case and whistling. The owner glared at him.

"How much do you get a week?" he demanded.

"Five dollars, sir," replied the boy.

"Then here's a week's pay. Now get out!"

The boy put the money in his pocket and departed.

"When did we hire that loafer?" the owner demanded of the department head a little later.

"Never," was the answer, "he was delivering a note for another firm."—From Everybody's Magazine for September.

A FACE CARD.

The bishop, seated in a Pullman car, was absorbed in a book. The porter scrutinized him very carefully, and said:

"'Scuse me, Senator, anythin' Ah kin do fo' you', suh?"

The bishop replied in the negative.

The porter soon returned and asked:

"Shall Ah open the window, Govunuh?"

"No thanks."

A third excursion he ventured, "'Scuse me, Kuh'nel, kaint Ah brush yo' off?" The bishop looked up.

"Listen, porter, he said. "I'm not a senator, or governor or colonel; nothing but a poor common, episcopal bishop."

"Yassah, Bishop; Ah jes' knowed yo' was one of dem face cawds."—From Everybody's Magazine for September.

FOR A BUSINESS GIRL

I am a business girl between twenty-five and thirty years old—not to be fatally definite, a brunette. Please suggest a dress for early autumn that I can wear at the office.

IRMA D.

Here's a frock of canton crepe in the new pale beige that suggests straw color. Why shouldn't the office have a bit of sunshine indoors? The blouse and skirt sections are joined under the belt, and there are box pleats in the front and at each side of the back in the skirt.

We suggest that you get a beige felt hat to match and put a navy-blue band on it. Then find two big carnations—one tan, one navy-blue. Wear brown Oxfords. And, if you happen to have or can acquire an amber choker, it would be just the right finishing touch.

EVE IN PARIS

Dear Claribel:

Here is the kind of new things Paris is devising in lingerie—lovely in color, beautiful in quality, giving fulness without bulk.

The slip, with its straps that won't slide and its neck-line that can't interfere with the neck-line of any dress, is shown at the top of my sketch. The chemise comes next, made more interesting by means of the triangular pieces of net. The step-ins at the bottom are cut just like the wee things the French children wear, in that they slant up at the sides.

I'm sending you the three sketches because I thought you could so easily copy them yourself.

Yours as ever,

EVE.

THE CONVERSATIONS OF CLARIBEL

Dear Eve—

Velvet gets more and more important—morning, noon and night. And so does black. Really, there's nothing so chic as black. How glad I am that I look my best in it!

The black velvet dress from Lelong, at the left, has a fold in front that turns into a long loop at the side. The edging of the neck and armholes and the big flower are all of pink georgette—an adorably young black velvet frock. Alas, too young for me, I fear.

I could wear the Doeuillet black taffeta at the right, though—and doesn't it seem queer, because taffeta, treated as it generally is, is positively debutantish. Here, however, it has long slim lines and a lot of dignity. The back is bloused, with rather a square outline and the inevitable touch of velvet comes at the neck. The tiniest lines of gold run below this velvet and at the top of the ruffles—to match one's gold bracelet, I presume.

Green is good in the evening, too. Usually it is absinthe, but, in this dress from Worth that I have sketched in the center, it is a real Irish green. The places that I have left white are really green, too—chiffon dyed to match exactly and set in.

As ever, CLARIBEL.

RIGHT AND WRONG FOR CROSS-COUNTRY WALKING

Janet knows that Jane lives in the country. She knows that Jane walks a lot. But when she comes to visit Jane, Janet thinks her last year's winter coat will be quite all right for the cross-country strolls they're sure to take. The coat is of red duvetine with quantities of caracal. With it she wears a red velvet hat and an old pair of patent leather shoes that she doesn't mind spoiling because their heels are run over and their toes are scratched anyway.

What she doesn't know is that they will end up at the country club for tea—that she will meet the tall dark man the gypsy told her about—and that he won't even see that she exists! All on account of her clothes.

Beautiful Mountain Shrine Built by Pastor

Unique House of Worship at Orkney Springs, Va., Due to Untiring Efforts of the Rev. Edmund Lee Woodward, Who Donned Overalls and Did Most of the Work on It.

By WILLIAM E. PEAKE.

THE Shrine of the Transfiguration, situated deep in the heart of the foothills surrounding the Allegheny mountains at Orkney Springs, Va., is unique among Episcopalian chapels in America.

It is the result of the creative genius and untiring efforts of the Rev. Edmund Lee Woodward, its rector, to preach the word of God in this mountain country in a tabernacle suitable "for such as care to attend."

When the Rev. Mr. Woodward went to Orkney to carry on the work of the late Rev. Robert Atkinson Gibson, sixth bishop of Virginia, there was no church. He found it difficult to hold the services of the Episcopal Church, especially the service of the holy communion, in a seemly manner.

The bishop had held services in his own cottage for nearly a score of years. Following his death, the public schoolhouse in the village was fitted up, and the services were largely attended there. Later, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, the widow of a clergyman, opened her cottage for services, and for a while they had been held there.

The Rev. Mr. Woodward, however, had hoped from the start that enough church funds could be set aside for the construction of a suitable place of worship, but when it appeared that a number of years would elapse before a sizable building fund could be accumulated, he gathered his flock around him, and leading the way, started construction of the shrine.

THE drawings and measurements of the shrine were planned by the Rev. Mr. Woodward. Donning a pair of overalls, the Rev. Mr. Woodward acquired what native help he could and started work on the shrine the 6th of August, 1924. It was his idea to have the work completed the following year and ready for dedication by the feast of the transfiguration.

A site was chosen on the property of the late Bishop Gibson, on a side of a mountain, about a quarter of a mile from the village of Orkney. Day after day the little group of mountaineers, led by the Rev. Mr. Woodward as the only master mason, placed the crude but beautiful pile of native stones in place.

Several days before the feast of the transfiguration the shrine was completed, and on August 6, 1925, in the presence of a large number of bishops, representative clergy and laity from Virginia, Washington and nearby States consecration services were held.

In originality of conception, in beauty as well as durability it ranks with the notable monuments and fanes of the land. It stands as a perpetual memorial to the memory of the late Bishop Gibson.

The shrine with its massive tower and belfry rising 35 feet among the pines and oaks in the natural tree-embowered amphitheater is the mecca for the thousands of tourists visiting Orkney Springs.

The sanctuary, without sign of studied art, exhibits a marvelous harmony and adaptation to the environment. The two windows in the rear of the sanctuary are of Gothic design and are to either side of the stone altar and great boulder which serves as a reredos. Two other windows open from the side walls of the sanctuary, beneath which in the great thickness of the walls themselves, are seats for the bishop and priest. The walls throughout range in thickness from two to four feet.

A large number of stones of blended tints, topped by a rich wine-colored stone slab, form the altar, four feet high. On the altar and in the sanctuary are tablets bearing the seal of the diocese of Virginia and other memorials, 25 in all.

Imbedded in the flagstone pavement of the sanctuary, directly in front of the altar, is a brick bearing the inscription, "Jamestown, 1617." This highly treasured relic was taken from the first church at Jamestown, Va.

The tower, looked upon from the rear, radiates an Old World charm. The descent from the altar pavement to the stone-flagged floor of the sacristy is by six steps, one at the communion rail, two to the stone platform in front of the sacristy and three thence to the front doorway of the sacristy. Communion silver, altar linen, vestments, service books, movable bronzes, shrine registers, cushions and a portable are kept in the sacristy between services to be protected from the elements.

The choir, or outer chancel, is open to the sky. Clergy seats of stone are on either side.

The pulpit, comprising the largest stone used in construction of the shrine, suggests a giant heart set upright.

* * * *

HUGE flagstones, some larger than a man's arm span, comprise the pavement, which continues beyond the chancel steps to form a crossing aisle, terminating at either end and in the middle in stone steps ascending to the amphitheater.

On the lower level of this crossing aisle, and placed between the sets of stone steps so as to form an outer terminus of the shrine fabric, are two extended stone seats, suitable for use at early celebrations of the holy communion. To the sacristy side a third single stone is set for use of the organist.

At the top of the tower and belfry a large cross, made out of three stones, is set.

More than a dozen rows of benches, seating more than 200 persons, are placed in half-moon formation in the amphitheater. They begin more than 20 feet away from the altar.

In the masonry of the sacristy is an enormous weather-worn rock with a suggestive profile of a gargoylian face merged with two smaller stones noticeable only at close range.

Just within the doorway of the sacristy, behind this stone, is imbedded a piece of iron casting inscribed with the Chinese characters Sheng Kung Kwei, meaning the Holy Catholic Church. This is the broken remnant of a Chinese-cast bell used on the church mission compound at Anking, China, for the fifteen years of Dr. Woodward's missionary service there.

The fabric of the sanctuary as a whole blends the Bible and the church as a "Gospel of Stone." In the foreground stand the two great piers, representing the Old and New Testaments, respectively, of Holy Scripture. Each, though composed of many stones, center in one great stone, typifying mosaic law and Christian grace. These are some of the symbolisms of the shrine.

The many stones of the walls and groined roof, now covered with moss, are bound into one of cement as the living stones, prophets, martyrs and saints of the ages, are united in one communion and fellowship of the holy spirit.

* * * *

THE structure finds its completeness and crowning glory in the noble arch of twelve chosen stones and the cross-surmounted keystone and capstone, symbolic of the holy church throughout all the world in its steadfastness in the rock-like faith of the apostles and in the Rock of Ages.

The perfect orientation of the sanctuary accords with the beautiful and immemorial custom of the church. Words fail to describe the ineffable beauty of the celebration of the holy communion in this sanctuary with the early sunrise streaming on the altar through the eastern windows.

The Rev. Mr. Woodward, in planning the construction of the shrine, converged the designs of the many churches, parish houses, schools, hospitals and rectories, built under his supervision during the past twenty years.

As a result, the Shrine of the Transfiguration typifies a very unusual and unique work of art as a memorial to one greatly beloved as well as a very practical open-air church for the residents and tourists to Orkney.

Even the approach to the shrine extols the creative genius of the man who labored with his own hands in the construction of this house of God. Situated at isolated spots along the steep road, leading to the shrine, are "half-way" seats, provided for the weary. Above each is a tablet, bearing the inscription of some verse, taken from the Bible.

In the summer months, the little amphitheater is crowded with mountain folk and tourists who attend the double services held each Sunday. On their way down the steep mountain side following the services, many pause to read this verse, inscribed in tablet placed near the shrine:

Thy temple is not made with hands,
'Tis lit by many a golden star,
The purple heights of mountain lands
It's everlasting pillars are.

Thee, highest heaven can not contain,
Great Lord of earth and sky and sea;
Yet enter in and bless the fane
Adoring hands have reared for Thee.

MRS. LYDIG SCORES RICH

Mrs. Philip Lydig, first wife of the late W. E. D. Stokes, and mother of W. E. D. Stokes, jr., to whom his father left the bulk of his vast fortune, publicly declares that the greatest social menace of the day is the example of immorality set by the rich and fashionable comprising the so-called "smart set" of New York.

By birth Mrs. Lydig, who as a girl was the beautiful Rita D'Acosta, inherited her own high social position which she has maintained through the years in New York city. A woman of the widest culture, an art expert, extensively traveled; with an acquaintanceship comprehending the great of Europe and America for the past twenty years, what she now declares is indeed startling. This first expression of Mrs. Lydig's opinion of the smart society of which she is a part appears in the form of an article in the October issue of the Red Book magazine, entitled "Marriage Without Love."

In the course of her article, which will inevitably be the chief topic of discussion over Eastern teacups for days to come, Mrs. Lydig does not hesitate to open dark closets in the houses of smart society and drag forth into the glare of daylight the skeletons that have been hidden there.

Among other stories that she relates is one of a recent young and fashionable bride, who was told by her husband's physician that if she did not cause him to lessen his drinking he would be dead in a year. "Leave it to me," replied the bride, whereupon she made it her business to see that on the table beside her husband's bed there was placed each night a bottle of whisky. The man died of alcoholism in less than the time prophesied, and his bride inherited his great wealth. "Clearly a case of murder," declares Mrs. Lydig.

Another of the skeletons she reveals is of the domestic life of a man and woman of the highest New York society, which was believed generally to be the happiest in all the smart set. Yet when the wife was told by her physician that she had cancer and doubtless would not live six months she gave a luncheon party in celebration, at Sherry's; and bidding her guests good-by, withdrew to the top floor of her Fifth avenue house and never emerged therefrom, dying in a few months, "and glad to go," says Mrs. Lydig.

Altogether, nothing more sensational relative to New York's rich and fashionable has ever been told by one in a position really to know. In justification of her action in publishing her article in the October Red Book magazine, Mrs. Lydig says: "All over America people are watching the conduct and ideals of the fashionable rich—the so-called 'smart set'—of the East. I believe that those ideals are false ideals, tragic ideals, which it is disastrous for America to imitate. The conviction is my justification for preparing and publishing this revealing series of articles on the futility of fashionable life."

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

Helen's Wastebasket Exploration Yields a Betraying Document.

DUSK. A mauve-hazed dusk.

fences. Grazing cows undisturbed

Nearing the city now. Cat-tail marshes. Desecrating billboards. Tobacco. Tires. Stove polish. "Fifty Miles to the Cosmopolis Hotel."

> Dear Kitten,
> Everything here O. K. Had a card from Nora—back next week. But I'm all right without her. Some hotel for breakfast. Dine at the Club. Rather like the change.
> So you needn't hurry back. Stay as long as you like. Wire if you need money. As ever,
> W.

Warren always chary of words. His letters telegraphic.

Again gazing out at the purpling fields.

After that don't-need-you note, she should have stayed longer. At least a few days. Her pride— But three weeks all she could stand.

Homesick! Wretchedly homesick. And now her home-coming spoiled by this don't-care-how-long-you-stay letter.

Almost there now. The straggling outskirts of the city. Factories. Tumbling shanties. A shabby approach.

Grand Central at last.

* * * *

New York. Suffocating. Waves of heat from the pavement.

Yet it was home. She loved the verve and roar.

Taxis—buses—trucks. The never-ending stream.

Swarming sidewalks. Straw hats. Summer gowns. The shuffle and hum. Traffic whistles. The odor of gasoline. A distant hand-organ.

Up the Avenue. Crawling. Her smoldering impatience.

At last—the next block. A reassuring glance in the cab mirror. A cooling fluff of powder.

If Warren should be there. No—no chance of that. Only half-past nine.

Leaning out, she peered up at their seventh-story windows. All dark.

At the curb now. The hall boy running out. Beamingly he took her bags.

"Yes, Mis' Curtis, been hot all week. Yesterday the worst."

Home at last! Eagerly she switched on the lights. Only three weeks! It seemed more like months.

The hall table—veiled with dust. Not even Mrs. O'Grady?

The bedroom confirmed her worst suspicions. The bed not made. Clothes strewn about. Everything coated with dust.

The bathroom. Soiled towels. A ringed tub. Grimy floor.

* * * *

"Why, Pussy Purr-Mew! You been neglected, too? Have you had enough to eat?"

Apparently she had. Her tummy—reassuringly plump. Yes, whatever Warren's delinquencies—anything left to his care would be well fed.

Food! To him always of paramount importance.

The soiled clothes hamper—overflowing. No laundry sent out since she left?

Next the library. Papers everywhere. Piled on table, window seat, and floor. Not a paper thrown out since Nora left.

Cigar ashes. The ash trays full. Envelopes and magazines had served as extras.

Windows open! Awnings up. Dust pouring in day and night. If only he had closed up in the mornings!

The dining room. Oranges in the fruit bowl—soft and green with mold.

Her window boxes. The geraniums shriveled. Even the hardy ivy yellow.

To the pantry for water! How the dry soil drank it up! The poor leaves like parched tongues.

To Helen plants seemed almost human. He might have watered them! Cruel to let them die of thirst.

The kitchen. How awful!

All those milk bottles. Half full. Soured, curdled. A daily half bottle for Pussy Purr-Mew—the rest he hadn't troubled to throw away. Hadn't even put out the bottles. The whole place reeked with sour milk.

* * * *

The icebox. No ice. A smelly can of salmon.

Food for Pussy Purr-Mew! The one thing not neglected.

A stack of soiled, milk-dried saucers in the sink. Every saucer in the place—and he had started on the soup plates. Not one had been washed!

Where to begin? She would send for Mrs. O'Grady in the morning.

Leave the sink for her? Always Helen shrank from dishwashing. And that sickening odor of sour milk! But no—she couldn't leave those saucers.

Now out of her traveling things, into a crisp, cool housedress.

With dish mop and rubber gloves she attacked the leaning tower of saucers. Nineteen—one for every day!

On some, the milk ring yielded only to a knife.

"Yes, you ought to purr! You hate dirty things, too. You wouldn't drink from a soiled saucer—had to give you a clean one every day."

The sink cleared, salmon thrown out, icebox opened to air, bones gathered up. The rest of the cleaning left for Mrs. O'Grady.

The bedroom next. Fresh linen for the bed. Not changed since she left!

After ten now. To get the place in order before he came!

Pussy Purr-Mew glued to her. Following her every step.

"At least you're glad to see me back! you were lonely, weren't you?"

A general straightening and dusting.

Ten of eleven. Even if he had gone to the theater, he wouldn't be much later.

* * * *

WORKING—no time to worry. But now, as she dropped on the window seat, Pussy Purr-Mew in her lap, again that morbid depression.

He hadn't missed her! He hadn't needed her. Stabbing phrases from his letter. "Stay as long as you like." "Everything here O. K."

Even with all this disorder, he could say that. He hadn't cared! He had merely slept here. Breakfast at a hotel—dinner at the club.

Plainly he welcomed the change—the freedom.

But her dependence upon him! For companionship, happiness—everything! Not a day of those three weeks enjoyed—because he wasn't with her.

She clung to him too much! Was that what irked him? Why he welcomed a few weeks alone? Even without Nora—in such discomfort.

She started up. Those thoughts intolerable. Better keep on working.

That wastebasket! Overflowing.

Out in the kitchen, she emptied it on a newspaper.

A fluttering bit from a torn letter. Warren's writing.

". . . ou'll cut short your visit—we'll . . ."

Another fragment.

". . . time without you. Haven't been sleeping w . . ."

A feverish search through crumpled circulars. Six bits found. Pieced together.

". . . sweltering here. Rotten t . . . u'll cut short your visit—we'll . . . time without you. Haven't been sleeping . . . the place. Not here any more than I can hel . . . every night. Feel rocky . . . Wire when you're com . . ."

The joy of it! Reaction. Leaping exultancy.

And dated day before yesterday. The date of the letter sent!

Too proud to admit his need of her.

Carefully she bundled up the contents of the wastebasket. Tomorrow she would look for the remaining fragments. She wanted it all—to keep always. His one demonstrative letter since their marriage.

* * * *

BUT he must never know that she knew!

Back in the library. Slipping the fragments into an envelope—

The door! Warren!

"Hello, Kitten! What in blazes—What're you doin' here?"

"Clearing up this mess," kissing him with well-feigned nonchalance. "Thought with Nora gone I'd better get back. Good thing I did. How could you live in this place?"

"Wasn't here much. Just to sleep," glancing about the transformed apartment with ill-concealed relief.

"And I suppose you didn't miss me at all?"

"Not so much. We managed all right, didn't we, Pussums?" winking at Pussy Purr-Mew.

"You wouldn't think so from the looks of things. Yes, you fed her—that's all you did do! You might've watered my flowers."

"By George, Kitten, didn't once think of the darn things! Well, never mind, I'll blow you to some more. I'll send the florist up tomorrow."

"No, not yet. Maybe I can save the ivy."

"Well, how're the Slaters? Have a good time?"

"Oh, yes, glorious! They were wonderful to me. I couldn't realize I'd been there three weeks. I loved it," gloating over his masculine inability to conceal his chagrin.

"Oh, you did Then why the deuce d'you come back?"

"To look after things. If I'd stayed away much longer—the health officers would've been here. All that sour milk! And those saucers in that sink——"

"Huh, don't flatter yourself you're the whole works 'round this dump. If I'd gone in for heavy housekeepin'—I could've slicked up, too."

Then, opening his tobacco pouch.

"Here, this pipe's no good—get busy and find me that English briar. Been lookin' for it for the last two weeks. What're you grinnin' about? Think I missed you, eh? Well, I didn't send you any S O S's, did I? Got along great, didn't we, Pussums? All we needed was a few more saucers!"

BALL BEARING LOCOMOTIVES

Fit up locomotives and Pullman cars with roller bearings and run them on rails that are imbedded in a thick concrete roadbed—then trains will be able to compete with airplanes in speed. Such is the idea recently advanced by Frank H. Alfred, president of the Pere Marquette railroad, according to Popular Mechanics.

A section of this new track is to be built near Detroit. The new style roadbed is to be a slab of concrete 18 inches thick by 10 feet wide. The rails are to be carried on steel trusses which will be imbedded in the concrete and in addition to forming a place to which the rails will be attached, the truss will distribute the weight of passing trains evenly throughout the heavy concrete roadbed. Railway construction engineers say that this proposed plan is novel and if it proves successful it will be the first revolutionary design in railway track improvement.

Tracks have always been built flexible, so that when a train passes over a section the part bearing the weight is depressed, just as a plank supported at both ends bends when a heavy man walks on it. A train depresses the track underneath it until it is literally standing in a "trough" and always is climbing up hill. This will not happen in the rigid type of track, for here the idea of a steel ball rolling on a smooth, rigid surface will be approached. Due to decreased resistance, it is estimated that this type of a roadbed will save $420 a mile in fuel each year. But this amount is negligible as compared with the great economy of maintenance.

Move Ancient House 35 Miles.

Stick by stick, a 200-year-old house was moved recently from Southbury, Conn., to Noroton—a distance of 35 miles. Dr. and Mrs. L. T. Swift took a fancy to the house, says Popular Science Monthly, then engaged a builder to take it apart, move it, and reassemble it.

Tales of Real Dogs

By Albert Payson Terhune

Grip, More Faithful Than Favored

HIS name was Grip. He belonged to Sir Harry Lee, of the manor house at Ditchley, in Oxfordshire, England, more than three hundred years ago.

Grip was a giant mastiff, wise and loyal and strong. His life was not made happy, nor did he have any of the human affection and comradeship which he craved. His master, Sir Harry, did not care for him. Neither did the manor house servants.

The big dog was tolerated around the house and grounds because of his size and his fierce aspect, and because he was a first rate watchdog. In those days the English countryside was infested by gypsies and wandering tinkers and beggars and other ragamuffins who asked nothing better than to rob an unguarded house and who made most of their living by petty thievery.

Against such tramplike marauders big Grip was a tower of defense. Brave must be the robber or sneak-thief who would venture into the manor house while Grip guarded its doors.

It was an age when men and women were hanged for crimes which nowadays would not bring a penalty of a single year in jail, and where petty offenses were punished by long confinement in filthy prisons, or by public floggings or by imprisonment in the stocks or in the pillory and even by the cutting off of the offender's ears.

In spite of this, crime was rampant, and the country was fairly crawling with desperate paupers who were willing to risk life and freedom for the sake of a very few pennies or for a handful of food.

Thus, the manor house stood in need of a loyal protector. Grip was such a protector. Therefore, he was allowed to stay there and to received a grudged plateful of cold scraps by way of reward for his tireless services.

Sir Harry had a number of dogs which were his constant companions on daily walks and in the house and in the hunting field. But they were clever hunting dogs and toy spaniels and the like—dogs that either were amusing playthings or else of use in the field.

Grip had no nose for hunting. His bulk and harsh shagginess made him unsuitable as a playfellow. So he was left to himself. Nobody bothered to make a chum of him. He was adoringly devoted to Sir Harry. But Sir Harry had a mild dislike for him and would not have him around.

Again and again Grip would plead wistfully, with eyes and by his actions, to be allowed to accompany his master on the long daily walks or rides, or to lie at his feet at the hall fire on winter nights. Always, with a kick or a curse, he was ordered away.

The servants took their cue from their master and neglected the mastiff or ill-used him. The Italian valet, Antonio, would not willingly touch the dog's shaggy short coat with one of his own immaculate white hands, and shuddered in disgust if Grip brushed against him in walking past.

One night, as Sir Harry reached the door of his bedroom after a long and tiring day in the hunting field, he saw Grip lying pressed close against the door of the room. He kicked him aside and ordered him out of the house. To his surprise the usually obedient mastiff crept back to the threshold.

Sir Harry kicked him out of the way again and entered the room. The mastiff ran in after him and lay down beside the bed. Now this had never happened before. Sir Harry was a dog man, and he ought to have had sense enough to know something serious was the matter.

On the floor lay Antonio, with Grip trying to rend his throat.

But it was only the despised Grip. Besides, Sir Harry was tired and sleepy. So he ordered the valet, Antonio, to put the dog out. Antonio stooped and grabbed Grip by the scruff of the neck.

Now, the mastiff was willing to endure any ill treatment from his worshipped master, but he would not allow any lesser man's hand to chastise him. So he snarled fiercely and snapped at the valet. Antonio went downstairs for a piece of meat with which to coax the mastiff out of the room.

As soon as the valet was gone, Grip made a dive for Sir Harry's bed and crawled under it, lying there as still as a statue of stone. Sir Harry was too sleepy to bother any further with the sulky brute, so he got into bed and decided to let the dog stay where he was until morning.

Back came Antonio with the piece of meat. Not seeing Grip, he supposed the mastiff had followed him downstirs. He did not think of looking under the bed for the dog. The valet put the room to rights, extinguished the lights and tiptoed out of the room.

For two or three hours, Sir Harry slept heavily. Then he was awakened by a most ungodly racket. He jumped out of bed and struck a light.

The room showed every sign of a fearful struggle. On his back, in the center of the floor, lay Antonio, the valet, with Grip trying to rend his throat. On the floor near the prostrate man was a long and razor-sharp knife.

Sir Harry yanked the raging mastiff back from his prey in time to save the valet's life. Then his gaze chanced to fall on the keen knife that had been knocked out of Antonio's grasp as the dog had leaped on the valet from under the bed.

The Italian was arrested. The police questioned him, putting him to the torture to make him confess. Scared and in agony, he admitted that he had crept back to his employer's room, at dead of night, to cut Sir Harry's throat and then to steal a strongbox full of gold pieces and jewels that was kept under the bed.

Half way across the room, in the darkness, he had been attacked by Grip. By some strange "sixth sense" the poor old mastiff had known that a danger threatened the master he loved and he had insisted on guarding Sir Harry's room that night.

Henceforth, Grip was an honored and much-petted member of the household. Sir Harry made a chum of the mastiff, taking him everywhere and letting him lie on the warm hearth on cold evenings and eat from the dining table. He did all he could to make up for his earlier neglect of the gallant dog.

There is still (or was, not long ago), in the portrait gallery of the Earls of Litchfield, in England, a full-length painting of their ancestor, Sir Harry Lee. Sir Harry, in the picture, stands with his hand resting lovingly on the head of his giant mastiff, Grip. Beneath the painting of the dog are the lines:

Great Is Mother Love.

Among the larger and more familiar animals the heroism of mother love is not infrequently witnessed, but it is no less marked among the smaller creatures. Strength, size and ability for defense or offense appear to make no difference in the maternal instinct to protect its young. I know of no more timid animal than Whitefoot the Wood Mouse. He has reason to be timid. Life is one continuous and fearful adventure. From above the hawk watches for him by day and the owl by night. He is the natural prey of every predatory animal in his neighborhood and against none of them has he any defense. He is too small and delicate.

But the heart of the Mother Wood Mouse is as big with heroism, because of maternal love, as is the heart of any creature that I know. Listen to this story from Mrs. E. A. Taylor, who at one time lived in the Minnesota forests:

"When we lived in the big woods," says she, "I was sitting alone by the fireplace one day, and chanced to look up just in time to see a Mother Deer Mouse, or Wood Mouse, with a baby in her mouth, slipping along the picture rail. Evidently she had reason to fear some enemy in the home she was vacating, probably Shadow the Weasel. I watched her carry two babies safely; then my curiosity as to where she was making a new home led me to approach her. She slipped and the infant fell to the floor. I picked it up and on the palm of my hand held it within reach of her. It seemed hours to me, 'freezing' thus, before she reached it. Trembling with fright, she crept nearer and nearer, stopping often to assure herself that I had not moved. Finally she reached her baby, took it firmly in her mouth and hurried away. I made no more attempt to discover her secret. She had suffered enough."

The Fiendish Steel Trap.

Perhaps it would be more accurate to say the fiendish trapper. Certainly, the trapper who, having set steel traps, neglects them, allowing the trapped animal to suffer until death brings relief, is little short of a fiend in human guise. I one time saw a Night Heron caught in a steel trap and held until it had nearly starved to death. The leg had to be amputated. The careless trapper had forgotten to take up his muskrat trap at the end of the trapping season.

Mrs. Claude C. Richards, of New York State, is rightfully indignant over the heartlessness of those trappers who do not visit their traps every day. Listen to this story from Mrs. Richards:

"We have a very lovable dog, Trixie, the children's pet. Last Thanksgiving she went out as usual, but did not return. It was not until late at night three days later that we heard her scratch on the door. She was overjoyed to see us, but cried and kept wanting to go out. She was so persistent that my son put a collar on her, with rope attached, and, with a lantern, went out with her.

"She went so fast he had to run. She took him to the place where she had been a prisoner in a trap. She had had a family while there; the poor little babies had died of exposure. She herself had lost part of a foot. It had frozen from non-circulation. For three days she had been a prisoner in that trap. Think of how the wild life, caught in the traps set by the man that had set that trap, must suffer!"

In most States the law requires that a man shall visit his traps at least once in twenty-four hours. The man who does not should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. He is guilty of inhumanity in one of its worst forms. At best, the steel trap is bad enough; there is no excuse for making it worse.

Getting in Touch With Nature.

I have a feeling that perhaps some of you will enjoy hearing from onetime city folk who are now country folk. Meet Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Day, who for almost thirty years lived in the city, but now live in the country in Maine, with no neighbors nearer than a mile. No other house is visible, so that in winter they are absolutely isolated.

"I have wondered at the scarcity of wild birds ever since we have lived here, for that pest, the English sparrow, has not yet found us," says Mrs. Day. "During the early winter we remarked that we did not see a bird, so to attract them we made a feeding station out of a box, placing it with the open side to the south. In this we put bread crumbs mixed with peanut butter to make a stiff dough. We also put some in knotholes. We hung suet from the limbs of two old apple trees directly back of the house.

"Chickadees soon found our spread and became so tame that they would alight on my husband's cap, shoulders and arms and get in the dish when he carried out their breakfast. They would follow him at his work and alight on him when he was quite a distance from the feeding station. But the thing that appealed to us most was the fact that for five nights in succession a flock of ruffled grouse, or partridges, budded on the apple trees close to the house. They saw us moving about in the rooms, but seemed to have no fear. Even the lighting of the lamps did not disturb them. I watched them on branches within ten feet of the chamber window. You can readily see how our feathered and furred friends have helped to pass away many pleasant hours in the day, while the radio at night has made life in the country a very different thing to what it was a few years ago."

This experience with the chickadees is not at all unusual. Mrs. Lillian S. Truesdell has also had the pleasure of close acquaintance with these little fluffy, animated balls of feathers. "They not only eat from our hands, but sit there for many seconds and look intently at us," says Mrs. Truesdell. "One day Mr. Truesdell had in his hands cracked hickory nuts, while I had chopped suet. A chickadee alighted on Mr. Truesdell's hand, looked the nuts over, then perched on his thumb and looked over at the suet in my hand. Finally he flew over and helped himself. It is great fun."

A Butterfly Convention.

We are prone to associate butterflies with flowers, but flowers are not the only attraction to these dainty winged creatures of the air. The largest gathering of butterflies I ever have seen was where there were no flowers whatever. It happened that, while cruising in the Maine woods, we had gone ashore at an old campground in order to cook lunch. At the fireplace there were a couple of charred logs nearly burned through. On and under these, crowded as closely together as it was possible for them to be, were hundreds of the big yellow swallowed butterflies. So persistent were they that we could not drive them away, even when we started a fire. Many of them flew back into it and were burned. While we could not definitely decide the cause of the attraction, it appeared to be the bacon grease which had spattered into the ashes and over the logs.

One other time I discovered a similar gathering of this same butterfly. It was amazing that so many could have gathered in one place.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

"Can you tell me anything about Sabin's Gull?" inquires James A. Russell.

Sabin's Gull is also called the Forktail Gull. It is a bird which breeds throughout the Arctic region and is a comparatively rare visitor in the United States. As indicated by the common name, the tail is forked. The head is a clear, dark, slaty gray, bounded behind by a narrow collar of black. Its dark head gives the bird the appearance of wearing a hood. The back and sides of the neck, under parts except throat and the tail are pure white. The back is gray, and so are the wings, with the latter marked with black.

"Is or is not the Tree Toad a toad?" inquires Nellie C. Adams.

The so-called Tree Toad is a frog, a tree frog, of which there are many species. The name Tree Toad has been used so long that it sticks, and probably always will.

"Why is it that certain streams, which in my boyhood furnished excellent trout fishing, appear to be no longer suitable for trout? In other words, why do the trout fry put into these streams fail to live?" asks C. J. Hall.

There may be one or more reasons, according to the condition of the streams you have in mind. It is quite safe to say that they have been fished out, and would guess that probably the fry introduced never have a chance to grow very big. It may be that pollution has killed the fish out. It is doing it throughout the country. But the most likely cause is the change in temperature of the water. Cutting away of the forests and the burning over of the watersheds have resulted in inability on the part of the soil to hold water and gradually feed it into the brooks through the summer. So the water of the brooks becomes warm, lacking the cold spring feeders of the olden days. Trout can not stand warm water.

Painful Penalties of Being a Movie Queen

The Unceasing Attention of a Curious Public Is the Boon and the Bane of a Film Heroine's Life, Says Gloria Swanson

A recent photograph of the popular movie queen who has found that her coveted place in the public eye has its drawbacks as well as its advantages.

S. Alexander Cohen, a big burly process server of New York city, was suing Miss Swanson for $25,000 damages because, he said, the tiny star had slapped his face when he handed her a summons. Miss Swanson settled that question so far as she was concerned.

WHEN Stella, the stunning stenographer, takes her place among the first nighters viewing that daredevil film, "Loretta Loose Among the Lions," Stella is filled with one emotion, and only one. It is then she gives speech to a wish which for years has been surging through her keen young mind.

"Gee," says Stella, "what wouldn't I give to be a glorious queen of shadowland, or to be an 'ongenoo,' or a vamp, or a dashing heroine, or even a leading lady. I'd be glad to risk being loose among the lions—probably they drugged them, anyway—if only I could get a chance to express what is in my soul—on the screen. But they're not taking on any real talent these days."

So says, or thinks, Stella, the stunning stenographer. Almost every flitting flapper and aspiring chambermaid and pensive young wife whose husband doesn't quite understand her thinks likewise.

Movie queens have lovers and limousines and castles in the country. Wherever they go people stare at them in admiration and envy. Chivalrous gentlemen write them letters. Diamonds and delights continually pour in upon them. It is really better to be a queen of shadowland than to be the queen of Czechoslovakia.

All the sweet young things think that.

But all these sweet young things were sadly disillusioned the other day when Gloria Swanson, moving picture star, spoke a few well chosen words in a court action. One

"I didn't slap the man's face," she said. "I don't do such rude things. Besides, I don't even remember seeing him. A woman must see a man before she can slap him.

"He may have been trying to get near me, but I would hardly remember that. It happens all the time, that people try to get near me, whenever I am about. Mostly they want to ask me questions or sell me things. This is just part of the natural routine of a woman in public life."

Thus Miss Swanson began. She blasted illusions right there. Later she told the full story about the pains and penalties of being a moving picture star.

It seems, all day long, each day of the year, cranks and crank letters and kind unknown friends and kind letters from fans, and ringing telephones incessantly storm about the movie star, demanding her personal attention.

Again, swarthy gentlemen call, offering to paint the star's picture for nothing if she will only give them—the swarthy gentlemen—$10,000 and permission to sell the portrait to whichever advertiser of soap bids highest.

Then arrive invitations to spend week-ends in the Kentucky hills, to get back to nature in a farm house; queries as to why she bobbed her hair, or why she's letting it grow; urgent behests to pay somebody's tax bill before the assessors do something drastic; a request to supply a lady who was good enough to view the star's last picture with a desirable touring car of standard make; pleas for advice as to heart and home, for beauty secrets; requests for the star to shop in Paris for somebody she's never seen.

All these, and bizarre "fake" suits and poems and recipes and presents, until the queen of the movies has just one favorite wish. That's the wish to be let alone for one quiet hour one day a week. Yet, mingled with this, is the wish that the attention keep up no matter how it trespasses upon leisure and gratitude to all the well wishers. For when a star isn't besieged with attention it's a sign she isn't pulling as once she did. Thus the very pains and penalties are what she must pray will continue—if she is to continue a stellar attraction.

Probably Stella imagines that a movie star, such as Miss Swanson, at least starts the day in luxury, having her breakfast in bed. Nothing could be further from the truth. At 7 o'clock each morning—at 6, or even 5, when a big picture is being hurried through—Gloria Swanson steps her small feet upon the bedside rug and reaches for a sweater and a pair of bloomers to pull on over her gymnasium tights.

In fifteen minutes, at this unearthly hour, she meets her "conditioner," a gentleman formerly engaged in the wrestling business. He puts the star through her paces. She does at his command exercises to keep her fit for her strenuous life.

Next comes the masseuse, who works over any bruises or cramped muscles the star has acquired in keeping fit. Breakfast follows, then the mail. And here is a typical letter such a star as Miss Swanson receives daily. It came from Alabama:

"Dear Glorious Gloria:

"You'll think it is awfully funny of me to be writing, but I just had to tell you I understand you heart and soul.

"You are not a cold snob, as some of the boys say. You are a darling little human lady. Now, I will tell you what I want you to do for me. I want you to take two weeks off, before you finish your next picture, and come down here and have a vacation with me. Daddy has just bought mother and me a beautiful $10,000 bungalow. We will have peace and happiness here, and you need it after all your sickness.

"Everybody will think we are just two sisters, instead of a great star and a little nobody, but at the end of two weeks we will have a great ball and tell the world. All the girls are strong for you.

"Now don't forget to answer this letter as soon as you get it."

Thus wrote one little girl, a request which could not possibly be granted.

Young and restless wives send in other and perhaps "peppier" letters. One was as follows:

"Dear Gloria:

"You don't mind me calling you by your first name, do you? Well, I want to congratulate you on your choice of a husband. There's nothing like being a titled lady. Besides, I think he's handsome and probably will use you all right if you start firm from the first.

"Now, what do you think I ought to do? My husband has put me on a $5 weekly allowance to go to the movies and have my hair cut. Gloria, any girl knows a girl can't live on that if she's a real fan, even if she lets her hair grow. Lately, I've been helping myself from his pants pocket after he's dozed off. But this can't go on forever. So I got an idea. Couldn't you get me a place, near you, in your company? I have real talent and would consider almost any small part, but really wouldn't care to be an extra.

"Now do your best for me, and remember, I'm with you, always."

Probably two of the most importunate letters were requests for financial help. The first was from a woman in Maine.

"My dear Gloria," the woman wrote, "you have a great deal of this world's goods, as I see by the papers almost daily, and what seems a big bill of expense to a woman like me is nothing at all to you. So I wrote to you to please pay my tax bill this fall. They are pressing me for settlement and if I pay it I won't have anything left for comforts, let alone going to the movies to see you and Mary Pickford once in a while. I know you will give this matter your personal attention."

But probably some of the, what might be called, hand-to-hand encounters with certain insistent members of the interested public are even a bit more strenuous than letters, which after all, can be laid aside.

For instance, there was a tall, gaunt man, in a black Prince Albert which looked as though it had been bought along in those days when debonair Edward VII set the fashion. This tall, gaunt, black-clad gentleman pushed through the curious and held out his hand to the little star.

"My dear," he said feverishly, "I want to convert you! It's my philosophy, the thing I have given my whole life to—the Oneness of the One. This philosophy explains everything. It brings riches to poverty. It brings happiness to discontent. It leads to success in art, industry — in—in—in—"

As the limousine door closed, the gentleman was explaining, "I'll send you my books. The whole set. One hundred and fifty dollars for the four—ten days on approval—I'll—"

One of the events in a star's life, which she enjoys more than many others, is the preview of her picture. After three or four or five months' hard work doing a moving picture, any woman's curiosity, be she star or extra, is keen to see just how she looks on the screen.

Once, in a New York State small town, a rather interesting little change was made which saved the star some embarrassment.

Miss Swanson drove out to the town in the late afternoon, taking with her two of her advisers who purposely had dressed in saggy business suits in lieu of the evening clothes they generally affected for a preview. Miss Swanson went in a smart cloth coat and little turban—something that would not attract attention to her.

The three separated when they reached the theater and took obscure seats in different sections of the auditorium. The picture began. It went well, but toward the end of the showing a restlessness seemed to stir through the audience.

It happened that a shrewd little flapper, with a comfortable mouthful of gum, had sat next the star all evening.

"S'all off, Gloria," she whispered, "I knew you the minute you came in."

Gloria Swanson looked at the girl and she felt she was kind. She whispered back with a chattering of teeth.

"I'm bashful. I don't want to be discovered. My friends—they are seats and rows away. I—"

"Come with me to the ladies' room," said the girl. The great star followed.

Drop the curtain. Let us tell that as the result of what happened in the ladies' room a perky young thing in a very nice cloth coat and Swanson hat bowed and smiled her way to a limousine, where two astounded men waited, surprised out of their lives until they heard the girl whisper:

"Shuh—gee—she's gone home in a taxi—in my best coat. I—I did this for her because she got stage struck. Pile in—pile in!"

Probably the most painful part of being a great moving picture star is the grist of "fake" suits which constantly beset the lady. People charge that the star or her agents have "cribbed" scenarios, people who never were heard of before they filed suit.

People charge that the star's poodle has bitten them—though she never had a poodle—and that her automobile has ruined them for life. One such suit Miss Swanson's agents speedily disposed of when they proved that her Rolls Royce was 200 miles distant in the country the day a "victim" charged it had knocked him down.

These are some of the penalties of being a queen of the movies.

Stella, the stunning stenographer, will read—and perhaps change her wish. But perhaps again—and most probably—she will decide that she'd be willing to bear all the penalties in return for the lovers and the limousines.

SEES MARITAL INFIDELITY ON INCREASE IN U. S.

"It is my belief," says Judge Benjamin B. Lindsey, judge of the juvenile and family court of Denver, "that marital infidelity, so-called, is not only increasing, but that it has become in a larger number of instances than is commonly suspected, rationalized and deliberate on the part of the parties involved."

Judge Lindsey's conclusion as stated, he publicly utters in the course of one of the most sensational social articles that has ever appeared. Moreover, the judge, whose fame as a counselor of hundreds who in Denver seek him out in his court rather than are brought to him, cites numerous concrete cases from among the hundreds that have been presented to him, to support his conclusion.

His article, which he calls "The Moral Revolt," appears in the current October issue of the Red Book magazine. In the course of it Judge Lindsey does not hesitate to come out into the open and discuss with startling candor the conclusions that his court cases of middle-age social derelictions have warranted in his own mind. Among others he cites at length that of a prominent Denver man and his wife, whom he calls Mr. and Mrs. Blank, both people of education, wealth and culture, who mutually agreed upon courses of what can only be called "infidelity."

In his comment upon this case Judge Lindsey thus expresses his own point of view:

"That the old customs are resistlessly changing is self-evident; but we have many little King Canutes, who seem to think they can stop this tide of growth, and of economic and social readjustment to a machine age. It would be much better, I think, to guide the change instead of attempting the impossible and sinful feat of stopping or hindering it.

"But their idea of 'guidance' is compulsion by law and social pressure. That is not guidance. Education, and efforts at clear thinking, and clear expression of such thinking are guidance. Such guidance exerts the only sort of compulsion that human beings will consistently and permanently obey.

"That there has come about a loosening of the marriage bond, all are agreed, particularly those of the clergy who are so alarmed about it.

"Generally speaking, I think that reasonable freedom for the individual in thought, conduct and daily life is the only bondage that can really bind. I think we are very far indeed from having that kind of freedom—and that the story of the Blanks is one instance of a violent reaction away from marriage as society and the church insist on having it. What makes the conduct of Mr. and Mrs. Blank startling is that its violence seems to have about it a kind of rationality, a cool reasonableness, which makes it doubly effective and perilous.

"Personally, I am satisfied that society should leave to individuals who compose it a very large liberty, if it does not patently infringe on the social rights of others—particularly children.

"At present, society would have no tolerance for Mrs. Blank, if it knew her real name. It would draw no lesson from the fact that she talked frankly and honestly to me, relying on my tolerance. Such tolerance should be generally forthcoming, from all persons toward all persons. If it were, then Mrs. Blank and other extremists like her would carry out their views openly. The result would be that such of their ideas as were useful and workable would survive, and those that were socially unworkable would fall of their own weight. But tolerance is a large virtue; and our human capacity for it is small, save in those who have been specially educated to it.

"In the meantime, I stand by my belief that infidelity, so-called, is not only increasing, but that it has become, in a larger number of instances than is commonly suspected, something similar to the rationalized and deliberate sort indulged in by Mr. and Mrs. Blank."

A FALSE ALARM.

HOLDS UP TRAIN FOR PHOTOGRAPH

Virginia Lee Corbin, beautiful young screen player, who is now in New York to play one of the prominent roles in First National's "Not Herbert," is claiming the distinction of being the only screen actress who has ever held up a train in New York for a photograph.

It happened last week when she arrived at the Grand Central from Hollywood. Photographers asked her to step into the doorway of a train standing at the platform. A half dozen shots were made and then a polite trainman stepped up and inquired if Miss Corbin would mind stepping out of the train as she had already delayed its starting several minutes. Of course she stepped.

Miss Corbin will be one of a quite remarkable collection of players in "Not Herbert," which is a feature vehicle for the dashing young Ben Lyon. In addition to Ben and Miss Corbin there are Pauline Starke, in the feminine lead, Sam Hardy and Lloyd Whitlock among the noted players. Howard Higgin will direct this flicker, which starts September 12.

The Hour Before Dawn

By WINIFRED LOCKHART WILLIS

LOVE, some would have us believe, is a flower that blooms only after long care, but there are others who hold that the malady is more like an explosion. In the latter class is Tom Gardner, who found his romance at hand ready to be touched off by a glance.

"Good night," he said, and bent down swiftly and kissed her.

TOM GARDNER walked slowly along the dusty, uphill road that led from Warrensville to his own two acres of apple orchard, set securely back of a thin strip of woods that divided it from the motor parkway. He carried the latest edition of a New York evening paper thrust carelessly under his arm.

His well-fitting gray business suit was rumpled from the long trip in the crowded commuter's train, the heat of the city's throbbing rush hour had wilted his collar. As he cut into the woods toward his own place he took off his hat, lifting his face to the fresh breeze that seemed to spring to meet him out of the clean, big trees. But tonight it brought no encouragement with it. Tonight he was tired—just tired. He couldn't imagine anything in the world that would make him feel rested.

His big white house glimmered through the dusk between the crooked apple trees. The grass under his feet was rough and uncut, as he liked to have it. On a rise of the uneven ground he stood looking down at the faint, scattered lights of the little town which he had just left behind, and out beyond the dark Harlem river to the clustered brilliance of New York.

What a place of romance it looked, curled ke a great golden snake under his eyes! He ought of the day's tiresome hours cooped p in his office on Broad street, of the busy ick of typewriters, the tired faces of men d women passing ceaselessly to and fro in never-ending search for happiness.

"They think to find it in money," he mused, they only knew the uselessness of that!" he stared bitterly at the beautiful, deing city that had answered all his dreams given him nothing.

othing? He had come there an eager, amus boy from college, full of hope and ise. He had done very well right from start, amassed a comfortable sum of y, established himself in Wall street, hundreds of friends, bought the lot in hester that he most wanted, built the of his dreams. Then had come the ar turmoil of the war. Lying at night black forests of France, with the boom great guns shaking the earth under his body, he had conjured up picture after ure of his home, the frowzy orchard wing red in summer sunsets, filled with ds and crickets and little chirping, singing, zzing things of all sorts. He had remembered old black Morris who cooked and valeted for him with the tender officiousness of a doting mother, and he recalled shining silver and white napery on dinner tables, rich food and wine, friends and laughter.

When he came back it all was just as he had left it. The world of business and pleasure took him in again, petted him for a while, gave him his old identity which had somehow seemed irrevocably lost out there in the dark, lonely places where death stalked always, night and day. But he kept asking himself what it all meant, where he was getting to. Day after day spent in accumulating dollars, night after night the aimless comfort of home following upon the busy, exhausting hours.

The trouble was this. Tom was a dreamer in his heart. As a boy he had dreamed romance, travel, danger, love. As a man he found himself lost in New York's financial whirlpool. He didn't know how to get out. The war somehow only made things worse. A man went through the war expecting some enormous change, and unless he was killed it didn't happen. Life afterward was a little ludicrous, something in the nature of an anti-climax. And romance—well, a man somehow never got time for romance. Life just hurried along and hurried along; the girls one knew and admired married other fellows.

Tom sat down on the steps, indifferent to the approaching dinner hour. He wanted to think this thing out. For instance, there were girls he could have married, or could have kissed and dreamed about as a lonely bachelor loves to do. But they all lacked something. Perhaps they just didn't really need him. Each one had interests of her own, and every possible modern notion about marriage. Many of them, to be sure, were willing to concede to Tom's rather wistfully old-fashioned ideas, but Tom was wise, if he wasn't exactly a lady's man. At 35 he flattered himself that he could pretty well tell when a girl was trying to flatter and intrigue him for the sake of his money and the eminently respectable family tree.

"Mrs. Gardner will have to love Tom Gardner and his ideas and his dreams and his faults to boot, or she won't be Mrs. Gardner," he told himself once when a gay deceiver had very nearly taken him in.

For the last week he had been a prey to old boyhood dreams. The melting heat of the city in June had turned his heart to longing for blue seas, green isles, lost places of the earth where finance was an unknown and totally unimportant thing. A man might find life in some place very far away—he might find peace—happiness. Happiness. That was what he had not found. A man must have a place of his own, a place where he is needed, a place where he is king—something more definite, more sharply defined, than just a place in Wall street and a place in the hearts of his friends. The place of Tom Gardner in the world of New York was a vague, transient, unsatisfactory thing, and—he didn't want it!

He stood up, marveling at his own daring. How could he repudiate his position in life, a position which so many men envied him, for which so many women admired him? He had everything he had set out to get—why wasn't that enough? How many men had accomplished that much at 35?

A soft little breeze, wanton and tender, came up through the trees and caressed his hair. It brought an odor to his nostrils as of wild flowers, faint and far away. He had one of those elusive moments of second sight when the soul is tormented by a vision of something familiar and inexplicable, something that must once have been reality, something that has faded to an unknown, unanswerable desire. He found himself thinking about the strong surge of ocean waves against a boat's side, of the beat of winds in wet sails; of a black, silent sky he had once seen when he was far at sea.

At dinner Morris commented upon his lack of appetite.

"I want something wild and growing to eat, Morris," he answered. "Something from a lost jungle isle a million miles away. This steak from Warrensville is all wrong."

Morris shook a grizzled head. "I trades with the best butcher, J. S. Greeley & Sons, sah. I cain't go no farthah, sah, and 'twouldn't be no manner of use——"

"Oh, that's all right, Morris." He rose wearily from the table, stepped out into the moonlight on the veranda. The air was cruel with fleeting scents, and the trees loomed ghostlike, white with apple blossoms. He wandered down among them, and out along a twisting path into the fields beyond. A restless longing for the sea was in his blood; a longing for romance, distances.

"I can't go on in the office," he told himself. 'It's all for nothing. I don't want any more money. I can't find use for what I have. Nobody needs me or wants me. I'm getting old and stale without living at all. Somewhere way out in the unknown world there's a place for me. I'm going to find it."

Nan Taylor entered the big outer office where her desk stood among a dozen others. She wondered as she hung up her hat if she would be called into the "young boss' " office for dictation today. Probably not, she figured. Julia Mott took dictation much faster, and he had been using her steadily for three days.

Julia was a born stenographer. Nan wasn't. The lazy blood of the South was in her veins. She hated being a stenographer. That is, she had hated it until she saw the "young boss," as the girls called him among themselves. They quite frequently got together and discussed him, and one or two had blushingly confessed that they thought him "perfectly grand—and so kind and good." Nan never discussed him. She never said that she thought him kind and good.

Julia Mott had already arrived, for Nan was a few moments late that morning. She had stood overtime in front of her little cracked mirror studying her tired young face with its scarlet mouth and big, soft, dark eyes. She had stood there, wondering if he had ever noticed that she didn't rouge and chew gum and talk the careless jargon of the other girls in the outer office. Julia walked in very quietly from the "old boss' " office and came and stood in front of Nan's desk. Her wide, rather coarse face, with its painted cheeks and crooked teeth wore an unusually solemn expression.

"Old Peters says the young boss is quitting," she announced tersely.

Nan sat down at her desk and began rummaging through her papers.

"Why?" she asked.

"Peters wasn't very communicative, as you might know. It ain't losses of any kind, for I know the young boss' affairs pretty well by now, and they're bloomin'. Peters did mention that he's leavin' the country. Goin' to marry probably, but I never heard of a man quittin' work for that, did you, deary?"

"No."

There wasn't much satisfaction talking to Nan. The other girls would be a lot more excited. Julia moved away, chewing gum slowly and sadly as she went.

It was a hot day. The room glared white with dust and heat and the hours dragged. The door of the young boss' office remained closed. The four other brokers who had offices opening out of the big room in which Nan worked passed in and out, slammed doors, talked and dictated as usual, but the young boss was not there. She kept looking up, expecting to see his broad shoulders framed in the doorway, to hear his voice speaking to her, but he did not come. At 5 Mr. Peters called her into his office.

"Mr. Gardner wanted to remember each of you girls and to thank you for your faithful service," he said, and Peters put an envelope in her hand. "This is a present from Mr. Gardner," he explained at her bewildered look.

She went back to her desk and opened the envelope, examining its contents through a blur of tears. Twenty-five dollars. A whole week's salary! She looked instinctively for something else, some sort of scribbled word—of course, there was nothing.

She cast a frightened glance around the room and at the closed door of the young boss' office. As she caught up her little straw hat and hurried out to the elevator she knew she was never coming back. It wouldn't be bearable any more.

She shrank from the thought of her little stuffy room on West Twentieth street. She wandered from the Twenty-third street exit of the subway across Madison Square, looking up at the tall office buildings that glimmered dimly through the dusk. There was a white, round moon just over the Flatiron building, and one big silver star hung beside it.

"I love him! I love him!" she breathed softly as she walked aimlessly around and around the green park.

For six months, ever since she had answered the ad for a stenographer that had landed her in the brokerage office down on Broad street, she had loved him. It had been all right so long as she saw him every day, worked for him sometimes, had him to dream about. Now he was gone and the desperate pain that had entered her heart whenever she shut the door of the outer office behind her at 5 of an afternoon had come to stay always with her in his place.

Life henceforth must be eight slow hours of work a day—if she were fortunate in finding fresh employment—and lonely evenings in her little room on 20th street. What else could there be with poverty standing grimly over her, and loneliness walking at her side? For three years, ever since she had left Georgia, a helpless, bewildered orphan thrown suddenly and violently on such resources as she could make for herself, she had known the racking pain of a lonely, wasted youth, the smothered dreams of one whose heart is in the sky, though her feet must tread eternally upon the earth. It was the young boss who had brought the sky with all its million stars down to the restless reaching of her hands, turning the bare office rooms into a paradise, weaving magic through the selling and buying of stocks and bonds and the thousand humdrum details pertaining thereto which made up the humble burden of office routine.

After a long time she went into a restaurant because she must be going somewhere, and she couldn't go home. She felt as though it were easier out in the open air among a million careless people—her close little room was peopled with dreams of him, and it would be sharp pain to go back there. But the restaurant, a big, white bare place of the sort she was used to eating in, with noisy, hurrying waiters and crowded, marble-topped tables, repelled her, and she almost ran back into the gratefully impersonal movement of the street.

She went in the direction of Fifth avenue because a dark, quiet street led toward it. She passed somber, dignified brownstone buildings before some of which limousines were drawn up; lighted downstairs windows, warmly curtained against the wistful intrusion of her glance. The avenue stretched away under the dark, rich blue sky of evening into misty distances. There was little traffic and only an occasional well-dressed stroller who seemed somehow to occupy the whole sidewalk in passing, and leave her shrunken in size and even more unimportant than before.

But she walked on doggedly. Some longing thing in her heart drew her into the quiet atmosphere of his world, cried hungrily to enter it if only for the briefest of moments.

She became conscious of physical weariness only when the great darkness of the park loomed ahead of her. There seemed to be no farther point to walk to, somehow. On her right a big restaurant sparkled, rich with lights. Its verandas hung above the empty pavement, green with palms and shrubs, dotted with little tables. A few couples sat at dinner, leaning close to each other in the warm air, seeming to drink in the slow, sweet sound of an orchestra that played somewhere within.

From the opposite side of the avenue, Nan looked at them, and because she must always be imagining things, she saw herself sitting with the man she loved at one of those little tables, hearing the low murmur of his voice through the liquid strains of the music. For a moment she almost believed it was so—that she sat there with him. Then the ugliness of reality closed in around her.

"I'm tired," she told herself. It would be nice to dine there, but she couldn't of course. But why not? She suddenly remembered the extra twenty-five dollars in her purse. The soft lights, the subdued music, the peaceful quiet of the restaurant called to her. She crossed the street and went bravely up the steps.

She found a table in a corner of the veranda. Her dark suit was neat and attractive, nobody paid much attention to her. She sat, wrapped up in her own thoughts, hearing the music beat in grateful waves against her hurt and tired heart. After this—the end. But, just now, quiet and peace and a sense of belonging to his world for a little while at least.

She ordered from the entrees indifferently, not caring what she ate or how much it cost. She hardly saw the waiter who gave her a menu and stood solicitously over her while she glanced at it.

But she saw very distinctly the man who threaded his way among the scattered tables toward her. Only she didn't believe that she saw him—not really. Even when he put his hand on the back of a chair at a nearby table and started to sit down, his face turned straight toward her, she didn't believe it could be the young boss.

She was startled to hear a voice quite unlike her own saying calmly: "Good evening, Mr. Gardner."

He looked at her, bowed hesitatingly without the faintest notion who she was, and sat down. It was late and the last couple at their end of the palm-screened veranda had gone. He and she sat there, facing each other, alone. And he didn't know who she was.

She found herself walking over to him, impelled uncontrollably by some force within herself. Until she stood before him and he had risen in some embarrassment to greet her, she had no idea of what she would say. Then——

"Mr. Gardner, I want to thank you for your generosity — Mr. Peters gave me the check you left—we're all sorry you're leaving, Mr. Gardner."

His bright, remembered smile lit his whole face, making it kindly; giving it the look that the girls down at the office always liked to see—the look that had come to mean life itself to one of them. She noticed then what a tired darkness there was around his eyes.

"I hope you aren't ill, Mr. Gardner."

"No, Miss Taylor, and thank you—I wanted you girls to know I had appreciated your services——" he stopped and looked at her, evidently at a loss just what to say. "You needn't thank me—it was a pleasure, I assure you."

She still stood there, and he saw something infinitely appealing in the whiteness of her face, the compression of her mouth.

"Do you often dine here, Miss Taylor?"

"No, indeed. I—I came tonight—I don't know why."

His perfunctory air of politeness melted. "We are both alone," he said. "I wonder if I might sit at your table with you."

"I would be glad to have you, Mr. Gardner."

So they sat there together, in the soft summer air, while the strains of the orchestra enveloped them, and it was all just like the dream she had had. She knew that now, if not before, he was noticing the difference in her, the whiteness of her small hands, the delicacy of her features, the quiet air of breeding that stamped her indelibly for the thing she was—a well-born woman of the South.

"You've been with us downtown quite a while, Miss Taylor, I believe."

"Yes—for six months, about."

"Aren't you from the South?"

"Yes—Georgia."

"Do you like your work?"

"I—oh—well——"

He looked at her curiously. "Say you hate it if you do," he said. "I'd like to hear you say you hate it."

She stared at him. Was this the correct and quiet young business man who had always taken it so impersonally for granted that she was simply a cog in the machine—who had not even recognized her after six months in the same office with her. He bent toward her, looking into her tired young eyes that tonight had tragedy lying darkly in their depths.

"I believe you do hate it," he said slowly.

"I do." She looked away from him, down the velvet-shadowed canyon of Fifth avenue, "I'm quitting. They don't know it, but I'm not going back."

"Really? What will you do—if it isn't impertinent of me to ask? You see, I'm interested. I hate it, too."

"You? Why should you hate it?" She watched his eyes, seeing a strange, uneasy fire leap in them.

"It would be hard to explain—or perhaps it wouldn't, to you. Principally because I hate it. Are you taking some better position?"

Nan's lips twisted in a wry, little smile. "No, I haven't any position. I—I'll have to find one."

"But why—you were well situated there, I thought, since you are going to work, anyway. There wasn't any trouble, was there?"

"No, indeed. They don't even know I'm leaving."

He rolled a bread crumb around and around the white tablecloth, regarding her with a thought of kindliness.

"Just want a change?" he asked softly.

"Yes," she answered wearily. "I can't stay there any more. But you—you say you hate it. I'm surprised, Mr. Gardner. They thought at the office that—you know the girls talk about things and they said—that maybe you were going to marry."

"No. I'm not. I'll try to tell you why I'm leaving, because your own reasons seem to be as utterly impractical as mine, which is a consolation. I've gone stale. I want to go out somewhere and find life and romance and adventure. My money doesn't do me any good because I'm not happy. Nothing that doesn't make you happy can do you the slightest bit of good. I'm thoroughly convinced of that. So—well, I've just pitched everything over. I'm through. I got a job on a freighter going to the Bahamas this afternoon—a job above decks where I can see the blue water and the open sky while I work, and feel the splash of the spray in my face. I'm to report with my baggage at 3 tomorrow morning. The boat sails at 3:30 sharp. I'm taking no money with me. I'm going to be my naked self in a new, naked world of truth—no, I'm not a poet. Don't look at me so suspiciously, Miss Taylor. I'm only a misfit, like some three million other men in New York."

Nan sat silent for a long time, looking first at him, then out to the giant buildings and the faint strip of sky that stretched beyond them. "Something must have happened to bring you to such a decision," she said at last.

He smiled. "That's just it—nothing happened. It never will unless I make it."

"I know," she nodded. "That's the glory of being a man. I hate dullness, too, but I'll—I'll have to stand it, I reckon,"

He studied her face with its troubled, averted eyes. "You weren't brought up to work," he commented. "Are your people living, may I ask?"

"No—no near relatives at all. My mother and father were killed very suddenly in a train accident. We'd been poor before—ever since my grandfather failed in business and my father with him, when I was quite a little girl—but when mother and father were killed there was nothing for me to do but go to work. My little home town in Georgia didn't offer much opportunity, so I came here."

"And you've been alone here ever since, without friends.

"Yes. I—I don't make friends easily. I haven't had any opportunity with—with folks I really cared for, you know. Tonight—oh, don't you see? I was hungry for beautiful places and nice people. I had the extra $25, you know, and I came here. I just wanted to."

He nodded, understandingly. "Of course. Divinely impractical, just like letting the job go; just like letting my job go. We're both beautifully crazy. Miss Taylor, as I said, I have until 3 in the morning. My clothes—and old suit and a few necessaries—are at the club, where I shall call for them before boarding the freighter. That allows several hours in which we might enjoy each other's company and exchange emancipated views, and forget our loneliness. I wonder if you'd care to 'go on a party,' as the stenogs put it? We'll dance and talk and I, at least, will have a pleasant memory to carry away with me. You see, this is remarkable. We are exactly in the same boat. Apparently we have been for the last six months. Let's stay in it a few hours more—shall we?"

The music floated lazily out to them, and a breeze stirred the tall palms around their table. Nan half-closed her eyes, and let the exquisite miracle of living seep slowly through her whole being. The end would be soon, perhaps—but oh, not yet, not yet!

"I'd like to go," she said primly. "I love to dance."

The gloom that lies between midnight and morning shrouded the bare, silent houses as a taxicab rolled up to a corner at West Twenty-third street and deposited two people upon the curb.

"I—I never could tell you what a beautiful evening it's been, Mr. Gardner," said Nan, softly.

Mr. Gardner took her little gloved hand in his, and smiled down at her. "It's the sort of thing one can't tell," he answered.

"You—you'll have to hurry now, I guess."

"I'll take you to the door."

On the steps he consulted his watch. Then he laughed—a queer, shaky laugh. "Good night," he said, and bent down swiftly and kissed her.

In her little room Nan sat on the edge of the bed, staring dully before her. "So—he's gone," she whispered.

A little clock ticked on the mantel. Her eyes fell upon it, and she rose, going close to it, watching it as if fascinated.

"Why, it's half-past 3," she breathed, and then suddenly she understood why he had laughed, and why he had kissed her.

"Gee, girls," said Julia one hot, idle noon a few days later, addressing the assembled group in the delicious privacy of the outer office at lunch hour, "I glimpsed a letter this morning on old Peters' desk from the young boss. He did get married, after all, so you see I was right. He says—can you chew on this—that he's discovered there's a whole lot in makin' money and that he's comin' back in two weeks and work harder than ever. And he never went abroad at all—he and his bride, whoever she is—he didn't say—are honeymoonin' in his house at Westchester. Some cheap fellow, I'll say. Money! That's all them rich ones ever think of, even on a honeymoon. Deliver me, and heaven be thanked for my narrow escape."

And, content with the unfathomable depth of this last remark, Miss Mott swept grandly out of the room and down the elevator, leaving behind her an awed silence pregnant with scared conjecture.

BREAKING THE ICE.

The young lover was very bashful. Turning to the girl beside him on the sofa he asked:

"Does your brother like cheese?"

She answered with a smile:

"I haven't got a brother."

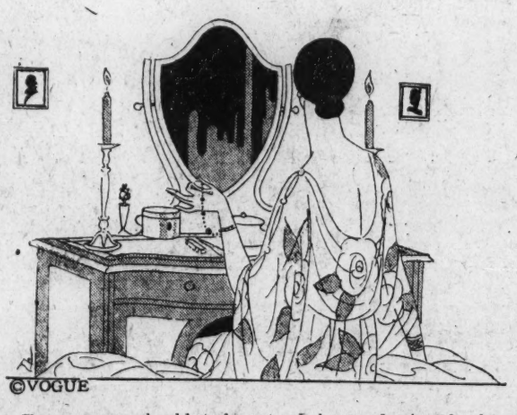
Dead silence for another spell.

Then he said: "If—if you had a brother, do you think he'd—he'd like cheese?"—The Progressive Grocer.

BEAUTY AND YOU

MAKING THE BEST OF YOUR WORST POINTS.

By VIOLA PARIS.



©VOGUE

Every woman should study, not only her good points, but her beauty faults, in order that she may make the best of them.

Making the most of your best points, making the least of your worst, or turning these worst points into a point of positive and arresting chic—these are three processes that every would-be smart woman ought to learn. But, alas, so few do! In some cases, they master the first, make an attempt at the second, and fail to see that there is such a thing as the third. In most cases they neglect all these and take the road of least resistance, which is to follow the crowd.

Have You Straight Hair?

Perhaps you have straight hair. Admittedly, this is not usually an asset; you may even have considered it a serious liability. If it is the stiff kind of straight hair, you may have had it waved much too tightly, only to see it come out like Abyssinian wool. Where-upon you went to the other extreme, secured a loose wave such as looks so well on other heads, only to behold it fade out overnight.

Why not accept the inevitable and capitalize it? Go to one of the modern-minded hairdressers who doesn't believe in waving a straight head of hair, but rather in devising for it some truly chic arrangement that suits the face, gives individuality and attains a kind of distinction impossible to hair that curls? He will work over you as though you were a portrait, trying this, trying that. You'll have to sit, fixed and contemplative as Buddha, while you hair dries into the lines he devises for it. But, when he's finally trained it to go that way, you will end by being glad that your hair is straight.

Are You Too Thin?

Most of us today consider ourselves too fat, wherefore we diet and exercise accordingly. But here is a tall thin girl whose problem is quite different. Too often, however, she worries about collarbones, hipbones, ankle-bones and elbows. Occasionally she even writes to me about it, wailing, "How can I cover up my thinness?"

Instead, she ought to make an asset of her slimness—unless it is a case of real ill health. She ought even to exaggerate her grayhound look, her underslung line—she ought to appear as narrow, as thin, as slight as she can. People will call her distinguee, and try to copy her.

Beautiful Hands? Ugly Hands?

Have you beautiful hands? Then you must draw attention to them in every possible way. You must care for your nails till they shine; you must make them tell the world of your fastidiousness, you worship of the ultimate in cleanliness, daintiness, loveliness. You may stand more color on your nails than the average hand could attempt with impunity. You may wear a single beautiful ring, so arresting in its size, shape or color that all eyes are drawn to it and to the exquisite hand on which it gleams.

But suppose your hands aren't beautiful, or even commonplace, but frankly ugly? Then you must wear no rings; you must have your sleeves cut to show as little of the hand as possible, and display that little to advantage. A long sleeve, cut well down over the wrist, minimizes the length of a hand too long. On the contrary a tight sleeve accentuates a hand large all over, or one too wide for its length; for these types, a coat sleeve is better. A mannish hand looks its worst projecting from a fussy sleeve.

Hands are great give-aways of age. One of the famous New York beauties of twenty years ago always wears gloves today—at the country club, at the opera, as well as on the street. It seems to her friends that they never see her gloveless! She knows, you see, that her hands were always her worst points; now, they're almost hideous. So she covers them up, whether others do the same or not.

Are You Overweight?

A bad point that can never be capitalized is overweight; nor can it be ignored with impunity. The woman who has too many pounds should live to reduce; if reduction is impossible, then she should so corset herself, so provide herself with brassieres that she attains good proportions even though she can't quite reach slenderness. She must remember, also, not to wear her clothes too tight, and she must be devoutly thankful that black is once more superlatively smart. A well-cut black dress will often take ten pounds from the impression she makes on the onlooker.

Has Your Face Deep Lines?

If your face is lined—with years, sickness or worry—you must always try to throw it into a becoming shadow with your hat. When large hats are the mode, as they have been this summer, you will be in luck; even when small hats rule the world, you should always choose one with the maximum of brim that could be considered smart. Some fabrics are more flattering than others, too, as velvet is more flattering than felt. No color will be so good for you as black, provided this is at all becoming. If it isn't, try the subtler tones of brown or green or beige; never attempt brilliance.

Everybody Has One Good Point.

It has been said—and experience corroborates the statement—that every woman has at least one good point. An ugly face may be partially compensated for by a lovely leg; in which case its possessor will indulge in the sheerest of stockings and skirts as short as the mode permits. A beautiful figure may accompany a commonplace head; a well-turned head, bobbed to a nicety, may top a figure that leaves much to be desired. Each woman must locate this good point of hers and dress up to it, just as she must fearlessly recognize her worst point and decide what to do about it. The best of all good points, therefore, is a nimble brain. Be thankful if you find that yours is such!

The Bunny Tots

They Visit Brother Raccoon

Written and Illustrated by Edward McCandlish.

While Uncle Billy and the Bunny Tots were having their persimmon party Master Stout told all about how the Bunny Tots had joined a circus and how they wanted Uncle Billy and Brother Jim Raccoon and Brother Bob Woodchuck and all the other folks of the Big Woods to just drop everything and go up to town and travel with the circus and see the world.

Uncle Billy Possum listened to the whole story without saying a word, and, when Master Stout had quite finished with telling his story, a shrewd look appeared in Mister Billy Possum's eye.

"Well," said Uncle Billy, slowly, "I ain't fixin' for to go up to town, 'less'n Brother Jim Raccoon goes along, too," said he.

"Come along, then.' said the Bunny Tots. "Let's go and see Brother Jim Raccoon."

So out through the winding tunnel went the possum and Bunny Tots, and away they went scampering through the woods until they came to Brother Raccoon's house. Mister Raccoon's house was built in a big hollow tree, not far from a stream of water such as all raccoon's love so well. Brother Raccoon was away when the Bunny Tots came, washing his dinner in the nearby stream—for a raccoon always washes his dinner before eating if there is a river or a stream nearby.

Pretty soon, as the Bunny Tots drew nearer to the Raccoon's house, they heard a cry like the cry of a little barn owl, only louder and clearer and without the closing trill. It was Brother Raccoon calling. He had heard noises and was warning his "Old Woman" to be on the lookout.

Standing quite still, the Bunny Tots and Brother Possum looked up at the entrance to the hollow tree. Pretty soon they saw the tips of two furry ears appear at the hollow tree doorway, then a vary sharp nose appeared, sniffing busily, then came two very sharp black eyes, which looked around for a moment and disappeared back in the tree.

Putting his hands over his mouth in a certain position, Brother Billy Possum imitated that cry that sounded so much like the cry of a tiny owl. Again the Bunny Tots watched the tree, and once more they saw the ears and the nose and the sharp eyes appear at the hollow tree entrance. But this time the Bunny Tots gave a loud cheer that sent Ma Raccoon tumbling straight over backward into the nest.

But she was up again in a moment and came rattling out of the hole again, for her sharp eyes had recognized the Bunny Tots in that brief second while she was tumbling off of her perch.

"Land Sakes!" said Ma Raccoon as she hurried down from the hollow tree. "What a start you give a body! I thought surely I heard Pa Raccoon give me the signal to lay low and look about!"

"And so you did!" said Brother Jim Raccoon, who came hurrying up just at that moment, all out of breath, knocking the Bunny Tots topsy-turvy in his eagerness to show them how welcome they were.

"And you, too, Billy Possum! How d'ye do?" said Brother Raccoon when he saw Mister Possum standing at one side.

Up the side of the hollow tree went Mister Raccoon, while the Bunny Tots—who are not such good climbers—clambered up a small sapling that grew by the side of the tree. Inside the hollow tree was a roomy nest lined with moss and sticks, which served as a sleeping couch and also covered a "cache" of wild fruits and nuts and things which the raccoons store away to feed upon during the long, cold winter, when they go to sleep and stay curled up in their warm nest until spring comes again.

As soon as the Bunny Tots were all seated around inside the tree, and Ma Raccoon and the baby raccoons and Brother Billy Possum were all seated, too, Mister Raccoon raised up a part of the flooring and displayed a store of fruits and nuts alreay stored there for the coming winter. Of course the Bunny Tots and Brother Possum and the raccoons had another party then. The raccoons would have to turn out and lay in another supply of nuts for the winter, but they didn't mind a little thing like that then.

The Magic Ruby.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

A long, long time ago there lived in India a rajah who possessed a magic ruby.

Any one who possessed this priceless gem could at any time have their heart's greatest desire. As every one envied the rajah he was many times in danger of his life.

A committee of men was formed and from this committee Kasham Ben Ali was chosen to get the jewel, even at the cost of the ruler's life.

Now the rajah had a very beautiful daughter, whom every one called the "Fairy Princess," as she was very kind to every one, the poor and rich alike.

Kasham Ben Ali entered the scintillating marble residence of the rajah in the night. There he killed the rajah's private servant and dressed himself in the clothes of this poor unfortunate.

The "Fairy Princess" was sleeping in her apartment when the door slowly opened and some one stealthily glided across the floor. Kasham Ben Ali, upon finding himself in the apartment of our "Fairy Princess," decided to look at this lovely creature whom he had never seen. Upon looking on her bed he stared with admiration and astonishment, as he had never seen any one so beautiful.

He immediately lost his heart to her, but upon finding that she was on the verge of awakening he quickly but quietly left as he had entered.

Not succeeded in fulfilling his conquest that night he retired to the servants' quarters and there fell into deep sleep to dream of our princess.

The next morning was sunny and cheerful, but still Kasham Ben Ali could not gather enough courage to fulfill his mission. Days passed, but he still did nothing, in order to be near the princess.

She, seeing him wait upon her father, could not recall having seen him in the castle before. Upon inquiring if her father had changed servants she found he had not. Her inquiry made him suspicious and he called Kasham Ben Ali to him. Upon seeing that he was not his former servant he immediately ordered him to be confined until willing to explain his presence in the castle. Kasham Ben Ali finding himself in these straits finally confessed his part in the treacherous plot and was confined again in a gloomy, dark prison.

In the meanwhile our dear princess was failing in health and finally took to her bed. You may be assured that the best physicians were summoned, but every one said that there was something weighing on her mind. Finally the rajah persuaded her to tell him what was worrying her. When he heard of her love for Kasham Ben Ali he sadly shook his head, but summoned Kasham Ben Ali to be brought before him. Upon ascertaining his love for her he had a royal wedding.

As long as the rajah lived he felt assured that his daughter was in good hands.

And the ruby was placed in the middle of the ruler's crown surrounded by pearls.

The Constitution and How It Protects Our Rights.

(Honorable Mention.)

The Constitution of the United States is the supreme fundamental law of the United States of America, by which all powers of the national government are established and limited. The objects for which it was written and adopted are fully covered in the preamble—to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.

Before the Constitution the States were loosely held together by the Articles of Confederation. Commerce was poor and not advancing, justice was poor, States had little defense and people had little or no liberty.

Through this great body of laws known as "The Constitution of the United States of America," all of these things were remedied.

In a section in this body it is said, "No taxes shall be laid on goods entering a State." In another section every State is guaranteed a republican form of government. Another gives Congress power to raise an army which is for the defense of the country. Other sections provide for courts, a navy, limits the powers of Congress and the President, all of which protect one's rights.

Article 7 provides for the ratification of the Constitution so as to guarantee the inalienable rights of the people, which was mentionel in no part of the document.

The amendments provide for free religion, a militia in each State, which provides for the security of a State, nonslavery, the right of vote and the filling of vacancies in representation, and numerous other things, all of which protect one's rights.

The Constitution of the United States is holding the States securely together, giving the people the utmost freedom and highly protecting their rights.

It is one of the greatest documents ever written and is the greatest of all help in the prospering of the United States of America.

The White House.

We are all going for a visit to the White House.

We are now driving down Pennsylvania avenue, and when at last we pass the Treasury building, we can get a good view of the residence of our Presidents—the White House. George Washington selected the site for the White House, and laid the corner stone in 1792. He lived to see the building completed, but he never occupied it. John Adams, our second President, was the first to have the honor of living in the beautiful mansion.

The White House was destroyed by the British troops, but was rebuilt soon afterward. Except for being painted once or twice, it had never been changed until 1902-3 and once again in 1909, when additions were put on each side.

These additions are rooms only one story high, and one can hardly get a view of them above the beautiful green lawn. They are used for the President's offices and for entrances into the public rooms, which before were situated in the main building.

There is a long corridor down the east end of the building, and in this corridor hang the portraits of the mistresses of the White House. Along the walls are cases in which are pieces of historic china or ornaments used in the past days.

We now ascend the broad stairway, and enter the east room, where all formal receptions are held. There is little furniture in this room, but we are all so dazzled by its beauty that we hardly realize this fact.

The other rooms are not open to the publice, but if we have special permission we may go into the blue room. It has beautiful hangings of blue silk. In this room is the clock sent to Lafayette by Napoleon and by him presented to Washington. The green room has green velvet on the walls and contains portraits of many of the Presidents and interesting things sent by foreign rulers. In the red room is a portrait of Washington by Gilbert Stuart. The same picture was saved by Dolly Madison. We now visit the state dining room, where all formal dinners are given. The large mahogany table seats 100 guests. We are not allowed to visit the private rooms of the family. After our enjoyable trip, we leave the White House and start for home, driving through the presidential park.

Our Knights.

(Honorable Mention.)

A war was fought on the fields of France,
Our boys now lie beneath the ground,
They fought with gun and not with lance,
Yet real knights they are of the table round.
So over the top they went with a shout,
And killed the Germans, score on score,
And as the cannon roared about
Our loyal knights, many breathed no more.
Through shot and shell alike, they fought,
As brave and true as they could be,
A victory, not a defeat, was wrought
By our young knights across the sea.
But many a day has swiftly sped,
O'er that great battlefield of old,
Yet none of us should forget the dead,
Our wondrous knights so very bold.

What do you know about your "Own City?" If you live in Washington, can you tell how it is governed, whether or not it has a mayor, how much the city government costs and other vital questions concerned with it. Let's have a "Know Your Own City" crusade, and each and every reader of this page try to find out something interesting about it in which he or she may live.

A prize of $1 will be awarded each week for the best story of not more than 400 words received on the topic "My Own City." The Corn Plant.

(Honorable Mention.)

There is a plan you often see
In gardens and in fields,
Its stalk is straight, its leaves are long,
And precious fruit it yields.

The fruit, when young, is soft and white,
And closely wrapped in green,
And tassels hang from every ear,
Which children love to glean.

But when the tassels fade away,
The fruit is ripe and old;
It peeps from out the wrapping dry,
Like beads of yellow gold.

The fruit, when young, we boil and roast,
When old we grind it well,
Now think of all the plants you know,
And try its name to tell.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1926.

MADDUX, MARSHALL, MOSS & MALLORY CELEBRATE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF BUSINESS CAREER HERE

REALTY FIRM'S RECORD FOR FOUR YEARS DEMONSTRATES SERVICE MEN'S ABILITY TO ACHIEVE TRUE BUSINESS SUCCESS

Organization Built by Maj. H. C. Maddux and Gen. R. C. Marshall, Jr., Takes Vast Strides in Handling Tremendous Capital Properties.

FIVE OF CITY'S GREAT HOTELS CONTROLLED, MANAGED BY NEWLY FORMED DEPARTMENT

Development of Home Colony in Spacious Battery Park, Improvements at Edgemoor and Many Other Projects Have Been Made Successful by Realty Concern.

By HARRY HITTS.

REFUTING the popular idea that service men do not make a success in the business world, the real estate firm of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, every member of which served his country in uniform, has just celebrated its fourth anniversary as a member of the Washington business world, with a record seldom equaled by a similar organization.

Started in one room, with a stenographer, a couple of chairs and a desk and two partners, Maj. H. C Maddux and Gen. R. C. Marshall, jr., the firm has steadily progressed until today it occupies a floor and a half of the National Capital building, 923 Fifteenth street northwest, in the heart of "Washington's Wall Street," employs a dozen salesmen in the real estate department alone, and shows every indication of doing more business in the coming year than it has done in the previous four years.

In addition to real estate sales, the firm now has a separate hotel department, made necessary by the acquisition of five hotels; a rental department; insurance department; loan department and a separate department for the handling of business properties.

Founding of the firm had its inception in the mind of Maj. H. C. Maddux, president, and guiding spirit of the organization, who had charge of the construction of some of the largest hospitals built by the government during the war. Maj. Maddux conceived the idea that a firm familiar with labor and construction costs could build homes for service people of a class that such people would care to occupy and at a price that they could afford to pay.

Almost overnight the major decided to quit the army and enter the real estate field and his first customer after his embarkation in the new field was Gen. R. C. Marshall, jr., to whom the enthusiastic major sold a home. Gen. Marshall was so impressed with the business ability of his brother officer that he decided to go into business with him and so the firm was founded, being known at that time as Maddux, Marshall & Co.

One of the first undertakings of the new company was the development of Battery Park, Md., which adjoins Edgemoor. The two partners looked over the barren field, for Battery Park was farm land then, and decided that they could visualize a community of happy homes on that spot. They bought it and surrounded it with the closest restrictions, intending to develop a service community.

Battery Park a Success.

Business was good; houses were built; home sites were sold, and the general public became interested to such an extent that the bars were finally let down for civilians who would measure up to the standards required to live in Battery Park.

Today, where the farm land lay barren less than four years ago, the dream of Maddux & Marshall can be visualized in a community of several hundred homes of the better type, all of which were sold at a price much below that asked for similar properties, because of the foresight and knowledge of construction and labor prices possessed by Maj. Maddux.

Business increased. The firm decided to expand. Other service men sought entrance and finally Col. James A. Moss and Lieut. Comdr. C. K. Mallory were added to the organization which soon became known in the financial district as "the four Ms."

Hotels Taken Over.

Organizing an efficient sales force under the personal direction of J. R. Crutchfield, sales manager, Maj. Maddux launched into a selling campaign which speedily disposed of the firm's holdings in Battery Park. The sales organization was functioning so smoothly that the major lost interest and turned to find something that would occupy his active interest. Hotels appealed.

The first move was to acquire the Martinique. This hotel was built up to a capacity business and then, in rapid succession, the firm took over the Tilden Hall apartment hotel, the Cairo, the Arlington and just this past week purchased the Fairfax, on Massachusetts avenue and Twenty-first street, for a price slightly in excess of a million dollars. The firm is also negotiating for another hotel which will probably be taken over the first of the month. These hotels are managed from a central organization located in the National Capital building.

Votes Views on Future.

The wholesale acquisition of hotels has had the business section of Washington guessing as to just where the firm will branch out next. The policy is the result of another idea formulated by Maj. Maddux.

"Washington has the largest percentage of hotel dwellers of any city in America" the major declared yesterday "Hundreds of people come here on government or other business, which may keep them here for a few weeks or a few months. Naturally they hesitate to lease an apartment or a house, and the logical solution of their living problem is the hotel. We will soon be in a position to offer everything from a moderate-priced American plan to the finest of European plan hotels, for we want that business and are going to be in shape to handle it.

"The life real estate organization must be able to cater to every class of people For those that want homes, we have homes; for those that want apartments, we have almost any class of apartment that can be desired; for those that desire hotel life and hotel service, we can offer anything in the hotel line. We want this firm to be 100 per cent efficient and are striving every day to make it so."

Handed Edgemoor Sales.

Following the successful development and sales of the Battery Park properties, Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory were induced to take over the sales of Edgemoor, which adjoins Battery Park. They consented and have sold hundreds of thousands of feet in that section, as well as a number of homes. Perhaps the most distinguished resident added to Edgemoor by the firm is Postmaster General Harry S. New, who, with Mrs. New, bought a beautiful home for their use during their stay in Washington.

"We were glad to get Edgemoor," Maj. Maddux explained. "It gave us an opportunity to offer millionaire's surroundings with a reasonable price to people who sought an exclusive home. At the same time we have several estates in that section that would be worthy the attention of a multimillionaire, for finer sections can not be found around Washington."

Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory also control Washington Gardens, a community of small farms near Waldorf; Garrett Park, a bungalow community in Montgomery county not far from Kensington; a group of homes in Luzon Heights and property in all parts of the city.

The annual business of this firm of service men would be hard to estimate, but it is safe to say it runs high into the millions.

Maj. Maddux's Development Planned for Service Family Residences.

CITIZENS CLAMORED TO PURCHASE SITES

Those Who Bought in Early Days Profit by Community Growth.

Probably the proudest accomplishment of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory is the development of Battery Park, Md., the fruition of the first realty dream of Maj. H. C. Maddux, president of the firm.

From the barren field on which the major first visualized his community, Battery Park has progressed by almost phenomenal degrees to one of the finest and most exclusive residential sections near the Capital.

Every facility the city can offer, plus the environment of almost rural life, is exemplified in Battery Park. The homes are of splendid construction; the landscape lends itself to artistic arrangement; there are two mail deliveries daily; stores and markets of every kind are with-

FUTURE OF CAPITAL BRIGHTEST IN NATION, MAJ. MADDUX SAYS

Washington Seen as Destined to Have Population of More Than Million.

ADVANTAGES OF CITY CONSTANTLY GROWING

Nevertheless, More of Booster Spirit Is Declared Needed Among Its Citizens.

By MAJ. H. C. MADDUX
President, Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory.

Washington, in my opinion, and in the opinion of every member and employe of the firm of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, has the greatest future of any city or section in the United States. It was my belief in the future of the Nation's Capital that led to the location of the original firm of Maddux, Marshall & Co. here, and that belief has been more than justified every year since we first organized.

We believe that Washington is destined to have a million or more population and that it will grow faster in the next few years than any other city of similar size in the country. More and more people are finding out every year that it is the greatest city in the world, offering advantages that no other city can offer, and they are coming here in a constantly increasing stream. That is why Washington's building activity is so great; that is why the hotels are filled virtually the year round; that is why suburban communities are being developed in every direction; and last, but not least, that is why Washington real estate is the best and safest investment in the world today.

There are many reasons for this certain growth of Washington.

Attractions of Capital.

In the first place it is the only Capital this nation will ever have, and there is a certain attraction about the capital of any nation that sets it apart from the other cities. And Washington is not only the Capital of the United States, but, by reason of the dominance of this country in world affairs, it is rapidly becoming a world Capital.

As a place to acquire a home and rear a family, Washington has no superior. The children here not only have the advantages of a splendid public and private school system, but they are enabled, by reason of their location, to learn at first hand about the things that the children of other cities obtain knowledge of only from books. Congress, Capitol, White House, embassies, all kinds of public buildings and the far-famed Congressional Library offer facilities for study impossible to obtain in any other city.

Social activities center in Washington. The first lady of the land must, perforce, make her home here. The cream of European culture is sent here to represent the various governments on the other side of the ocean. Army and navy society centers in the Capital, and despite the prominence of other cities socially, they must all take a second place where the Capital is concerned.

Leaders of Nation Here.

The leaders of every section of the United States come here. Regardless of our beliefs and political feelings, every one of us must acknowledge that the whole American public, typified by its dominating spirits, is represented at the Capitol. Too close contact with representatives and senators has given the average Washington a somewhat biased view of these men as a whole, but the fact remains that they are the real representatives of their several communities, and represent, for most part, the pick of the manhood of that section.

Washington is fast becoming the art center of the country. Our galleries contain some of the most wonderful masterpieces of all time and the art colony here is growing in numbers and in power every year.

And these are only a few of the reasons which could be cited to prove our Capital the greatest city in America.

But we need more of the booster spirit here. Every Washingtonian should constitute himself a committee of one to sing the praises of the Capital at every opportunity. Cities have been built on booster spirit and not one of them has had the advantages that can be offered by Washington.

Rich Should Be Brought Here.

All over the land there are men who have acquired their share of this world's goods and who, if the advantages of Washington were properly brought before them, would locate here. It would be the best possible means of bringing increase of capital to the city and every resident here would benefit directly or indirectly.

Tell your friends that Washington has the finest climate as a year-round proposition that can be found.

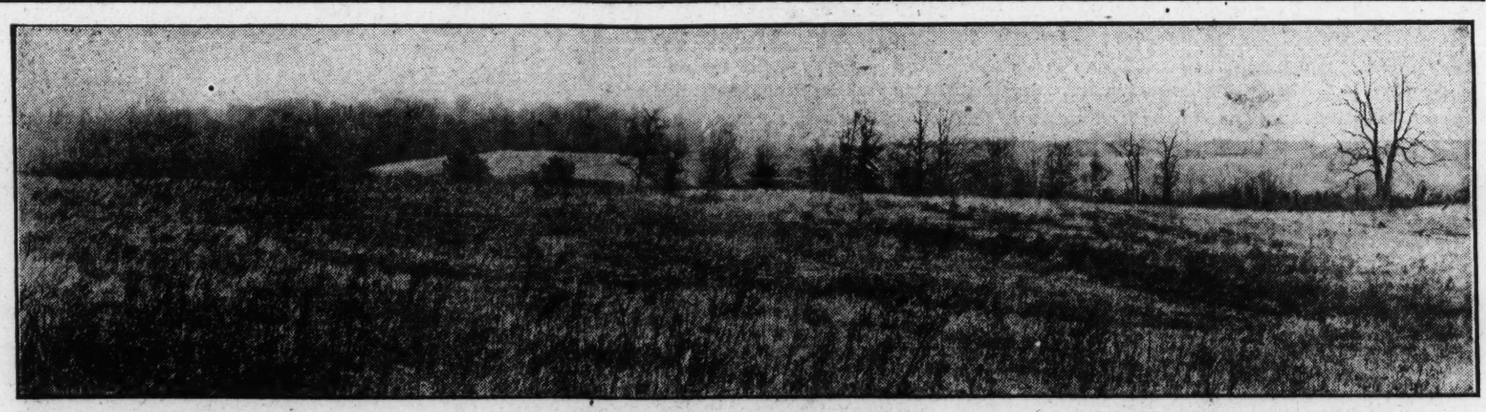
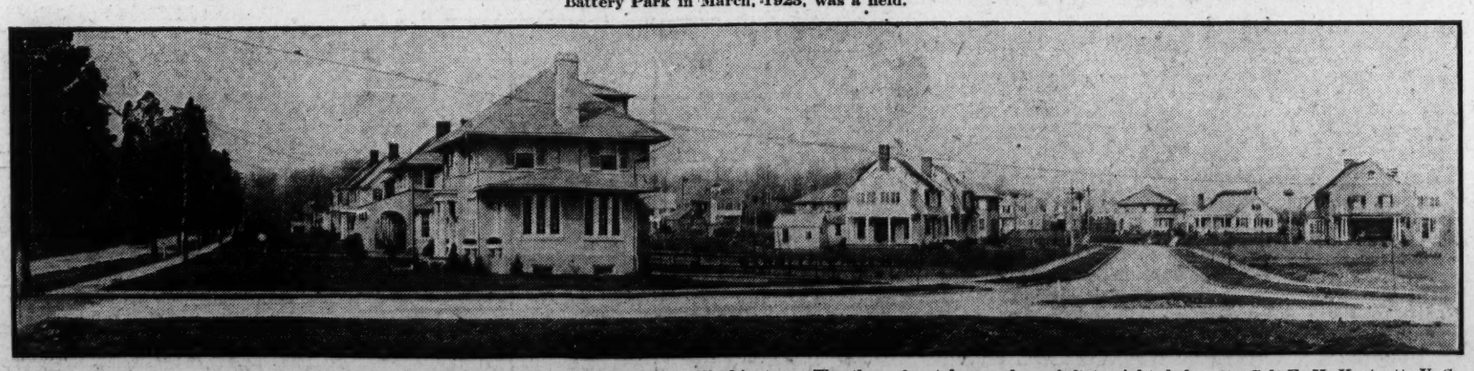
BATTERY PARK, FROM FIELD TO MODERN CITY IN TWO YEARS



Battery Park in March, 1923, was a field.



Today Battery Park contains some of the finest and most modern homes around Washington. The three front homes here, left to right, belong to Col. E. H. Hartnett, U. S. army, retired; R. G. Curry, assistant counsel, Interstate Commerce Commission, and Maj.. F. X. Strong, medical corps, U. S. army.

Varied styles of architecture mark Battery Park homes. Shown here, the first four homes in the foreground belong, left to right, to J. W. Green, scientist, Rockefeller Foundation; Capt. S. D. Hervey, infantry, U. S. army; Prof. David Lumsden, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and J. E. McClure, attorney at law.

members of his class. Although "a shave-tail not yet dry back of the ears," as old soldiers say, through his native energy and initiative he soon began to attract general attention in the army. In 1896 he initiated and carried out a series of experiments with the bicycle as a vehicle for military purposes, the culmination of which was a 2,000-mile bicycle trip from Fort Missoula, Mont., to St. Louis, Mo., with 20 soldiers and 1 medical officer (now Brig. Gen. James M. Kennedy, commanding the Walter Reed General hospital), carrying their arms, shelter tents, and rations. Without a cent of expense to Uncle Sam Second Lieut. Moss secured a $2,000 bicycle equipment. The "old timers," who were looking on askance, wondered how he had done it. The trip attracted nation-wide attention.

When the Spanish-American war came along in 1898, and Shafter's army went to Cuba, Lieut. Moss' company was one of the first to land on Cuban soil. Recommended for two brevets for gallantry in action during the campaign, he was then sent to the Philippines where he passed three years fighting Filipinos. In 1906, when 34 years of age, he was appointed lieutenant colonel and aid-de-camp to the late Lieut. Gen. H. C. Corbin. Upon Gen. Corbin's retirement Capt. Moss was ordered to Fort Leavenworth, Kans., as an instructor in the Army Staff college.

In 1911, when Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, decided that the burdensome administrative work of the army had to be reduced and simplified, he had Capt. Moss ordered to duty in his office and gave him carte blanche to "cut and slash," all of which resulted in the abolition of the musteroll (up to that time considered absolutely indispensable by 99 per cent of the army), the adoption of the simplified pay roll and many other simplified forms in use today, as well as of the introduction of the present modern, up-to-date system of military indorsement and letter-writing. It was estimated at the time that the extent to which Capt. Moss had reduced and simplified the administrative work of the army had saved the government hundreds of thousands of dollars and saved company commanders, adjutants and others a stupendous amount of time and labor.

In 1917 Col. Moss organized and trained his regiment at Camp Upton, N. Y., where he built for his men, without a single cent of cost to the government, an auditorium, the largest building in any of the national cantonments, involving an expenditure of $40,000, which amount he raised in 60 days.

Commanding his regiment on the western front in France until two or three weeks before the armistice was signed, he was then assigned to duty as commandant of the First corps school, the largest officers' and noncommissioned officers' school in the A. E. F.

Following the armistice, Col. Moss was detailed as chief of staff of the provost marshal general's department, and later appointed deputy provost marshal general of the A. E. F., succeeding Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, present director of prohibition enforcement.

Ten years before the world war Col. Moss saw the need for simplified military books for the national guard and junior officers in the regular army, and for citizen soldiery in case of war. With this vision he began to write a series of simplified military manuals, and after the United States entered the world war the publishers were hardly able to fill the demand for "Moss' Military Manuals." The sale of one of them, "Manual of Military Training," which was generally known as "The Military Bible," reached the 300,000 mark, the highest mark reached in the sale of any military book. Col. Moss, who for several years has been our best known military author, has written more military books, 33 in number, than any other author the world has ever known. When he retired from active service the American Legion Weekly said editorially—

"Perhaps no American military commander since the days of Grant has by self-initiated individual effort influenced the courses and conduct of as many United States soldiers as has Col. Moss by his voluminous writings."

In 1922, seeing ahead nothing but the humdrum of peace-time routine until the age of 64, when he would be compelled to retire by operation of law, Col. Moss, after 32 years' service, decided to retire from the active list of the army.

One day when quietly and peacefully enjoying himself "under his vine and under his fig tree" of retirement Maj. Maddux drove him out to Battery Park and sold him ten lots. It was that day he caught the real estate "bug" of Washington—and a week later was a member of the firm of Maddux, Marshall & Co., since which time he has been battling unceasingly in the ever-increasing real estate maelstrom of the National Capital.

Transportation Is Factor in Growth

Decided impetus to the growth of Battery Park, Edgemoor and other communities of nearby Montgomery county has been given by the increased transportation facilities offered by the Washington Railway & Electric Co., the widening of Wisconsin avenue and the bus service furnished by Leon Arnold.

Wisconsin avenue now presents one of the best boulevards in Washington, and while the Maryland section needs a little improvement, it is being kept in the best possible condition. In addition, citizens are making plans to have the State widen the Maryland side of the avenue to conform with District improvements. Fleets of automobiles can be found on this boulevard every day.

The street car company has recently placed splendid new cars on the line running to Alta Vista, which serves Battery Park and Edgemoor, and have increased the schedule to a point where it is possible to get excellent service to the city and return.

and was formerly in charge of the dry dock division, United States navy.

Commander Mallory was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1895 and served throughout the Spanish-American war and in the Philippines during the Filipino insurrection. As a result of continuous service in the tropics, his health became impaired and he was compelled to retire from active service.

Regaining his health, Commander Mallory engaged in industrial engineering work, being associated for twelve years with one of the largest industrial organizations in the world of which he became chief engineer. He served as a director of the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants of New York State, and of the Syracuse Manufacturers' association.

Upon passage of a law creating an industrial commission for the State of New York, he was appointed a member of the advisory committee and assisted in framing its building and other regulations affecting industry throughout the State. While engaged in this work he became very much interested in accident prevention and served as president of the Syracuse Safety council, whose activities resulted in a marked reduction of serious and fatal accidents in manufacturing plants and on the streets of the city.

When America entered the world war, Commander Mallory was recalled to active duty and placed in charge of the supply division of the engineering bureau of the Navy Department. As a result of the work of this division he was awarded a special letter of commendation by the Navy Department.

During the period of liquidation of the Shipping Board properties he served as manager of the dry dock division of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, a position he resigned to become a member of the firm of Maddux, Marshall & Co. shortly after its organization.

REALTOR DIRECTED ARMY CONSTRUCTION

000,000 annually); director of the Merchants Bank and Trust Co., Washington, D. C.; president of Washington Gardens, Inc., and perhaps the leading authority on construction in America today; former brigadier general, United States army, and chief of construction during the war.

Richard C. Marshall, jr., during the world war was chief of the construction division of the army, with rank of brigadier general, and since hostilities have ceased has been brigadier general, officers' reserve corps, U. S. A. In civilian life he is recognized as one of the foremost engineers of the nation, which eminence is amply attested to by the fact that he was chosen in 1920 by the Associated General Contractors of America as their general manager, with headquarters at the National Capital. Also Gen. Marshall is a member of the real estate firm of Maddux, Marshall & Co., founded by himself and Henry Cabell Maddux, also a former army officer, in 1923, and which has now expanded into the firm of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, Inc.

Richard C. Marshall, jr., is of old Virginia stock, son of Richard C. Marshall, sr., grandson of Fielding Lewis Marshall, and direct descendant of Chief Justice John Marshall. His mother was the daughter of Samuel Wilson, also a Virginian, and was Katherine Wilson before her marriage. Gen. Marshall was born March 13, 1879, at Portsmouth, county seat of famous old Norfolk county, Va., which has been the fountain head of many of Virginia's most prominent families.

He was an honor graduate of Virginia Military institute in 1898; served as captain of volunteers, Spanish-American war, 1898-1899; took a summer law course at the University of Virginia in 1899, and from September, 1899, to February, 1902, was assistant professor of mathematics and commandant of cadets, Virginia Military institute.

He was commissioned second lieutenant, artillery corps, regular army, on February 3, 1902; was an honor graduate of the Artillery school at Fort Monroe, Va., in 1904; was commissioned first lieutenant, January 21, 1904; was instructor, department of power and electricity of the Artillery school, 1905-1907; made captain, Coast Artillery corps, January 20, 1908; detailed captain, quartermaster corps, June 1908, to June, 1912, also January 7, 1915; and major, Coast Artillery corps, August 5, 1917. On February 12, 1918, he was assigned as officer in charge of the cantonment division (later reorganized as the "Construction Division of the Army") and on the following day was commissioned lieutenant colonel, quartermaster corps. He attained full colonelcy on March 20, 1918, and became a brigadier general on June 26, 1918.

As chief of the construction division of the army Gen. Marshall was responsible for all building construction by the War Department in the United States and insular possessions, involving an expenditure of more than $800,000,000. With this fund he organized and had built more than 500 projects, on which there were employed more than 400,000 men at one time, and some of these projects cost as much as $30,000,000 to complete. They included camps, cantonments, barracks, army supply bases, port terminals, storage depots, warehouses, wharves, docks, roads, hospitals, aviation fields, hangars, proving grounds, embarkation camps, engineers' camps, special camps, gunnery schools, balloon schools, emergency housing, lighters, power plants, factories and shops, munitions plants, and special new plants for the production of nitrates, phosphorus, T. N. T., and other acids, gas and explosives.

To carry out the vast construction program so vital to the nation, Gen. Marshall formed and perfected an efficent organization of some 1,500 officers and several thousand civilian experts. Practically the entire building industry of the United States was then mobilized to carry on the various phases of war-time construction work, not only from Washington but at the various project sites.

In recognition of services rendered Gen. Marshall was the recipient, from Congress, of the distinguished service medal, and the following citation:

"For exceptionally meritorious and conspicuous service in the construction division of the army. His zeal, judgment and exceptional administrative ability have enabled serious difficulties to be overcome and the construction necessary for a great army to be provided."

In 1903, he was united in marriage to Louise, daughter of George S. and Laura Winder Garrett Booker, of Hampton, Warwick county, Va. Gen. and Mrs. Marshall are the parents of a daughter, Laura Winder, now Mrs. Edgar Derby Fisher, and a son, Richard C. Marshall 3d.

Gen. Marshall is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. He holds membership in the Army and Navy, Congressional Country, Golf and Country and Metropolitan clubs, of Washington, D. C.

School at Edgemoor Has High Efficiency

Children of Edgemoor, Battery Park and other nearby sections of that end of Montgomery county have the advantage of one of the best school systems in the State with an efficiency rating higher than any published rating of a State school system in the United States.

The school building, located in Edgemoor, and which is known as the Bethesda High school, is a model of its kind. Constructed entirely of brick, it is surrounded with ample play-ground facilities which keep the children from the streets during their play hours.

Adequate teaching force and a curiculum that compares favorably with that of any other public school in the East, puts the Bethesda High school in the forefront of Maryland's educational system, which is, in itself, one of the best in the country.

MAJ. MADDUX WON RAPID BUSINESS RISE

vestments in the District of Columbia, has had an almost meteoric career in the Washington real estate and investment field.

Resigning from the United States army medical corps where for thirteen years he had served with distinction and where he held the rank of lieutenant colonel, Maj. Maddux, together with Gen. R. C. Marshall, jr., formed the organization known as Maddux, Marshall & Co., Inc., which has gradually expanded into the present organization of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory. In less than a year the firm was recognized among the leaders of the Capital and its sales ran into millions the first year.

Knowledge of construction, material and labor costs, acquired during the construction of some of the largest army hospitals of which he had charge, Maj. Maddux became convinced that better homes could be built for the same money if they were properly managed.

Complaints of brother officers regarding housing conditions confirmed the major in his idea to build a service colony, located so as to be easily accessible from Washington but far enough out to get away from the glare and disturbance of the city. The answer was Battery Park.

The firm acquired a tract of land on the old Georgetown road, about twenty minutes from the city by motor, and started work on the first group of homes. The first ground was broken in February, 1923, and a year later there were 52 homes on the tract and more than a hundred homesites sold. In the meantime the attractions of this new community had aroused interest among civilians, and the firm was besieged with requests for homesites, which requests, after some consultations, were granted, and today the population of Battery Park is more than 50 per cent civilian.

The next move of the firm was to acquire control of Edgemoor, another high-class residential section adjoining Battery Park, and wonderful success in the handling of this property followed, among the prominent people located there being Postmaster General and Mrs. Harry S. New.

But the real estate business was flourishing with the regularity of a well-oiled machine and the major grew restless. He went into the apartment house business and today the firm owns or controls apartment houses in every section of the city. Hotels then attracted his attention, and soon the Cairo, Martinique, Tilden Hall, Arlington, and more lately the Fairfax, bought last week, were "under the management of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory."

Insurance, loans, rental and other departments were added, and today the firm is prepared to handle any kind of proposition that may arise from renting an apartment to selling or buying a million-dollar property.

Henry Cabell Maddux is a Virginian, the son of Clifford Bartlett and Charlotte Landon (Butler) Maddux. He was born at Harrisonburg October 5, 1886. Following preparatory school education at St. Alban's school, Brown's school and Locust Dale academy, he entered the University of Virginia, where his prowess as an athlete, particularly on the baseball and football fields, is still remembered.

Graduated from the University of Virginia in 1908, Maj. Maddux entered the Memorial hospital at Richmond and in 1910, two years later, he entered the army as a first lieutenant. At the outbreak of the world war he was commissioned a captain and was shortly afterward promoted to lieutenant colonel and sent to France, where he was placed in command of three of the largest hospital centers of the A. E. F. For his services in France Maj. Maddux received decorations from both the French and American governments. These military honors are cited as follows:

"Lieut. Col. H. C. Maddux, for exceptionally meritorious and conspicuous services in chief surgeon's office, Third army, France, American expeditionary forces. In testimony whereof and as an expression of appreciation of these services I award him this citation.

Award of distinguished service medal; under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved July 9, 1918. (Bul. No. 43, W. D., 1918.) A distinguished service medal was awarded on October 12, 1921, by the War Department, with the following citation:

"For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in organizing and constructing the hospital center at Toul. His work in this showed a force, initiative and character that contributed in an unusual way to the ability of the medical department to care for the sick and wounded of the American expeditionary forces."

Col. Maddux was married May 26, 1910, at Charlottesville, Va., to Katherine Roy Oliver, and has a son and namesake, Henry Cabell Maddux, jr. Col. Maddux belongs to the Phi Gamma Delta and Nu Sigma Nu fraternities, the Illinois Athletic club of Chicago, and the Army and Navy, Racquet and Congressional clubs of Washington, D. C.

Many Apartments.

"If it's an apartment, we have it," is the slogan of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory in discussing the renting of apartments.

In keeping with the thorough manner in which all business details are handled by this firm, it has obtained apartments in every section of the city.

"We are prepared to offer a prospective renter any size or any priced apartment he may seek," said Maj. C. Nixon, head of the rental department. "We have all styles and classes of apartments, from those in the cheaper class up to some of the finest in Washington.

Gentlemen:

I wish to express my appreciation of the service rendered by your firm and for the highly gratifying and satisfactory manner in which you handled my housing problem in Washington.

Assigned to duty at the marine barracks from the Philippine Islands, I was a comparative stranger in the city and real estate values a mystery to me. I was immediately interviewed by numerous real estate men, including representatives of several reputable realtors, and was shown various properties in different sections of the city.

Due to the reputation of your firm as paying special attention to the requirements of Service people, I also got in touch with your office, where I was turned over to your Mr. Heyl, who undertook to "solve my problem of suitable quarters."

The search that ensued was a long and arduous one in the most disagreeable part of the year, but throughout Mr. Heyl showed unusual care and persistence in his efforts to find a home which would meet all my requirements. I was especially impressed by his efforts to show me the wide choice of houses and the fact that he did not confine his efforts only to properties directly controlled by your firm, and it was directly due to this wide knowledge of real estate values and his sympathetic understanding of our needs that we were finally able to locate the satisfactory and suitable home that we now have.

Our relations with Mr. Heyl individually and your firm generally have been of the highest order of satisfaction. I am only too glad to recommend your organization to officers of the Services with entire confidence that they will be materially benefited in their relations with you as I have been.

Respectfully,
(Signed) THEO. E. COX.

Gentlemen:

The interest which you displayed in the disposal of my house at 3706 S Street N. W. is very gratifying. Particularly was I pleased with the enthusiasm and energy which was shown by Mrs. Dorothy Mills Gibson. I advised Mrs. Gibson of my desire to sell on Thursday evening. The Monday morning following she had sold the house. This is efficient selling, the equal of which I have yet to hear. Please be assured that I take pleasure in heartily recommending your firm to friends who are interested in either buying or selling real estate in Washington.

Very truly, yours,

Gentlemen:

I wish every officer ordered to Washington for duty could know of my experience in the matter of securing temporary and permanent quarters and the splendid service your firm rendered me.

Assigned to duty at Walter Reed Hospital, I reached Washington during the Easter holidays. The hotels were turning people away and I was up against it for a place to take my family until I remembered your slogan—"Service to the Services." I went immediately to your office, where I was taken in hand by your Mr. Gray, who not only (at considerable trouble, I suspect) fixed me up comfortably at your delightful apartment, "Tilden Hall," but located for me just the house I wanted and at a figure below what I thought it could be bought for and was ready to pay.

I repeat, if every officer ordered to Washington knew of your splendid facilities and your ability to meet the requirements of Service people they would come direct to you to solve their problems.

Yours very truly,

GARRETT PARK HOMES HAVE RADIO AND AUTO

Suburban Houses Offer Opportunity to Man of Moderate Income.

PLAN PROVES ATTRACTIVE

Perhaps the most uniquely developed community offered by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory is Garrett Park, located in Montgomery county, a short distance beyond the District line.

Realizing that people of limited incomes have the same aspirations as those with larger salaries, Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory decided to make dreams come true for at least a few people in this class, and Garrett Park was the answer.

It is possible to purchase a radio-equipped home, located on a fine lot, with plenty of shade trees, and with a one-car garage on the premises housing an automobile, and all for one down payment, such as must be made on any home purchased.

This plan of sale was evolved to meet the requirements of people who want both home and car and who do not find it convenient to purchase both at the same time. It gives the prospective buyer a chance to lump the whole thing into one down payment and one monthly payment as well, and that it has proven popular can be proved at any time by an attempt to purchase a home in Garrett Park. Practically all of them have been sold and the few left are in great demand.

"Garrett Park is the answer to the man of moderate means who wants to get his family away from the noise, dust and blare of the city," said J. R. Crutchfield, sales manager for Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory. "There are hundreds of people in every city who want to get outside the congested district. That holds true in Washington.

"At first there was some hesitation among prospective purchasers, many of whom did not possess automobiles. We solved that problem by including an auto with the house and the places have sold fast.

"Garrett Park is only a few minutes out by fast train service and the schedule is so arranged that the man who works in Washington can make proper connections in order to reach his employment at any of the standard opening times.

"The plan to include an automobile with every house on one down payment will be continued until the present few vacant homes are sold."

in a few minutes' walk, and located on a plot set aside.

Transportation facilities are the best, and there is no finer school in Maryland than the one in Edgemoor, which accommodates children of this section. Churches of virtually every faith are close. There is a community clubhouse, a gift of the firm, where the residents hold community meetings.

Started for Service Families.

Started as a community for service families, where the various officers could find a home of the type they desired at a price they could afford to pay, Battery Park fast developed into one of the Capital's leading suburbs, with civilians clamoring for homes and sites. It then was decided to enlarge the scope of the park and it is at least 50 per cent civilian. Persons who bought when the community first was thrown open to the public have benefited vastly through increased values. Development of Battery Park has added value to all real estate in the section.

The widening of Wisconsin avenue, the improved street car service to Battery Park and nearby sections and the bus service inaugurated by Leon Arnold have placed transportation facilities on a par with any around the Capital.

"The trend of increasing population is toward the northwest," said J. R. Crutchfield, sales manager, yesterday. "This, in a measure, explains the popularity of Battery Park and our neighboring community, Edgemoor. People are overflowing Washington and the overflow is headed northwest.

"Other communities founded since Battery Park was placed on the market," he said, "have flourished as a result of this section. I believe Montgomery county will have additional thousands of Greater Washingtonians in the future."

FUTURE OF CAPITAL BRIGHTEST IN NATION

Forget the fact that we have a few hot days in summer and a few cold ones in winter. The average will compare favorably with the climate of any city in the country.

We have mountains less than two hours away by fast electric train; we have salt-water bathing an hour and a half away by motor; we have everything that any other city can possibly have and hundreds of things that no other city can ever have.

That is why I believe that every resident of the city should carry on a campaign of propaganda to tell the outside world of Washington's advantages; should tell them that it is essentially a residential city and can never be a manufacturing center; that it has the widest streets, the finest trees, the greatest number of natural advantages of any city on earth and that their friends ought to come here to live.

The firm of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory believes in Washington. We have seen great developments and increased population every year since we have been in business. We believe that the million or more population is certain to come and we are preparing to do our part toward taking care of that increased population and to reap the rewards that will accrue to us through increased valuation of our holdings, caused by the advent of more people to the Capital.

COMMUNITY CLUB GIVEN BATTERY PARK CITIZENS

The Battery Park Community clubhouse which was officially presented to the citizens of that community yesterday represents the fulfillment of an ideal conceived by Maj. H. C. Maddux, president of the firm of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, when he first purchased the tract on which Battery Park now stands. When the land was subdivided into home sites and before any part had been sold, Maj. Maddux dedicated and set aside the present clubhouse grounds for the erection of a community clubhouse.

The clubhouse and grounds representing an approximate value of $25,000 were officially turned over to the citizens yesterday as a token of the esteem in which the major holds the people who backed and believed in his ideals by purchasing homes in Battery Park.

SUBURBS IN MARYLAND HAVE MODERN SERVICES

Battery Park and Edgemoor Offer City Conveniences in Location Lately Rural.

DEVELOPMENT IS RAPID

Battery Park and Edgemoor are outstanding examples of the results obtained by supplying modern city conveniences to an erstwhile rural neighborhood.

Montgomery county, in which these communities are located, has a water and sewer service equal to that of any city and at lower rates than obtain in either Washington or Baltimore. Gas and electrical facilities are equal in every respect to those of the cities, and Battery Park has recently made arrangements to instal a street lighting system at an early date.

In years gone by, people had the same desire to get away from the heart of the city that obtains today, but the lack of adequate transportation facilities and the certain knowledge that removal to the suburbs would entail the loss of city conveniences kept them close to the center of the city and caused a congestion which was to say the least not beneficial.

All this has been changed. Today in Edgemoor and Battery Park, the residents enjoy two mail deliveries daily, fast transportation to the heart of the city, markets and chain stores that satisfy all the housekeeping needs and every other convenience, in fact, that the city dweller has, added to a quiet home-like atmosphere that makes these communities infinitely superior to the crowded city as a home site.

The result of all this is seen in the rapidity with which that whole end of the county is building. It is safe to predict that within a very few years the whole section will be regarded as an integral part of Washington proper and further out communities will in turn have become the suburbs.

Your Empty House

will not be empty long if you list it in the houses for rent columns of The Post. And you will find double measure of satisfaction if you are seeking tenants of a desirableness not to be questioned.

"Manucure" Admitted To French Language

Paris, Sept. 18 (By A. P.).—The French academy has decided to admit the word, "manucure" into the French language.

The word, though in general use, in that form, has not hitherto reached dictionary rank, and the six "immortals" present at the meeting (Marshal Joffre was one) spent some time discussing whether the English form "manicure" (which is also in use in France) should be adopted, but eventually agreed on "manucure" as being nearer the Latin original.

The word "manipulate" is to come up for discussion soon.

REAL ESTATE FIRM OFFERS SMALL FARM TRACTS TO BUYERS

Washington Gardens Gives Opportunity to Truck or Chicken Raiser.

COMMUNITY IS LOCATED NEAR CENTRAL MARKETS

8,400 Acres Near Waldorf, Md., Has 8 Miles Frontier on Boulevard Roads.

Seeking to satisfy the needs of every class of people, the members of the firm of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, under the title of "Washington Gardens, Inc.," have acquired a tract of approximately 8,400 acres adjoining Waldorf, in the heart of Charles county, Md., and proposes to offer it in small farms, suitable for truck or chicken farming.

The property, which contains approximately 13 square miles, has a boulevard frontage of 8 miles and is ideally situated in regard to markets, having Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia to draw from.

The land was originally selected for the purpose of establishing a farm colony for employes of the Panama canal, who were compelled to seek new fields. After carefully inspecting places in all parts of the country the commission making the survey decided unanimously upon this tract. Dissension among the backers of the movement resulted finally in the abandonment of the project and the land was placed back on the market, being bought by the "Four M's."

Small Farms Offered.

The transportation facilities are excellent. The bulk of the property lies between two fine macadamized highways, there is a branch railroad running through the property and a bus line to Washington.

Large bodies of water insure an equable climate and the land is adequately drained by the Patuxent and Potomac rivers.

With the large Eastern markets to serve, the promoters of the plan for small farms on this tract believe that they will have no difficulty in obtaining the proper sort of purchasers for an ideal farm community.

"We feel that there are many people who want a small farm to engage their activities, either in whole or part," said Col. James A. Moss, vice president of Washington Gardens, Inc., yesterday, "and we believe that in this tract we have the best that can possibly be offered to them."

The proposed George Washington-Wakefield Memorial bridge, across the Potomac from Pope's creek on the Maryland side, to Dahlgren on the Virginia side, and which will cost $5,000,000, and for the construction of which the House has passed a bill, will add greatly to the transportation facilities and value of Washington Gardens. The construction of this bridge will offer a new route to the South through Washington Gardens.

DEAN INGE CRITICAL IN HIS LATEST BOOK

London, Sept. 18 (By A. P.). "England," a new book to be published by Dean Inge, is not likely, from what one hears of its theme, to cause the public to drop the "gloomy" epithet as applied to the distinguished preacher of St. Paul's cathedral.

When Dean Inge was in New York last summer reporters seized on the phrase "The Gloomy Dean," and worked it overtime, much to the dean's irritation. Perhaps he is getting back at them in the book, for while he views with alarm nearly all present tendencies in England, which he says is "Finished," he is even more severe with America and Americans. The French also fare badly in his criticism.

Edgemoor and Battery Park

What Some of the Residents Say—

Edgemoor

By MRS. HARRY S. NEW

Almost by accident we stumbled on Edgemoor while looking around for a home in the spring, and we were fortunate enough to secure a place there for the summer months.

The charm of the great trees, beautiful open spaces and pleasant surroundings proved irresistible. We are residents of Indiana and never expect to change the residence, but we determined to acquire a home in this delightful colony for our use while in Washington.

Battery Park

By R. B. LAWRENCE.

I chose Washington above other cities to establish a home, educate my children and enjoy the balance of my days, as I believe the National Capital gives more than any other city in America.

After weeks of investigating present and future real estate values, considering environment, &c., I located in Battery Park because to me it is the ideal section of my ideal city.

After taking up my residence here I have encountered no disappointments—my neighbors are intellectual, friendly, worthwhile; the educational facilities of the best; the climate invigorating and conducive to outdoor life; the distance from the city just right, and my dealings with Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory most satisfactory.

Edgemoor

By MRS. FREDERIC A. PARKHURST.

When we came to Washington from Boston about three years ago we were confronted with the problem of selecting a permanent home. We decided to make a thorough search through all the best residential sections and carefully weigh all considerations before making a choice.

Edgemoor at once appeal to me. I liked the surroundings, the beautiful landscaping, sweeping lawns and magnificent residences.

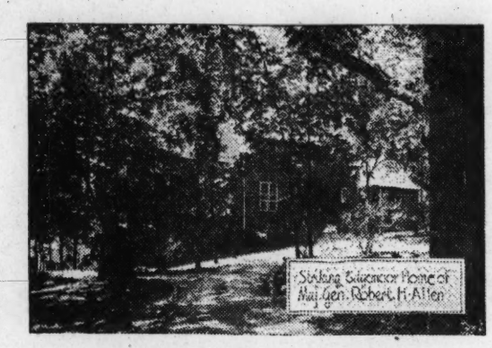
I continued my search elsewhere, but the appeal of Edgemoor soon lured me back. After going through all the best sections, I was convinced that no place I had seen either in the city or suburbs could compare with Edgemoor.

Battery Park

By COL. CHARLES A. HEDEKIN

Almost every family that is compelled through business reasons to make frequent changes in its place of abode, looks forward with eagerness to the time when it can establish itself in a permanent home. Vaguely the outlines of such a home are held in mind; it must be within easy reach of shops and theaters; the favorite country club must not be too far away; there must be lawns and flowers without sacrifice of city utilities; maybe one wants space for a vegetable garden and a few fruit trees; above all, one must realize that the place will some day pass into other hands, so there must be a probability of appreciation in value.

When I set out three years ago to look for a home, I could find but one place that met all these requirements and yet was within modest price limits. That place was Battery Park.



Why We Like Edgemoor

By MAJOR GENERAL ROBERT H. ALLEN
Chief of Infantry

Because it is an ideal place for a suburban home, having all the beauties of the country together with the conveniences of the city. Because of its accessibility to the city by routes that are free from traffic congestion, that lead through beautiful suburbs, and over which it is a pleasure to motor, making the short daily trip a pleasant recreation instead of an arduous daily routine.

And because of the many splendid people who live at Edgemoor—neighbors in the best sense of that fine old English word.

Battery Park

By COL. E. H. HARTNETT

When you come to Battery Park you are sure of good neighbors. It is an ideal place in which to bring up children. There are no objectionable features here.

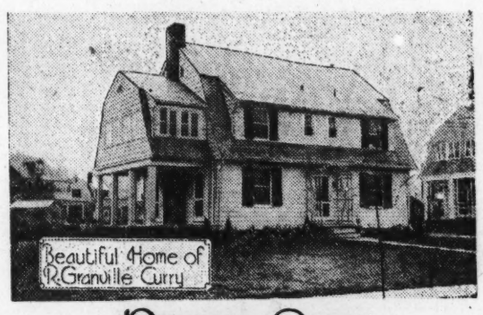
My home in Battery Park was built for me by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory. I have occupied it for the last two years and it has proven satisfactory in every way. The price was considerably less than the same house in an equally good neighborhood would have cost.

Edgemoor

By EZRA GOULD

I am more convinced than ever that my move to buy in Edgemoor was a fortunate one. Since my purchase many of Washington's successful business men and others have purchased homes and ground in this beautiful suburb.

Washington is growing, so are its suburbs, and like all great developments in the large cities they go northwestward. Hence, Edgemoor.



Battery Park

By R. GRANVILLE CURRY

Battery Park is far enough from Washington and sufficiently elevated to have the advantage of clean air, cool summers and large open spaces for children to play. It is easily reached by excellent roads and is served by a street car line upon which I have relied to a large extent. Nearby is a new school with a complete staff of teachers. Above all, however, are the delightful and charming people living in Battery Park.

Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, Inc., has impressed me with its spirit of fair dealing and its purpose to apply high standards in constructing its houses and choosing purchasers to live in them, to the end that Battery Park may be not only a profitable undertaking to the company, but a "thing of beauty" and "a joy forever" to intelligent and discriminating home-owners.

Edgemoor

By F. ELIOT MIDDLETON

Edgemoor has fulfilled my desire for a home with plenty of ground, flowers, shrubbery and trees, where it is possible to enjoy freedom from city noises and disadvantages without sacrificing the conveniences of urban proximity.

With a modern, well-planned and well-equipped public school recently added to its many other attractions, Edgemoor's appeal to those seeking the ideal place for a home is not easy to resist.

Battery Park

By PROFESSOR DAVID LUMSDEN

Why did I decide to build and establish my home in Battery Park? This question has been frequently asked by my friends.

In the first place Battery Park offered country life with city privileges. Its ready accessibility via good roads by auto or trolley to the City of Washington. Its situation about 400 feet above sea level makes it extremely desirable from a health standpoint. Its nice neighbors and its live Garden Club and Citizens Association. Its attractive and comfortable individual homes with liberal gardens and ribbons of roses leading to its homes. Its close proximity to beautiful Edgemoor, where giant trees and a natural flora are in evidence. Its wealth of bird neighbors the year around which are a joy to old and young alike.

Under such an environment, do you wonder why a nature lover made his home in charming Battery Park?

Edgemoor

By MRS. C. W. HAYES.

Edgemoor tempted me many years before I finally succumbed to its unique advantages—real woods, real fields and brooks for the children and grown people who love them, and all the ease of living that a city can give.

Battery Park

By COL. JOSEPH I. McMULLEN.

I purchased a lot in Battery Park in October of 1923, at a time when the final survey had not yet been completed, and built a home there last summer.

The considerations which led me to purchase in Battery Park were largely the desire to get away from the disagreeable features of city life and at the same time have all the advantages.

One of my hobbies is gardening, and at Battery Park I am able to go as far as I like.

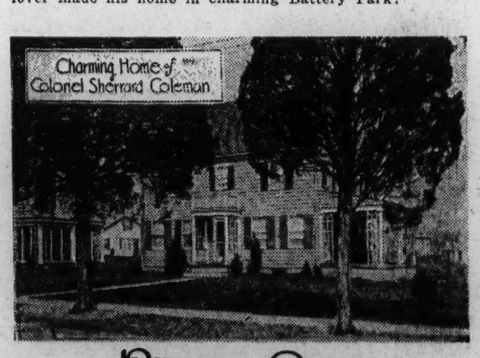
Edgemoor

By CHARLES S. ROBB

Picture to yourself your ideal of what a suburban community should be. Then visit Edgemoor and you will find that ideal. That is the way we of Edgemoor view the country club district where we've made our homes.

In EDGEMOOR, we like to point out to friends in the city that we have plenty of fresh air for growing bodies and clean environment for growing minds in a completely developed community, combining the best features of the city and suburbs.

We take pride in saying that Edgemoor has set a high standard for suburban communities.



Battery Park

By COLONEL SHERRARD COLEMAN

I moved from Washington to Battery Park to get fresh air for my children and to be free from the constant menace of auto traffic and the noise of a great city. The Maddux, Marshall Company built us a house after our own plans—to suit our purse and convenience. We have found Battery Park a most delightful place to live—in the quiet of the restricted Country Club district of Northwest Washington with all the advantages of a modern and up-to-date city, including good schools, stores and transportation facilities within half an hour's ride of the White House.

To leave behind you the fuss and worries of the office and go to a real home, where you can dig and plant your own trees and flowers or sit out on your own porch, with no mosquitoes to bother you and listen to the mocking bird and the chirp of the katydid—among good neighbors—lends a charm to life that I have been unable to find in any other part of the country.

Edgemoor

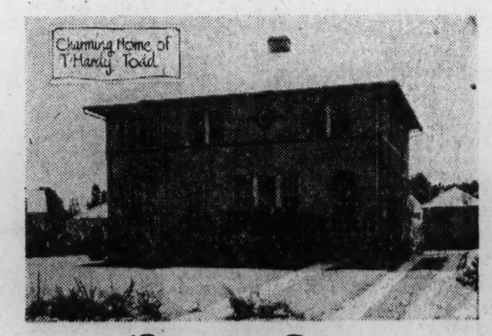
By ROBERT F. FLEMING

Flowers and children seem to thrive in Edgemoor better than in any other community I have seen around Washington. That is why I elected to make a home for my family in such an ideal environment.

We have plenty of "elbow room" in Edgemoor. When this neighborhood was plotted, twelve years ago, the developers had vision; they placed restrictions on types of buildings; they insured future residents against encroachment. With the District of Columbia becoming more congested each year this is an important fact for a man with a family to consider.

In Edgemoor building lines and the general arrangement are such that we are assured of a permanently restricted community. And we are proud of the fact that it is a COMMUNITY and NOT a subdivision.

When we leave the city limits behind us, with its clanging electric cars, echoing noises and traffic congestion, we drive into a peaceful, healthful community entirely removed from the turmoil of the metropolis.



Battery Park

By T. HARDY TODD

I was one of the earliest purchasers in Battery Park. I first viewed it as a vacant field. I was, of course, duly apprised of the contemplated improvements and the marvelous development that was to take place. I was asked to vision the winding concrete streets, the attractive houses, the parkings lined with trees and interspersed with roses, the community field and clubhouse for a community center.

Frankly, I discounted a great deal of this as being merely "selling talk." Certainly as to many of these things the Maddux-Marshall Company was under no legal obligation to perform. However, I feel that it is only fair to the firm to say that in less than two years I have lived here the Company's entire program has been carried out—every promise fulfilled.

A Custom Victory in a Custom Victoria

Another triumph of One-Profit facilities

Equipped with four-wheel brakes, two-beam acorn headlights, and a ventilating windshield (exclusively Studebaker) which insures fresh air without drafts or moisture. Powered with the mighty Studebaker L-head motor, most powerful in any car of its size and weight—noted for its smooth, vibrationless performance which others are now striving to emulate. The Worsted-tex Suit

A Custom-Tailor Cloth in a Ready-to-Wear Suit

WORSTED-TEX is an entirely new cloth. It is similar to the goods you see at a fine custom tailor's. Now used for the first time in a moderate priced suit.

Worsted-tex keeps its shape like the old-fashioned worsted. But it drapes and feels like a soft imported fabric

The Worsted-tex suit is guaranteed to wear as well as the best suit you can buy at any price or your dealer will replace it.

It is made with one pair of trousers only. The wearing quality of the cloth makes an extra pair unnecessary.

Worsted-tex is shown in a variety of rich colors, mixtures and patterns that suit the taste of every well-dressed man. Made 2 button or 3 button, single-breasted or double-breasted.

If the Worsted-tex label is not in the suit, it is positively not made of genuine, guaranteed Worsted-tex cloth.

Price $40

The Knit-tex Coat

The Knit-tex Coat is Guaranteed for 3 years

THE Knit-tex Coat is different from any topcoat you have ever worn. Light as a feather, warm as toast, soft as velvet, never wrinkles and can be worn ten months in the year.

Knit-tex is knitted but you wouldn't know it. It looks like a fine, imported fabric. The yoke and sleeve lining are of Skinner's satin.

In every city and town in the United States a clothing store with this Knit-tex photograph in its window carries Knit-tex in new shades of light and medium grey, oxford, brown, tan, polo, blue-grey, sage, beige, mode and heather mixtures.

If some one shows you a coat without the Knit-tex label and claims the material is like Knit-tex—beware!

If the Knit-tex label is not in the coat it is positively not made of genuine, guaranteed Knit-tex cloth.
